(MARCH 30) UPI - A planned meeting between Nelson Mandela and a rival black leader has fallen through, dimming hopes for calming the situation in South Africa's Natal province.

It was earlier reported that Mandela and Zulu chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi would meet on Monday in a peace rally aimed at ending the violence. But Mandela's aides said today that he would NOT appear publicly with Buthelezi.

Three days of clashes between followers of Mandela and Buthelezi have left at least 38 people dead in Natal province.

That violence prompted a reaction today from South Africa's President Frederik de Klerk. He threatened to use the ''full weight'' of the government's power to restore law and order.

De Klerk says there is- quote- ''NO room for violence from any quarter in determining the future of South Africa.''

The Bush administration lobbied successfully today for Timothy Ryan, who won the Senate Banking Committee's endorsement to regulate the savings and loan industry.

The committee's 11-10 vote recommending confirmation was an upset victory for President Bush. Committee Chairman Donald Riegle had said Ryan would be defeated, and the administration had said it was ready to look for a new head for the Office of Thrift Supervision.

Ryan is a former lawyer for the Labor Department. Riegle called him ''woefully short of basic qualifications'' to oversee thrifts. Ryan lacks experience in the savings and loan industry, which has been brought to its knees by scandal and poor investments.

The full Senate is likely to consider Ryan's nomination next week.

(MARCH 30) UPI - President Bush today said he sent word to Soviet President Gorbachev that the United States firmly supports ''self-determination'' for rebellious Lithuania.

Bush said he wrote to Gorbachev in order to stay ''in touch'' and to keep the Soviet leader aware of U-S views.

Bush has been criticized for failing to speak out forcefully on Lithuania's declaration of independence, which Gorbachev has declared meaningless.

The president said in Washington that Gorbachev has NOT yet responded to his message.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says Bush also emphasized that the conflict between Moscow and Lithuania must be resolved peacefully.

The president's message was sent yesterday through diplomatic channels.

Fitzwater told reporters yesterday that Bush had NOT contacted Gorbachev about Lithuania because it was ''NOT the time.''

Los Angeles police say a so-called ''fan'' of actress Sharon Gless barricaded herself in a home owned by the actress for nearly seven hours today before surrendering.

Gless is best known for playing Detective Chris Cagney on the police drama

''Cagney and Lacey.'' She was NOT in the house at the time.

Police identified the intruder as 30-year-old Joni Pen.

Police say Gless obtained a restraining order against Pen in November 1988. The court order was intended to keep Pen from watching and threatening Gless and blocking her movements in public.

Police say the woman had been corresponding with Gless for a long time and would NOT leave Gless alone.

The chairman of the East German Social-Democratic Party says he will take back the party leadership post that he quit recently amid accusations he was a former secret police informer. Ibrahim Boehme said in East Berlin that there is NO evidence against him.

Americans United for Separation of Church and State say they will file suit against a child-care bill just passed by the House... unless provisions allowing federal tax dollars for day-care centers teaching religion are dropped.

Nepal's foreign minister resigned today just hours after police fired on pro-democracy demonstrators outside the capital, killing two and wounding 10. An aide says the foreign minister quit because the hard-line government was NOT negotiating with the opposition to de-fuse the mounting violence.

(MARCH 30) UPI - A grand jury in New York this afternoon indicted Julio Gonzalez on 174 counts of murder for the arson of the Happy Land Social Club, in which 87 people died. The Cuban immigrant is accused of the worst mass slaying in U-S history. A prosecutor said if the minimum sentences were added up, it would come to life plus two-thousand years. Gonzalez's lawyer... Richard Berne... said the case would ''test'' the fairness of the American justice system.

Defense attorneys in the Iran-Contra trial of John Poindexter today said the retired rear admiral only followed the orders of President Reagan. Attorney Richard Beckler said Poindexter had only limited control over the men who carried out the plan, such as Oliver North. In closing arguments in Washington, Beckler said North never told Poindexter about many of the things he was doing. Poindexter is accused of obstructing a congressional investigation.

The Supreme Court today committed itself to rule on the constitutionality of the anti-flag desecration law before its summer recess. The Court will consider the case on an emergency basis. The ruling will come in plenty of time to be an issue in fall congressional elections. Just last June, the court ruled 5-4 that burning the flag as a political protest is protected by the constitution as free speech. That prompted passage of the flag protection law.

West Coast labor leader Harry Bridges died today in San Francisco. Bridges was founder of the International Longshoreman's and Warehouseman's Union. Bridges led militant dock workers during the great maritime strikes of 1934 and 1936-37. He served as the union's first and only president for 40 years until retiring in 1977. When Bridges stepped down, he was praised by unionists, shippers and government officials alike.

A Congressional study group says the oil industry is under-prepared to clean up major oil spills. Anti-apartheid leader Nelson Mandela has canceled a Monday meeting with his rival Zulu chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi. (MARCH 30) UPI - Security officials in Lebanon say at least 30 people are dead and 40 wounded after a day of intra-Christian fighting. Political sources say General Samir Geagea launched the attacks this morning to further weaken the position of General Michel Aoun . Aoun is under political pressure to recognize the government of Syrian-backed Christian President Elias Hrawi.

Los Angeles police say a misguided ''fan'' of Actress Sharon Gless used a semi-automatic rifle to keep police at bay for seven hours this morning. 30-year-old Joni Pen apparently set off a burglar alarm at a home described as a secondary residence for Gless... who plays Detective Chris Cagney on ''Cagney and Lacey.'' Gless was NOT home at the time. Gless has since re-emphasized her support for gun control.

(MARCH 30) UPI - The latest news details and developments... from across the nation and around the world... from the wires of United Press International.

Idaho Governor Cecil Andrus today vetoed what would have been the most far-reaching anti-abortion law in the 50 states.

Despite his consistent anti-abortion record... the Democrat said the bill was ''bad legislation'' that would have made it difficult to get abortions in cases of rape and incest.

Andrus says he was NOT influenced by threats of a potato boycott from national abortion-rights groups if he signed the bill. He decried what he called ''the outside pressure... outside influence and threats'' that have been heaped upon the state as the issue heated up.

Andrus says the bill itself was drawn up by ''outsiders'' who he felt went too far in trying to do away with abortion.

The National Right to Life Committee... which helped draft the measure... says the bill could have been used by the Supreme Court to overturn the Roe versus Wade decision that legalized abortion.

President Bush says he sent a message to Soviet President Gorbachev yesterday to make it known the United States firmly supports ''self-determination'' for Lithuania.

Bush says he sent the letter yesterday to make sure U-S views were NOT misinterpreted through a lack of communication.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says Bush has NOT contacted Gorbachev directly since the Lithuania crisis began.

Fitzwater says Bush decided to send the message yesterday because of a number of factors... including an unannounced conversation with Massachusetts Senator Edward Kennedy, who just returned from Moscow.

Kennedy said he found Gorbachev under a lot of pressure from Kremlin hardliners to crack down on Lithuania.

In a related development... the Pentagon has announced that Army Chief of Staff General Carl Vuono had postponed indefinitely a scheduled visit to the Soviet Union because of the tense situation between Moscow and Lithuania.

(MARCH 30) UPI - Estonia's parliament today chose a more cautious path to independence than neighboring Lithuania.

The non-communist Parliament in Tallin voted for a transition to independence. The declaration seeks to avoid a the direct challenge to the Soviet Union that Lithuania made by declaring independence March 11th.

One Lithuanian People's Deputy on hand said the Estonians have learned from Lithuania's ''bitter experience.''

But the document did state flatly that Estonia's Supreme Soviet does NOT recognize the authority of Moscow.

The document was approved unanimously with three abstentions.

Earlier, Estonia's entire communist government resigned as a prelude to the formation of a coalition Cabinet that is to lead the Baltic republic to independence.

Ethnic Russian deputies had wanted the declaration submitted to the republic's voters in a referendum.

A New York grand jury today indicted a Cuban army deserter on 174 counts of second-degree murder.

Julio Gonzalez is accused of killing 87 people by setting fire to the Happy Land social club in an attempt to kill his girlfriend... who had left him.

The indictment also charged Gonzalez with two counts of arson, one count of attempted murder and one count of assault for the club's D-J, who was burned on 50 percent of his body.

Gonzalez waived his right to testify before the 23-member grand jury... which has been deliberating the case since Monday.

Before the indictment was announced... Gonzalez appeared briefly in court wearing a bright yellow shirt and a grey suit... staring into space as lawyers argued about a teary videotaped confession he made after his arrest Sunday afternoon.

His lawyer plans to have him examined by a psychiatrist... hinting that he could use the results as ''one potential avenue of defense.''

Wakes and funerals are being held for the victims in New York and in Latin America.

(MARCH 30) UPI - Greyhound bus officials have backed out of contracts talks they were supposed to hold with union negotiators in Tucson, Arizona Monday.

Company officials say they're backing out because of two newly reported incidents of violence in the month-old strike by 93-hundred workers.

But union officials say the company is using a ''smear campaign'' against the union and Greyhound employees.

Union President Edward Strait says the violent incidents in the strike are what he calls ''60 reported incidents of violence perpetrated by unsafe and ill-trained replacement drivers against all people on the picket lines.''

The two incidents of violence the company referred to were a bomb threat at a Chicago facility this morning and a shot fired at a Greyhound bus in Oklahoma today.

The company says if there are NO new reports of violence in the next nine days... the Greyhound bargaining team will meet with union negotiators in Tucson on April 9th.

Convicted killer Robert Alton Harris has won time in his bid to avoid execution in California.

Harris had been scheduled to die Tuesday in the gas chamber at San Quentin prison in what would have been the first execution in California in 23 years.

A federal appeals judge today indefinitely stayed the execution to let lawyers present evidence that Harris deserves a new penalty hearing because of his mental disorders.

Judge John Noonan said Harris is entitled to a full hearing before a federal judge in San Diego. Noonan chastised prosecutors for saying the case has taken 12 years.

The state is expected to challenge the stay request before the U-S Supreme Court. However, the high court traditionally is reluctant to block such hearings.

The 37-year-old Harris was sentenced to die for the 1978 murders of two teen-age boys in San Diego.

(MARCH 30) UPI - Prosecutors today said John Poindexter tried to ''rewrite history'' by destroying Iran-Contra documents... but defense lawyers said Poindexter was merely following the orders of President Reagan.

In closing arguments in Washington, prosecutor Dan Webb said Poindexter and Oliver North tried to protect themselves and Reagan. Webb said they concealed facts from Congress, lied to Congress and went on a ''rampage'' of document destruction.

Webb alternated between a booming voice and a whisper to tell the jury Poindexter ran a cover-up.

But defense lawyer Richard Beckler portrayed Poindexter as a man doing his best to direct a secret operation ordered by Reagan. He blamed retired lieutenant colonel North and Robert McFarlane for much of the cover-up. McFarlane was Poindexter's predecessor as Reagan's national security adviser.

Poindexter is accused of five felony counts of lying to Congress, obstructing its investigation and destroying documents.

The jury will receive instructions Monday and begin deliberations.

Harry Bridges... the man some say was the driving force of the West Coast labor movement... died of emphysema today at home in San Francisco. He was 88.

Bridges was from Australia, but took to the sea as a teen-ager and jumped ship in San Francisco.

His union went on strike in 1934, and two union members were killed in a battle with police. A general strike followed. Bridges emerged as the waterfront labor king.

In 1937 he founded the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, and became its president for the next 40 years.

In the 1940's, the federal government ordered Bridges deported for his alleged past membership in the Communist Party, but the Supreme Court ruled in his favor.

When Bridges stepped down, he was praised by unionists, shippers and government officials as a labor statesman and a savior of the American shipping industry.

West Coast union members have stopped work until tomorrow in honor of Bridges.

Andrus said he was NOT swayed by a threatened boycott of Idaho potatoes by supporters of legal abortion.

A New York grand jury indicted a Cuban army deserter on 174 counts of murder today. A federal judge in San Francisco today indefinitely put off the execution of convicted killer Robert Alton Harris. The judge ruled Harris deserves a full appeal hearing. PARIS (MARCH 31) - Many drivers never really regarded it as a proper car but anyone who has owned a ''Deux Chevaux'' from French car maker Citroen will never forget the eccentric road manners and contented whirr of its tiny engine.

For millions of motorists the Citroen 2 Cv, as it was designated by the Paris factory, was a car with character. Along with Brigitte Bardot and Gauloises cigarettes, it symbolized the quintessence of French lifestyle.

In Britain and West Germany the car ironically became a ''status symbol'' for students and others who scorned the cult of the car. The name ''Deux Chevaux'' came from the French for two horsepower rating of the pioneer models.

Now Citroen have announced that production - only 85 units a day are being built at present - is to be halted. French media has termed it the end of an era.

''A car which can transport two people and 50 kilos of potatoes at a speed of 60 kilometers an hour and consume only three litres of fuel every 100 kilometers'' - that was the brief given to Citroen's engineers.

The result was a corrugated tin box on wheels with only a single headlamp to light its way and a crank handle instead of the usual starter motor. Its engine boasted only 375 cubic centimeters.

BERLIN (MARCH 31) - East German experts on the committee preparing for German monetary union were not consulted on the Bundesbank's reported decision to use a general conversion rate of Ostmarks to one Deutsche mark the East German news agency ADN said on Saturday.

The agency said the experts thought East Germany should "categorically reject" any such decision, which would be "in flagrant contradiction" to assurances of West Germany Chancellor Helmut Kohl and other government members in Bonn who promised a one-for-one exchange rate during the recent East German political campaign.

The report said East German monetary experts were annoyed that the confidential nature of the negotiations between the two Germanies on monetary union had been violated, saying that the report of Friday's decision by the Bundesbank (the West German central bank) was "giving rise to insecurity and confusion in the East German population".

Frankfurter Rundschau newspaper said in Saturday's edition that the Bundesbank had decided on a general two-for-one exchange rate in monetary union, with an exception for personal savings of up to 2,000 Ostmarks per person, to which a one-for-one rate would be applied.

The deputy chairman of the East German Social Democratic Party (SPD), Markus Meckel, called the Bonn coalition's attitude "electioneering cheating", saying his party would insist for "a one-for-one rate, plus a system of social guarantees".

Meanwhile, West German "Greens" rejected the two-for-one exchange rate on Saturday at a special congress they were holding in Hagen (northern West Germany). They spoke of "blackmail" against East Germany, and also of "electioneering cheating" in a resolution adopted on Saturday.

NEW DELHI (MARCH 31) - A regional party in northern India's Kashmir state announced Saturday that it had formed an army to "liberate Pakistan-occupied Kashmir" and claimed it had the backing of half a million ex-soldiers.

Bhim Singh, leader of the Panthers Party, a minor pro-Hindu group with a handful of supporters, said his Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Army had the "singular goal" of taking control of the part of Kashmir held by Pakistan.

Mr. Singh said over 500,000 ex-members of the Indian security forces had extended active support to his army, though only about 1,000 "Pakistan infiltrators" and a "small section of youth" had so far taken up arms.

"No slogans for liberation can be termed conclusive without including an action plan to liberate Pakistan-occupied Kashmir," he said.

The scenic Kashmir region is divided into Indian and Pakistani-controlled sectors. Mr. Singh, a Hindu, is opposed to a campaign led by Moslem militants for Indian Kashmir to break away from India.

More than 300 people have died in separatist-related violence in Kashmir this year.

CAPE TOWN (MARCH 31) - Whistle-blowing former police lieutenant Gregory Rockman, sacked from the police force last week, was arrested at dawn Saturday, according to news reports.

But the maverick ex-cop was released on bail in time to join a protest march by uniformed members of the Police and Prison Officers' Civil Rights Union (POPCRU), which he helped found in January.

Mr. Rockman's legal counsel, Essa Moosa, said the former policeman was arrested on charges of assault and attending an illegal gathering.

The charges arose out of "scuffles" during a sit-in protest by POPCRU members at Cape Town's Pollsmoor prison last Wednesday, Mr. Moosa said.

The union was formed primarily to press for better pay and conditions for black and Colored prison officers, but so far 41 POPCRU policemen -- including Mr. Rockman -- have been sacked for striking or conspiring to strike.

The then Lt. Rockman leapt to fame during last September's segregated general elections when he branded riot squad officers as "wild dogs" for the way they broke up an anti-election demonstration on his beat in Mitchell's Plain Colored township near here.

WARSAW (MARCH 31) - A unified Germany must give up all claims on foreign territory in its future constitution, Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki said here Saturday.

"This would be the only satisfactory provision from our point of view", Mr. Mazowiecki said in a meeting with a Solidarity trade union committee, attended by union leader Lech Walesa.

Mr. Mazowiecki said "a future constitution of a united Germany must include the statement that this nation does not have any territorial claims towards any other".

In their recent row with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl over the recognition of Poland's western border, Polish officials insisted that the two Germanies sign a border pact guaranteeing the border along the Oder and Neisse rivers before unification. The demand has been backed by Britain and France.

Mr. Mazowiecki said "it will not be easy ... to confirm our borders in a treaty". German unification "certainly is an internal matter of the Germans but also a security matter of neighbouring countries", he added.

The premier said that Poland "achieved some success" by insisting that it be admitted to certain stages of the two-plus-four talks setting the mechanisms of German unity.

The talks involve East and West Germany and the four World War II victors who have shared responsibility for Germany as a whole since 1945.

In another development, Mr. Mazowiecki proposed that Poland's first totally free general election be held early next year.

"Personally, I see parliamentary elections in spring next year", Mr. Mazowiecki, Poland's first non-communist premier in over 40 years, said. General elections would normally be due in 1993.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 31) - U.S. and Japanese negotiators resume talks here Monday on bilateral trade disputes in an atmosphere clouded by the threat of U.S. reprisals.

The coming round, scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, is part of a series of talks on structural impediments to bilateral trade, launched last year by the United States. It is to produce a preliminary report early next month in advance of an agreement around mid-year.

The tough-talking U.S. Trade Representative, Carla Hills, has recently stepped up her protests against Japan and three days before the new round of discussions, she chose to publish a report on global trade barriers in which Japan was called the biggest offender.

Japan, which accounted for nearly half of the 109 billion dollars trade deficit last year, topped the list of 35 countries and two regional blocs said to maintain the "most important" obstacles to U.S. exports and as a result facing possible U.S. retaliation.

The talks on structural impediments to U.S.-Japan trade have so far produced no breakthrough.

Last month in Tokyo, at the end of a previous meeting between the two sides, U.S. negotiators voiced frustration at the lack of progress with a Japanese team preoccupied by recently concluded elections.

Since then, there has been a series of high-level meetings to bring about movement in such areas as satellites, supercomputers and wood prodcuts.

Japan last week pledged to open its market to U.S. supercomputers.

Friday, U.S. officials announced that the two sides had agreed on a telecommunications accord which could open the Japanese market for products known as network channel terminating equipment, used by computers to talk over phone lines.

If trade barriers are not lifted by June 16, Japan faces possible retaliation under the so-called Super 301 provision of a 1988 U.S. trade law.

The retaliatory measures, favored by many U.S. lawmakers, can include tariffs that would double the price of selected imports from the offending country.

Japan is expected to come up with a set of proposals at the upcoming meeting, But U.S. officials are skeptical that the measures will fully satisfy Washington's demands.

The United States is pressing for the lifting of restrictions on the Japanese retail sector and public spending. U.S. officials point out that Japanese goods represent 10 percent of the American market, while U.S. goods account for only one per cent of the Japanese market.

Washington also hopes to see public spending in Japan rise to 10 percent of gross national product (GNP), up from the current 7.6 percent, to lift demand.

The Japanese meanwhile are urging the United States to become more competitive, to cut its huge budget deficit, boost saving, reduce consumption, revive investment and base business decisions on long-term economic strategy rather than on the pursuit of short-term profits.

Japanese public opinion could influence the outcome of next week's negotiations. A recent survey in Japan showed that some 47.4 percent of those interviewed supported U.S. demands. The country's management has also been more open to U.S. pressures in recent weeks.

LONDON (MARCH 31) - Britain's state-run electricity industry went private at the stroke of midnight Friday, after a furious three-day rush to draw up final documents for the conservative government's most ambitious privatization scheme.

Under the plan, the state-run electricity sector will be split up among 19 competing groups, 16 of which will be privatized by the spring of 1991.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's analysts insist that the plan will be twice as profitable as the recent privatization of the water industry -- predicting it will bring some 11 billion pounds (18 billion dollars) into the Treasury.

But it has also been the most technically complex and politically risky privatization since the conservatives came to power in 1979.

The Thatcher team has had to fight a built-in prejudice viewing electricity as a natural monopoly, with the added pressure of a serious political deadline.

The next general elections can be no later than the spring of 1992, and the electricity privatization must be completed -- with some success -- by then or it could be a serious embarrassment for the conservative's electoral campaign.

Most Britons remain against the plan and the Labor opposition has led a fierce fight to try to thwart it.

Opponents fear that it will raise prices -- water costs went up five per cent above inflation after privatization -- and fear security standards might drop.

The government has been forced into making concessions to keep the plan afloat, including a demand by the City (London's financial district) to keep the nuclear industry in state hands.

The government also agreed to the distributors' wish that competition be introduced gradually. Only the biggest users -- huge factories or office towers that consume more than one megawatt a year -- can choose their supplier in an initial period, running from 1991 to 1994, while private homeowners must wait eight years.

The plan cleared a last major regulatory hurdle Wednesday when the European Commission in Brussels authorized Britain to aid the nuclear power sector. Many aging nuclear plants are close to closure.

Under the Wednesday decision, the British government would be allowed to provide guarantees worth 2.5 billion pounds (four billion dollars) to cover the present and future costs of the nuclear sector.

The government will also be allowed to wipe off debts of 1.4 billion pounds (2.25 billion dollars) incurred by the nuclear industry in Scotland.

It was also authorized to impose a special tax on electricity consumers -- initially set at 10.5 per cent -- to subsidize the cost of nuclear-generated power and promote use of renewable energy sorces.

A team of 200 lawyers worked furiously from Wednesday to late Friday to draw up the final documents.

Concluded at midnight, these lay the groundwork for dividing the three nationalized companies -- the Central Electricity Generating Board (CEGB) for England and Wales and the two boards in the north and south of Scotland -- among the 19 new groups.

The next step will start in the autumn, when CEGB's 12 regional distributors sell their shares on the stock exchange -- an operation expected to bring in five billion pounds (8.3 billion dollars).

The first huge chunk of privatization is planned for February, 1991, with the establishment of two privately-owned producers, PowerGen and National Power.

To guard against sudden price rises, the distribution companies were authorized to limit increases to no more than 2.5 percent above inflation.

But Labor opponents insist the consumer will still lose out because of the new nuclear tax.

GALWAY, IRELAND (MARCH 31) - A Bundesbank recommendation that holdings of Ostmarks should be exchangeable at a rate of two Ostmarks for one Deutsche mark in German monetary union sparked a controversy in Chancellor Helmut Kohl's center-right government Saturday.

West German officials said here the only exception to a two-to-one exchange rate would be for personal savings of up to 2,000 Ostmarks per person, in which case the favorable one-for-one exchange rate would apply, according to the Bundesbank's recommendations.

The report appeared to confirm information on the exchange rate published in Saturday's edition of the West German Frankfurter Rundschau newspaper, which had been dismissed as premature by a government spokesman in Bonn.

The West German government wants monetary union to be achieved "by summer," but has not specified a date.

The recommendations to the West German government were decided by a board meeting of the central bank on Thursday, the officials here said.

They were speaking on the sidelines of an informal meeting of European Economic Community (EEC) finance ministers and central bank governors near this western Irish town.

The Bundesbank proposal drew criticism from Otto Graf Lambsdorff, chairman of the liberal Free Democratic Party, which is a member of the three-party coalition government, but was backed by Economics Minister Helmut Haussmann, also a liberal.

Mr. Lambsdorff said the two-to-one proposal was "unacceptable and a breach of promise" given to East Germans before the March 18 election.

In the East German election campaign, Mr. Kohl pledged that East German savings accounts would be changed at a one-to-one rate but the chancellor failed to set any limit.

Mr. Lambsdorff said in an interview with the weekly Welt am Sonntag to be published Sunday that a general one-to-one exchange rate would be "economically doubtful" and should be limited to savings accounts.

He also rejected a plan by Labor Minister Norbert Bluem, a member of Mr. Kohl's Christian Democratic Union (CDU) party, to raise East German pensions to the West German level.

The project would entail higher payments for East German pensioners while wages would be cut in half by a two-to-one exchange rate, he said.

Mr. Haussmann, on the contrary, hailed the Bundesbank recommendation as a "major basic decision on the way to monetary union.

The Bundesbank project also calls for compensations to make up for higher prices and additional allowances for East German workers.

Finance Minister Theo Waigel hailed as "remarkably positive" the Bundesbank proposals.

They include "very important social components" that meet the concerns of the East German population, he said in a West German television interview, noting that a family of four could obtain up to 8,000 Deutsche marks (4,733 dollars) at the favorable rate.

Mr. Waigel stressed it was impossible to have a one-for-one rate throughout the East German economy.

To do so would hike the labor costs and debt burdens of East German firms just when they need to increase productivity, he said.

Another factor, he said, was that former members of the Stasi, the now-disbanded East German secret police, had hoards of Ostmarks that they had acquired under Communist rule.

The Bundesbank recommendation is likely to be pivotal in the course to German monetary union being negotiated by the East and West German governments, analysts said.

The negotiations are confronted with the dilemma of what to do with a huge surplus of Ostmarks that East Germans, starved of consumer goods and the chance of foreign holidays, have stashed in bank accounts.

According to the EEC's executive Commission, some 160 billion Ostmarks will have to be absorbed by West Germany when the two countries unite.

PESHAWAR, PAKISTAN (MARCH 31) - The leader of a failed Kabul coup attempt General Shah Nawaz Tanai, said Saturday his struggle was continuing from a mobile base inside Afghanistan.

Gen. Tanai took part in a "wireless press conference" organized by the fundamentalist Afghan rebel leader Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, and reporters in this northwestern city bordering Afghanistan were allowed to ask questions by radio.

An official of Mr. Hekmatyar's Afghan News Agency, Nawab Salim, translated Gen. Tanai's comments from Pashtoo to English.

The general said that he was continuing to "lead forces from a mobile base inside Afghanistan."

He also lauded Mr. Hekmatyar's Hezb-i-Islami party and called on other Afghan resistance factions to make the "wise" choice and "take advantage of the situation" by joining him.

The interim resistance government based here recently rejected any alliance with Gen. Tanai, describing him as a "communist criminal" blamed for the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Afghans during the Soviet occupation.

Gen. Tanai again denied that he had taken refuge in Pakistan, but refused to say where exactly in the "Afghan interior" he was operating citing "security reasons."

Several Peshawar-based journalists said that Gen. Tanai has been in the hands of the Pakistani secret service since his failed coup bid against President Najibullah in early March.

The Hezb-i-Islami organized a press outing on March 15 in Logar province, south of Kabul, where a group of journalists met briefly with Gen. Tanai.

AMMAN (MARCH 31) - An unknown group reportedly linked to Palestinian activists in the occupied territories Saturday threatened Poland and the Soviet Union with reprisals over the emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel.

The Islamic Army Front for the Liberation of Palestine, in statements received by a Western news agency here, also threatened Britain and the United States over what it said were campaigns and threats against Iraq and Libya.

The group threatened to "blast Polish airline offices and Polish embassy buildings and assassinate diplomats wherever possible" in response to Warsaw's offer earlier this week to help Soviet Jews emigrate to Israel.

It also threatened Soviet embassies and diplomats "unless Warsaw and Moscow renounce their decisions to enable the emigration of Soviet Jews to Palestine."

Poland said Saturday it had stepped up security at its missions abroad after a Polish commercial attache, Bogdan Serkis, and his wife were wounded by gunmen in Syrian-controlled west Beirut the previous day.

Another unknown group, the Organization of Revolutionary Action-Arab Resistance Front, claimed responsibility for the shooting and threatened to strike again if Warsaw helped Soviet Jews travel to Israel.

Informed sources said the Islamic Army Front was close to the fundamentalist Palestinian militant group Hamas, based in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip.

The Front threatened to "reduce Britain to silence... unless London stops its campaign against Moslem Iraq," referring to British reprisals for the execution of journalist Farzad Bazoft and the revelation in London of an alleged plot to smuggle nuclear detonator parts to Iraq.

It also vowed to "destroy 173 U.S. firms operating in the Gulf and to assassinate U.S. figures, including diplomats, if the United States continues to threaten Moslem Libya notably over the Rabta pharmaceutical plant."

Washington and other Western countries maintain that Rabta, recently damaged by a fire, has been making chemical weapons. Tripoli denies the charges.

Arab states have voiced mounting concern over the expected arrival of up to 200,000 Soviet Jews in Israel this year, fearing that the immigrants may be settled in the occupied territories.

MONROVIA (MARCH 31) - Liberian authorities have denied claims by rebel leader Charles Taylor that Guinean troops were assisting Liberian soldiers fighting rebels in Northeastern Nimba County, state radio said here Saturday.

In an interview Friday with the British Broadcasting Corporation, Mr. Taylor said his forces had killed about 50 Guinean soldiers fighting alongside Liberian troops in troubled Karnplay. He asked Guinean President Lasana Conte to pull out his troops, saying developments in Nimba County were a "purely internal" matter.

The newspaper The Liberian quoted an official statement denying the claim and said government had no intention of bringing in foreign troops. It said Liberian soldiers were trained and well equiped to contain the situation in Nimba County.

Mr. Doe and Mr. Conte discussed ways of finding a solution for the return of over 85,000 Liberians who fled to Guinea in the wake of the December 24 rebel incursions in Nimba County during the Liberian president's one-day visit to Conakry Thursday, the statement said.

No troop assistance was discussed, the statement added.

CAIRO (MARCH 31) - Egypt Saturday expressed its opposition to any attempt to unilaterally change the status of east Jerusalem, saying the area remained an integral part of the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

The Foreign Ministry statement, carried by the official Middle East News Agency, came a day after U.S. Secretary of State James Baker assured a U.S. legislator that Jews had the right to live in east Jerusalem.

"East Jerusalem is an integral part of the Israeli-occupied West Bank," the Egyptian Foreign Ministry said, adding that "Palestinians have legitimate and historical rights there that cannot be ignored."

According to U.S. State Department officials, Mr. Baker's letter to Representative Mel Levine, a California Democrat, said "the final status of east Jerusalem is to be determined through negotiations."

"Clearly," he added, "Jews and others can live where they want -- East or West -- and the city must remain undivided."

Israel captured the Arab eastern sector of Jerusalem during the 1967 Middle East war. It had been part of the Jordanian-controlled West Bank.

The Israeli parliament in 1980 declared a united Jerusalem the country's "eternal" capital, an issue that enjoys widespread backing among Israeli Jews.

Mr. Baker's statement was also criticized by Palestinian leaders in the occupied territories.

Sari Nusseibeh, a professor at Bir-Zeit University on the West Bank, said "nothing can justify the Jews' right to settle in part of Palestine unless a specific peace accord is reached for this between Israelis and Palestinians."

Both Mr. Baker and President George Bush had earlier expressed opposition to new Jewish settlements in east Jerusalem.

KATHMANDU (MARCH 31) - Indian Foreign Secretary Shailendra Kumar Singh arrived here late Saturday to try to resolve a lingering trade and transit dispute between the neighboring countries, officials said.

Nepalese Foreign Secretary N.B. Shaha welcomed Mr. Singh, who led an 11-member Indian delegation including high-ranking trade officials for the four-day visit.

Indian and Nepalese officials were to begin talks Sunday to hammer out new trade and transit treaties to be signed later by their respective foreign ministers, the officials said.

Mr. Singh told reporters at the airport that he hoped the visit would contribute to better understanding between India and Nepal.

"Nepal and India have different identities but they have many things in common, like history, language and culture," Mr. Singh said.

India imposed a virtual trade blockade on this landlocked Himalayan kingdom a year ago after the two sides failed to agree on the terms on new trade and transit treaties. The blockade has caused severe shortages in Nepal.

Efforts to negotiate new trade and transit treaties have been set back by the resignation Friday of Nepalese Foreign Minister Shailendra Kumar Upadhyaya in connection with a movement for greater democracy in Nepal, political observers said.

GALWAY, IRELAND (MARCH 31) - European Economic Community finance ministers claimed they saw a softer, kinder Britain on Saturday that had somehow eased its hardline opposition to the Community's scheme for monetaryunion.

Not so, replied Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequor, John Major.

Irish Finance Minister Albert Reynolds, chairing an informal ministerial meeting at a secluded castle near this western Irish town, said "the British position has moved quite far."

It had helped yield "a considerable degree of agreement on the design of a future economic and monetary union" for the EEC, he said.

He added that he was now "more optimistic" that Britain would make an early move to take sterling into the exchange-rate mechanism of the European Monetary System (EMS).

"We believe it will be sooner rather than later," he said.

But immediately after Mr. Reynolds' press conference, Mr. Major said he had made absolutely no concessions.

Britain agreed that, under economic and monetary union, countries should be discouraged by surveillance measures from racking up excessive budget deficits, he said.

But he reiterated that Britain remained completely opposed to centralized control over excess spending, which it considered a breach of national sovereignty.

And he expressed astonishment that Mr. Reynolds saw an early commitment to taking sterling into the exchange-rate mechanism (ERM).

The issue was "not discussed," Mr. Major said, adding: "The position today remains exactly what it was."

The chancellor stressed that sterling would join the ERM, which irons out fluctuations between nine EEC currencies, when "external conditions", including the liberalization of capital movements, had been met, and the inflation gap between Britain and its EEC partners had been reduced.

"Any difference my colleagues have seen is one of tone rather than substance," he said.

Britain is scheduled to join the ERM under stage one of monetary union, which will be launched on July 1.

But no date has been set for the move, and the government has always said it will join "when the time is right."

SAN SALVADOR (MARCH 31) - President Alfredo Cristiani Saturday sought to lower expectations of next week's scheduled meeting between representatives of his government and leftist rebels in Geneva.

Speaking on his return from Caracas where he attended a regional economic meeting, Mr. Cristiani said the United Nations-sponsored parley scheduled for April 4 was aimed only at discussing the ground rules for a future dialogue between the two parties.

He added that his government would be represented by one or two representatives at the Geneva meeting, to be attended by U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Mr. Cristiani said discussion of substantive issues for a peaceful settlement would take place in April at a date and venue yet to be fixed.

He said Mr. Perez de Cuellar and the U.N. chief's personal representative in charge of the Salvadoran issue, Alvaro de Soto, would take an active part in the negotiations.

On prospects for lifting the state of emergency in effect since last November when rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation front (FMLN) launched a powerful nationwide offensive, the president said this could take place when the process of dialogue resumed.

El Salvador's 10-year-old civil war has claimed at least 70,000 lives.

In Caracas Friday, Mr. Cristiani offered a "general amnesty" for all FMLN guerrillas as an initial step for their return to El Salvador's democratic process.

JERUSALEM (MARCH 31) - Police discovered 30 kilograms (66 pounds) of pure heroin and smaller quantities of cocaine and opium in a container in the port of Haifa on Friday, police said here Saturday. Two people were arrested as they tried to open the container to take out the drugs.

The drugs, which included half a kilogram (one pound) of cocaine and a kilogram of opium, had an estimated street value of around 16 million dollars.

Police said the haul was one of the most important ever made in the country. It came after police tailed two Israeli nationals for two weeks, with the help of police from another, unnamed country.

Separately, Israeli radio said that two Israelis had been arrested on Friday in Copenhagen. One of them, described only as a 64-year-old man, was said to be a major international drug dealer.

It was not clear whether the two events were related.

Friday's haul was found in a container which was supposed to contain only fabrics and furniture.

Police said the ship in which the drugs were found had previously stopped in another Mediterranean port, which they did not identify. They said that the crew of the vessel had been unaware that the drugs were aboard.

(MARCH 31) UPI - Estonia may be following in Lithuania's footsteps but taking much lighter steps. NEW YORK (MARCH 31) UPI - A grand jury indicted a jilted lover on 174 counts of murder, accusing him of killing 87 people by torching the Happy Land social club in one of the deadliest arson fires in U.S. history.

Julio Gonzalez, a Cuban immigrant, was indicted Friday on 87 counts of second-degree murder for showing ''depraved indifference to human life'' and 87 counts of felony murder for arson.

Gonzalez, 36, enraged that his girlfriend had jilted him, allegedly set fire to the illegal social club with a dollar's worth of gasoline.

''If the all the minimum sentences were added up, it would be life and then 2,000 years,'' said Assistant District Attorney Eric Warner.

Gonzalez waived his right to testify before the 23-member panel and was not in the courtroom in the Bronx when the indictment was unsealed at 4:50 p.m. The state Supreme Court grand jury had been deliberating the case since Monday, a day after the fire.

The indictment also charged Gonzalez with two counts of arson, one count of attempted murder and one count of assault.

Gonzalez's chief lawyer, Richard Berne, said the case would ''test'' the American justice system as to whether ''my client gets a fair trial.''

Before the indictment was announced, Gonzalez appeared briefly in court wearing a bright yellow shirt and a grey suit, staring into space as lawyers argued about a teary videotaped confession he made after his arrest Sunday afternoon.

Berne said he planned to have Gonzalez examined by a psychiatrist, hinting that he could use the results as ''one potential avenue of defense.''

Gonzalez, who was returned to the psychiatric ward at Bellevue Hospital after his appearance, was to be arraigned on the charges on April 12.

Gonzalez, a Cuban army deserter who came to the United States in the Mariel boatlift, was accused of splashing gasoline in the lobby of the illegal social club and setting it on fire, police said.

The late-night revelers, most of them young Latin American immigrants, were trapped on the windowless second floor and were asphyxiated as they tried to escape. Horrified firefighters and rescue workers found masses of bodies piled on top of each other.

Gonzalez's girlfriend, Lydia Feliciano, one of five people who survived the fire, remained under police protection against threats from relatives of victims. Gonzalez was charged with attempted murder because he tried to kill Feliciano by setting the club on fire, authorities said.

Gonzalez was charged with assault for the injuries to Happy Land's disc jockey, who survived the blaze with burns to 50 percent of his body.

While members of the grand jury were meeting, wakes and funerals for the victims extended into a third day. Viewings were held Friday at funeral homes in the Bronx for 22 of those killed.

American Red Cross officials said they had chartered a DC-8 airplane at a cost of $38,000 to fly the bodies of 48 fire victims from John F. Kennedy International Airport Saturday morning to San Pedro Sula, Honduras.

Others victims were to be buried in the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico and Ecuador.

Hundreds of relatives and friends received checks ranging from $250 to $2,500 from the state and Red Cross to pay for funeral expenses, said Edward Hardy, a Red Cross spokesman.

The Red Cross also has bought ''numerous'' airline tickets for those who wanted to accompany bodies back to Honduras, Puerto Rico, and the Dominican Republic, Hardy said. ''Our objective here is that any family that needs help isn't going to have to pay for anything,'' he said.

Tan Sasha, the Honduran national airline, Friday afternoon flew 23 relatives of victims from Miami to San Pedro Sula, Honduras, where they began making burial arrangements. The flight did not ship any bodies, which usually are transported on cargo planes.

Before they boarded the plane at Miami International Airport, the relatives lashed out at Gonzalez.

''I think they should burn him,'' said Connie Budde, whose sister-in-law's brother, Nicholas Zapata, 22, was killed in the blaze.

''I don't have words to describe him,'' said Alicia Melendez of the suspect. ''He is too low a person. It hurts. All Hondurans hurt.''

(MARCH 31) UPI - With the mucky residue of a 40-42 1989 season almost off their heels, the Boston Celtics might be ready to reclaim the spirit of the team that terrorized the Atlantic Division in the 1980s.

The bloom of the old Celtic green was fresh Friday night, when Boston outshone the visiting NBA champion Detroit Pistons 123-111.

Larry Bird scored 15 of his 33 points in the decisive third quarter and Boston handed Detroit its fourth loss in five games.

The Pistons held a 53-49 halftime lead and the teams alternated scoring the first 16 baskets of the second half. Boston twice held brief leads but was behind 74-73 when it took the lead for good with a 9-1 spurt that included 4 points by McHale and was capped by Bird's 3-pointer at 1:20 for an 82-75 Boston lead.

The Celtics are anxious to set the stage for post-season play.

''We've got to get into a playoff groove,'' said the Celtics' Joe Kleine. ''When you can beat the world champions decisively, that sets a good tone.''.

The Pistons held a 53-45 rebounding advantage. Boston hit 39 of 44 foul shots.

Isiah Thomas, who led the Pistons with 32 points, isn't concerned with the Beantown team.

Detroit is without guard Joe Dumars, who broke his left hand on March 24 and is expected to be sidelined for four weeks.

But teammate Bill Laimbeer said the final score was the Pistons' fault because ''we played a couple of stupid quarters of basketball.''

The victory kept Boston three games behind the Philadelphia 76ers, who lead the Atlantic Division at 46-26.

(MARCH 31) UPI - Greyhound officials have announced they will not resume contract talks with union leaders and labor negotiators next week, citing recent threats and violence by striking drivers.

Although company and union officials were slated to resume contract negotiations Monday in Tucson, Ariz., Greyhound Executive Vice President P. Anthony Lannie sent word to both the drivers' union and the federal Mediation and Conciliation Service Friday that he would not attend the talks after all, said James Power, spokesman for the mediators.

In his letter sent by telefax to union officials and the mediators, Lannie said the company had agreed to return to the bargaining table because of an apparent lull in the violence that has marred the walkout since it began March 2.

But Lannie, citing a bus sniping in Oklahoma and a reported bomb threat in Chicago Friday, said: ''We cannot resume negotiations while the violence continues. Accordingly, we will not be in Tucson next Monday for bargaining.''

Bernard DeLury received word of the canceled talks as he was being sworn in as director of the federal labor negotiation agency, Power said.

Power said a Greyhound official was in Washington for DeLury's installation, and DeLury ''cornered him'' during a reception to discuss the possibility of future talks.

In his letter addressed to Edward M. Strait, president of Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, Lannie said the Greyhound bargaining team would meet with union negotiators in Tucson on April 9 if there were no new reports of violence in the next nine days.

''Mr. Lannie claims that the company's unwillingness to live up to its promise is due to isolated acts of violence that have occurred in recent days,'' Strait said in a statement. ''Clearly, this is a part of a smear campaign against the union and the Greyhound employees we represent.''

Strait repeated the union's condemnation of violence and suggested that some of the incidents have been perpetrated by ''unsafe and ill-trained replacement drivers against all people on the picket lines.''

Power said while DeLury and other mediators would like to renew the talks, none had been scheduled.

In Pittsburgh Friday, U.S. Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole said she has no plans to participate in the contract talks because she believed the federal mediators will settle the dispute.

A Greyhound maintenance facility in Chicago received a bomb threat Friday shortly before 7:30 a.m., forcing the evacuation of about 50 workers, federal agents said.

Agents from the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms evacuated the building but let employees return about three hours later when no bomb was found, said ATF spokesman Jerry Singer.

Greyhound officials said the caller telephoned the Chicago maintenance barn and said unless Greyhound Chairman Fred Currey resolved the strike, a plastic explosive would be detonated, Barney said.

In Oklahoma, a bus carrying 26 passengers from New York apparently was struck by a shotgun blast about 2:30 a.m. Friday as it was traveling on Interstate 44, just east of Tulsa, Greyhound spokesman Steve Scarpino said.

Shotgun pellets hit the front of the bus but no injuries were reported, Scarpino said.

A Greyhound bus was shot at Friday evening between Philadelphia and Harrisburg, Pa., according to Greyhound spokesman George Gravley in Dallas. The driver noticed a bullet hole in the door of the luggage compartment soon after the bus, carrying 18 passengers from New York, arrived in Harrisburg at about 7 p.m. EST.

No injuries were reported and the passengers were placed on another bus to continue their trip to Pittsburgh, Gravley said.

Greyhound said the shooting was the 25th involving its buses and three involving terminals since the strike began March 2. The incident came two days after Greyhound offered a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a bus sniper.

In Las Vegas, Nev., striking drivers Friday jeered arriving buses, blocked the downtown terminal entrance and disconnected wires in engine compartments of two buses.

Passengers remained on the buses from Los Angeles and Phoenix while mechanics reconnected the engine wiring.

MOSCOW (MARCH 31) UPI - The Soviet republic of Byelorussia will demand the return of large tracts of the territory of present-day Lithuania if that republic secedes from the Soviet Union, Tass said Saturday.

''If Lithuania secedes from the Soviet Union, Byelorussia will not consider itself bound by all laws, decrees and acts dealing with the turnover of part of Byelorussian lands to Lithuania,'' the Byelorussian Supreme Soviet, or parliament, said in a statement quoted by Tass.

Parts of Byelorussia, also known as White Russia, were ceded to Lithuania in 1940 after the Baltic republic was annexed by the Soviet Union. Byelorussia, with a population of 9.8 million, is south of Lithuania and its Baltic neighbor Latvia.

The Byelorussian statement appeared to further tighten the noose around Lithuania, which unilaterally declared its independence March 11 despite entreaties by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to wait for a new law on secession being prepared by the Union.

Throughout last week, Soviet authorities, who do not recognize the Lithuanian declaration, have forcibly and increasingly reimposed central Soviet control over the life in the rebel republic.

On Friday, Moscow reimposed control over Lithuania's judicial system, firing Lithuania's newly appointed prosecutor-general for ''violations of the Soviet constitution'' and appointing its own man to the job.

Control over the legal system in the Soviet Union's 15 constituent republics has always been jealously guarded by the central Union authorities.

Friday's prosecutor-general takeover came despite appeals and a hand-delivered letter from U.S. President George Bush to Gorbachev expressing support for Lithuania's strive for independence and urging the Soviet president to solve Soviet-Lithuanian differences through peaceful means.

The Soviet army had earlier taken over the offices of the independent Lithuanian Communist Party, returning parts of the building to loyal Moscow communists, and raided a hospital to apprehend Lithuanian deserters from the Red Army.

Tass said Saturday the Byelorussian Supreme Soviet stated that if Lithuania withdraws from the Soviet Union then it will invalidate the territorial agreements forged in 1940.

Specifically, the Byelorussian Supreme Soviet said that acts dealing with the turnover to Lithuania of the Sventsyansky region and parts of the Godutishkovsky, Ostrovetsky, Voronovsky and Radunsky regions would be contested.

''If Lithuania secedes from the Soviet Union (Byelorussia) will have to reconsider its decisions concerning the administrative and territorial setup of these regions (of Byelorussia) which stem from the above-mentioned acts,'' the statement added.

''Proceeding from the above-mentioned facts, Byelorussia will have to insist on the return to it of these Byelorussian lands,'' the statement concluded.

Within hours of the latest use of force by Moscow Friday, parliament in Lithuania's sister Baltic republic, Estonia, voted for a transition to independence, avoiding a Lithuania-like showdown with Moscow.

''I see they have learned from our bitter experience,'' said Algirdas Cekuolis, a Lithuianian observer to the proceedings.

The vote on the declaration of a transition to sovereignty came after a long debate in which ethnic Russian deputies said such a measure should be submitted to the republic's voters in a referendum.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (MARCH 31) UPI - A military court sentenced an officer to six years of hard labor for his part in the bloody August 1987 coup against President Corazon Aquino, it was announced Saturday.

An armed forces statement said the court found Lt. Col. Eduardo Matillano guilty of illegal possession of firearms and ammunition and ordered his dismissal from the service and the forfeiture of all allowances due him.

Matillano, a graduate of the elite Philippine Military Academy, led rebel troops in seizing the state television during the Aug. 28, 1987 coup that left 53 people dead.

Officials said Matillano also is facing separate charges of mutiny for the 1987 uprising and homicide charges for involvement in the Dec. 1-9, 1989 coup attempt that almost toppled President Corazon Aquino.

The rebel officer, who was arrested after the August 1987 revolt, escaped from detention in April 1988 but was captured in a suburban hotel five months later.

BEIJING (MARCH 31) UPI - A senior Chinese trade official warned Saturday that a move by the U.S. Congress to revoke a preferential trade status for China could backfire and added that U.S. trade with Hong Kong could also be ''seriously affected.''

Li Lanqing, vice-minister of the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade, spoke at a news conference during the ongoing session of the National People's Congress, China's rubber-stamp parliament.

Li's warning echoed that issued on Wednesday by Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen, who said a U.S. revocation of ''most favored nation'' trade status for China would lead to a ''major retrogression'' in relations between Beijing and Washington.

''It is said that some U.S. senators are considering to suspend or remove most favored nation treatment granted to China,'' Li said. ''We are deeply concerned over this.''

Removal of favored status would slap tariffs of up to 100 percent on many Chinese exports to the United States. U.S. officials say that would sharply reduce Chinese sales in the American market and cripple China's desperately needed hard currency earnings.

But Li added that revocation of the status would also damage trade with Hong Kong. Some two-thirds of China's export goods, including items like textiles and toys, are first sent to Hong Kong and re-exported to the United States, which counts them as Chinese imports.

''U.S. trade with Hong Kong will also be seriously affected,'' Li said. ''The destructive impact will be not only on China but on the U.S. as well.''

Most favored nation status, granted to China by Washington after the two countries normalized relations in 1979, guarantees that U.S. tariffs placed on imports from certain communist countries do not exceed those of other U.S. trading partners.

The status is reviewed each year by the White House and sent to Congress. President Bush is expected to renew favored status for China by a deadline of June 3.

Ironically, the deadline is the same date that Chinese troops fired on pro-democracy protesters in Beijing last year. The crackdown led to economic and political sanctions by the United States against China and a sharp decline in relations.

China does not count Hong Kong re-exports in its trade figures. The Chinese government says exports to the United States last year were $4.4 billion, while the U.S. government, which counts Hong Kong re-exports, puts the figure at nearly $12 billion.

Discussing Sino-Soviet trade, Li said the two countries were consideringreplacing the current method of barter trade with the conventional system of cash payments for trade. Most of the $2.5 billion in two-way trade last year was on a barter basis.

Li said the barter system has been less than satisfactory because both nations are reluctant to trade goods that could earn hard currency elsewhere, and because the barter deals involve governments too heavily.

(MARCH 31) UPI - Thick fog and cold drizzle dampened much of the eastern half of the nation early Saturday, while skies were mostly clear in the far West.

In New England, freezing rain slickened roads and fog reduced visibilities making driving hazardous, the National Weather Service said.

Fog spread from the Great Lakes, south to the Gulf Coast and east to the nation's capital. The fog reduced visibilities to zero in parts of Wisconsin, Missouri and Mississippi, the NWS said.

Rain continued in Texas, where nearly 4 inches has fallen in the past two days. Thunderstorms Friday dumped 2 inches of rain and hurled marble-sized hail in the south Texas town of Cotulla.

Skies were clear from the Rockies westward, but a storm brewing of the western coast was expected to bring rain to the Pacific Northwest coast later in the day.

Temperatures dipped below freezing in New England and into the 30s in the Rockies and northern Plains. It was in the 40s across the upper Midwest, thecentral Plains and the Pacific Northwest. Temperatures reached the 50s in Southern California, the 60s in the South and the 70s in southern Florida.

SAN FRANCISCO (MARCH 31) UPI - Robert Alton Harris, scheduled to die in the gas chamber Tuesday for the murder of two teenagers, won a reprieve from a federal judge who granted an indefinite stay of execution to allow lawyers to challenge the competence of psychiatrists testifying at his 1978 trial.

''The issue before us is not the rightness or wrongness of the death penalty, or its wisdom or unwisdom, or its constitutionality or the unconstitutionality,'' Judge John Noonan of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Friday in ordering the stay.

''Our task is to determine if the petitioner's rights under the constitution have been violated.''

California Attorney General John Van de Kamp asked the U.S. Supreme Court to dissolve the stay, saying the ruling would ''open the door to years of endless litigation - not only on this case but on hundreds of others.''

In Washington, the Supreme Court said the request for dissolution was assigned to Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, who may review it herself or seek a hearing by the full court.

The order by Noonan, a staunch conservative appointed by Ronald Reagan, blocks the April 3 execution, which would have been the first in California in 23 years.

Noonan said defense lawyers had made a ''substantial showing'' that Harris may have been denied a right to competent defense psychiatrists.

He said Harris is entitled to a hearing by a three-judge appeals panel on whether U.S. District Judge William Enright in San Diego was wrong in his ruling Wednesday denying an evidentiary hearing on the psychiatric issues.

It might be weeks before the hearing is set.

The court could reject the defense claims, clearing the way for a new date to be set for Harris to be executed in the gas chamber at San Quentin Prison.

Van de Kamp said the state's appeal to the Supreme Court to dissolve the stay granted by Noonan would be filed ''by the end of the day tomorrow.''

''Based on past experience with similar cases in other states, we would hope for an answer from the court as a body by as early as the end of the day on Monday,'' he said.

The Supreme Court has the authority to dissolve Noonan's order, but such a decision is rare.

Van de Kamp said Noonan's reading of the law was in error and added:

''The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals reached exactly the opposite conclusion on the same issue in an opinion issued last year. In addition, the decision to apply the supposed new right retroactively to cases like Harris is in direct conflict with rulings by the U.S. Supreme Court as recently as two weeks ago.''

Noonan rejected the state's argument that it could not rebut the defense claims because one of the defense psychiatrists died in 1983 and the other now lives in Africa. Noonan said Africa can be reached by telephone.

The dramatic decision came on a tumultuous day that saw Van de Kamp announce earlier that prison guards had found marijuana in Harris's cell.

Charles Sevilla, Harris's attorney, said defense psychiatrists failed to investigate evidence that he suffered from organic brain damage, fetal alcohol syndrome and other mental disorders that impaired his judgment.

The defense also has maintained that jurors in his 1978 trial were fundamentally misled about Harris's mental condition because the state psychiatrist testified Harris was a sociopath incapable of remorse or learning from his behavior.

Harris, 37, was sentenced to die for the July 5, 1978, murder of two teenage boys in San Diego. He then used one of the boys's car to stage a bank robbery.

During Friday's hearing, Noonan noted the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1985 that defendants have a constitutional right to competent psychiatric defense. He said Harris had the right to bring up the issue of his psychiatrists' competence only after that ruling in 1985.

Noonan berated Deputy Attorney General Louis Hanoian over comments on the time it has taken the case to wend through the courts since the murders.

''Don't dwell on the 12 years,'' Noonan admonished. ''There was nothing wrong with the delay. It is a popular slogan but it has no place in a court of law."

Hanoian argued the case boiled down to a battle of experts over Harris's psychiatric state.

PARIS (MARCH 31) UPI - A simmering dispute over France's growing immigrant population flared anew Saturday as conservative former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing urged the Socialist government to enact strict immigration controls.

Giscard's call coincided with a protest rally by hundreds of Jews angered by the attendance of a German former Nazi extremist, Franz Schoenhuber, at a congress of the anti-immigration National Front.

''France is not a country of immigration,'' Giscard said in a major policy statement.

''Foreigners can live in France, in respect of the rights of man. But they cannot change France,'' said the head of the center-right Union for French Democracy federation, one of the two main opposition groupings to Socialist President Francois Mitterrand's government.

Immigration, especially by Arabs and Africans from former French colonies, has become a burning political issue in France following a wave of racially inspired attacks on people of North African origin.

In the southern city of Nice, some 700 members of the Jewish community gathered at a square in the center of the Mediterranean resort to demonstrate against the presence of Schoenhuber, the president of the far-right West German Republican Party and a former member of the Waffen SS, Hitler's paramilitary special police.

The demonstrators recited a traditional Jewish kaddish prayer for the dead in the Nazi Holocaust of World War II. No incidents were reported.

Political experts said many French citizens are sure to be offended by Schoenhuber's speech at the congress of the ultra-right National Front party, which is led by former paratrooper Jean-Marie Le Pen.

''I respect very much the French who suffered under the German occupation '' Schoenhuber said.

''I have a lot of respect for the true resistance members but not for the last-minute resistance fighters,'' he said, suggesting that many French joined the World War II resistance partisans when the conflict was already effectively over.

Schoenhuber also expressed ''joy'' at finding himself among ''friends and comrades of the National Front.''

But Lucien Samack, president of the Representative Council of Jewish Institutions, said the conservative mayor of Nice, Jacques Medecins, should have followed the example of conservative Lyon Mayor Michel Noir, who refused Monday to let Scheonhuber make a public speech.

Samack also criticized Medecins, a member of the Neo-Gaullist Rally for the Republic Party, for receiving Le Pen at City Hall. Le Pen made a triumphant appearance at the congress Saturday, urging his followers ''to tear France out of decadence and decline.''

For his part, Giscard accused the government of handing the high ground to extremists like Le Pen, who has weathered accusations he practiced torture as a young officer during Algeria's war of independence.

Giscard called for reform of the French nationality code to make it more difficult for foreigners to become French citizens and for a crackdown on abuses of the right to political asylum.

What was needed, Giscard said, was ''a French-style solution that is reasonable, firm and just, and rigorously applied, conforming with the tradition of welcome and of permanence of national identity.''

(MARCH 31) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... U-P-I brings you the news, next:

Pro-choice advocates are celebrating in Boise, Idaho, where Governor Cecil Andrus vetoed what would have been the nation's most restrictive state abortion law. Andrus refused to sign the bill, calling it ''bad legislation.'' The measure was viewed as a move to overturn a landmark Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion.

It is now up to the full Senate to decide whether lawyer Timothy Ryan should be the nation's chief savings and loan regulator. Ryan's nomination narrowly won approval by the Senate Banking Committee yesterday. A report indicates some panel members were troubled by data in Ryan's F-B-I file that alleged occasional use of cocaine 20 years ago.

A ruling is expected by the Supreme Court's summer recess on whether a law against flag burning is constitutional. The court will hear the case on an emergency basis... a move that guarantees it will be decided in plenty of time to become an issue in the fall congressional elections.

A jury is expected to begin deliberations Monday on whether former national security adviser John Poindexter lied to Congress about the Iran-Contra scandal. Jurors heard more than five hours of final arguments yesterday. Poindexter is the highest ranking Reagan administration official charged in the scandal.

A passenger's jitters made a pilot nervous. A passenger's last-minute decision NOT to take an American Airlines flight from Chicago to New York last night prompted the pilot to evacuate the jet and have luggage hand-searched for a possible bomb. NO bomb was found. Authorities say the Unidentified passenger was questioned briefly by the F-B-I, police and airline officials.

(MARCH 31) UPI - Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov stands firm in his resolve that ''Lithuania is part of the Soviet Union.'' Yazov made the statement in France yesterday. He said Lithuania has 180 important factories and a nuclear power station.

About 100 anti-nuclear activists were arrested yesterday for blocking a highway leading to an entrance of the Nevada Test Site. Energy Department officials say the demonstration blocked northbound traffic on U-S Highway 95, several miles south of the test site entrance.

Comptroller General Charles Bowsher yesterday urged Congress to try fixing- rather than repealing- immigration law provisions a report says triggered widespread discrimination. Bowsher suggests reducing the number of documents employers are required to check. He spoke at a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing.

South African President Frederik de Klerk threatens to use ''the full weight'' of his government's powers to stop fighting between rival black groups in Natal province. At least 38 people died in three days of fighting. African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela and a Zulu leader failed in a peace effort.

Authorities say at least 10 California high school students police describe as ''computer whiz kids'' are accused of taking 20-thousand dollars in computer equipment from schools. Police say the students at Ukiah High School, ages 14 to 18, were trying to set up their own private computer network. The theft ring was cracked after a 100-dollar reward for information was offered.

ATLANTA (MARCH 31) UPI - In one of only 14 cases of its kind, a woman gave premature birth to a girl 15 weeks before the infant's twin sister is due, hospital officials said Saturday.

Donna Krasenics, 24, gave birth to a 1-pound, 8-ounce Shakoora Krasenics Thursday at Crawford-Long Hospital of Emory University, said Tisha Burland a hospital spokeswoman.

Her sister's full-term arrival is expected in July.

Shakoora was placed in an incubator in the nursery's intensive care unit and was reported in critical but stable condition Saturday.

Mrs. Krasenics was in good condition and Burland said her baby was in good hands.

''We've taken care of much lighter babies and much sicker babies in this intensive care unit,'' she said.

Krasenics, a Medicaid patient, will have to stay in bed until her second baby is born. Shakoora will remain at the hospital until she gains enough weight to be out of danger, Burland said.

After Shakoora's birth, Dr. Camille Davis-Williams was able to stop further labor, preventing the other twin from being born 15 weeks prematurely, Burland said.

Williams tried to terminate labor before Shakoora was born, but the baby's water broke and she had to be delivered. The other twin's water remained intact.

Dr. Paul Browne, an obstetrician, was about to report a two-year study he conducted at Emory University on the rare incidence of twins being born several weeks or months apart.

Brown said he has delayed reporting the study to include the Krasenic's case.

''The medical community does not know why a patient goes into premature labor in these case,'' Browne said.

In his research, Browne said he found 13 cases in which twins or triplets were born weeks or months apart.

In the most recent case, four years ago in Atlanta, Dr. Crawford Long, a great-nephew of the hospital's namesake, delivered triplets. One was born at slightly over four months and the other two 10 weeks later. The first triplet died but the other two survived birth weights of 1-pound, 12 ounces each.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 31) UPI - It may take a little more persuasion this year to get Americans to set their clocks ahead an hour Sunday to daylight-saving time - this spring's clock adjustment falls on April Fools' Day.

The ''spring forward'' part of the old adage, ''spring forward, fall back'' occurs at 2 a.m. local time on the first Sunday of April, depriving most Americans of an hour of sleep and plunging the nation into daylight-saving time and more sunlight at the end of the day.

The clocks go back at 2 a.m. local time on the last Sunday of October.

It has not always been so, and not everyone in the United States observes the practice.

For instance, Hawaii, Arizona, the Eastern Time Zone part of Indiana, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and American Samoa are excluded from having to make the change.

The seven months of daylight-saving time now observed is based around the idea of providing an equal amount of extra evening sunlight on either side of the hottest days of the year, generally in late July.

Historically, the idea of juggling the hour hand about to adjust personal schedules to the longer and shorter days can be traced to Benjamin Franklin, who wrote a paper while serving as the U.S. envoy to France recommending that shops be opened and closed earlier during summer months to cut the costs of providing lighting.

William Willett began urging the adoption of daylight-saving time in England and during World War I it was adopted by England, France, Germany and a few other nations.

The United States took up the concept late in the war when President Woodrow Wilson, on March 31, 1918, signed legislation promoted by Robert Garland of Pittsburgh. However, it was repealed the following year.

In the United States the practice was revived in World War II, and in 1966 the Uniform Time Act provided for the first nationwide observance of daylight-saving time during peacetime.

During the energy crisis of 1973 and 1974 the nation went to daylight-saving time year-round to conserve energy, but standard time was reinstated late in 1974 for the four-month winter period with the fewest hours of daylight.

Assignment to the Transportation Department of responsibility for administering the time law dates to the days when time zones were of importance because of the need for publishing standardized railroad schedules.

A study undertaken for the department during the energy crisis also revealed daylight-saving time to be both a life- and a money-saver.

The study indicated a 1.5 percent to 2 percent reduction in March and April highway traffic deaths and an increase in hazards to early morning travelers. It showed a 6 million barrel savings in oil use for March and April, and noted that a study of violent crimes in Washington, D.C., indicated a 10 percent to 13 percent reduction in violent crimes during daylight-saving time. In addition, the study listed a number of polls showing a public preference for eight months of daylight-saving time, with standard time running from November through February.

The study, however, cited some disadvantages to extended daylight-saving time, including uncomfortably late sunrises for several days in early March for those who live at the western edge of a time zone, and apprehension about early morning hazards to travelers. It said complaints might come from farmers more attuned to natural sunrise and sunset than time zones, from fundamentalist Christians who consider daylight-saving time unnatural, from outdoor theater owners, and from the elderly who have difficulty adjusting to the changeovers to and from daylight-saving time, regardless of when they take place.

HAWTHORNE, NY (MARCH 31) UPI - Two New York City police officers were wounded and two suspects were shot - one fatally - in a high-speed speed chase Saturday that ended in a wild gun battle in Westchester County, authorities said.

The officers suffered slight injuries in the gun battle at the Hawthorne exit on the Sprain Brook Parkway, said Sgt. Mary Wrensen, a police spokeswoman.

One of the suspects was killed and a second was near death at Westchester County Medical Center following the 8:08 a.m. shooting, police said.

The officers' injuries were not considered life threatening, Wrensen said.

At the site of the shootout, police dog teams and helicopters were conducting an intensive search of the area, apparently looking for a third suspect.

The chase began in the residential Bronxdale neighborhood in the north Bronx, where two city police officers were responding to a robbery at a check-cashing business, Wrensen said.

The suspects fled in a gray blue dodge up the Sprain Brook Parkway into Westchester County, where Yonkers police joined the city police officers in the wild chase.

At the Hawthorne exit near Route 100, the chase ended in a shootout in which one of the suspects was shot and killed and the second was wounded and ''likely to die,'' Wrensen said.

One of the officers was hit in the knee and the other was grazed in the chest by a bullet, she said.

Police left the body of the dead suspect lying in the road near the getaway car while officers searched the area, which is about 15 miles from the Bronx border.

The suspect was handcuffed and bloodied, but it was unclear where he was shot. The back windshield of the small, late-model Dodge was riddled with at least a dozen bullets.

Two police cars from the 47th and 52nd precincts, untouched by bullets, were nearby, but police officers refused to speak to reporters.

The two officers and the wounded suspect were taken to Westchester County Medical Center, Wrensen said.

In the Bronx, Andy Polucci, the owner of Andy's Variety, near the site of the robbery, called the area ''a quiet neighborhood. But it's getting a little heavy on crime.''

Another store owner echoed Polucci's comments.

''This is second crime I've seen,'' said the owner of the neighboring Manuel Grocery Store. ''Last month a Chinese lady was killed in her jewelry store.''

The woman said the owner of the check cashing business was opening up her store when two men followed her inside to rob her. Police could not confirm that information.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (MARCH 31) UPI - Militant separatists enforced a strike in Srinagar and hoisted black flags on lamp posts Saturday to mourn the death of militant who blew himself up with a hand grenade. Three more people were shot and killed in the unrest.

The deaths brought to at least 29 the number of people killed this week, most of them bystanders killed by security forces shooting back at attacking militants.

Two bystanders died during a gun battle between security forces and Moslem militants in Soura, a suburb of the Jammu and Kashmir state summer capital 400 miles north of New Delhi, police said.

In another incident, police said the bullet-riddled body of a member of a paramilitary police unit was found lying in a road in Batmaloo, a militant stronghold in the center of the city.

Residents said the victim was gunned down by opponents of Indian rule in Kashmir, the Moslem area of the Himalayan state.

Meanwhile, shopkeeps ignored a four-hour curfew relaxation and kept their businesses shut in Srinagar.

Moslem militants had called for all commercial activity to stop and residents to remain indoors to mourn Ashfaq Majid Wani, a local commander of the Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front, the most powerful separatist organization.

Wani died Friday when a grenade he was preparing to hurl at security forces exploded in his hand after he was shot.

About 4,000 mourners held a prayer meeting for Wani at a ''martyrs graveyard'' in Batmaloo, which residents created on a vacant lot in mid-January to inter the remains of six protesters shot by security forces. The killings of demonstrators between Jan. 20-22 ignited the uprising.

Militants also tied thousands of black flags on lamp posts across the mountain-ringed city, while mourners staged processions in the towns of Sopore and Baramullah, police said.

Normal life in the Kashmir region has been disrupted and businesses paralyzed since the outbreak of the insurrection, which is supported by virtually all 3 million Moslem residents.

Kashmiri Moslems contend that their region has been politically abused and neglected for years by the Hindu-dominated New Delhi government. They also say New Delhi reneged on a promise to hold a referendum to determine whether the region should remain part of India, accede to the neighboring Islamic Republic of Pakistan or become independent.

Authorities have tried to smother the campaign by deploying tens of thousands of troops and police and declaring curfews almost daily, with just a few hours relaxation during mornings. However, they have failed to control the crisis and thousands of Hindus have fled the region.

More than 180 people have died in the past two months, mostly demonstrators killed by security forces.

In a related development, state-run All-India Radio said security forces arrested 31 militants during a search operation Friday.

HOLLYWOOD, FL (MARCH 31) UPI - The Hollywood Sun published its last daily edition Saturday and announced that the 55-year-old newspaper will change its publication to three times a week.

The Sun, which began publication in 1935 and was known as the Sun-Tattler until last November, will be published on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays publisher John Reynolds said.

The paper laid off 42 full-time and 10 part-time employees Friday afternoon, including eight from its editorial staff, Reynolds said. There were a total of 129 employees.

''We feel it strengthens our position in the market by providing both demographically and geographically three times more penetration than other print media in South Broward,'' Reynolds said.

The Sun's circulation will be 35,000 on Thursdays and Fridays and 45,000 on Saturdays, he said. Its daily circulation was 26,585 and 41,759 on Saturdays, according to a June 1989 Verified Audit Circulation.

''What we are accomplishing in this incease in circulation is providing the advertisers with the ability to reach a total of 175,000 in circulation and the flexibility to target those markets,'' Reynolds said.

The Sun office and production plant is for sale for $4.2 million, and the paper will be printed by Florida Offset, a Gannett-owned production facility in Miramar, he said.

Editor Rita Abent said that despite the cut of reporters, editors and clerks, the Sun will continue to provide comprehensive coverage of local news.

''We tried to protect the integrity of the news reporting staff as best as we can do,'' Abent said.

The Sun, which was called the Sun-Tattler until Nov. 1., was purchased in February 1989 by the South Florida Newspaper Inc., a corporation jointly owned by Reynold and DTH Media Inc. It was previously owned by E.W. Scripps Co. of Cincinnati. DTH also owns the Dallas Times Herald.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 31) UPI - Symbolizing the end of the Iron Curtain, Austrian authorities have approved $800 million in seed money for a 1995 World's Fair to be held jointly in Vienna and Budapest.

The two exposition sites, 150 miles apart along the Danube River, will be a high-tech enterprise and are expected to attact some 35 million visitors. The exposition is scheduled to open in April 1995.

Originally, the theme of the exposition was to be ''bridges,'' signifying the new unity between Eastern and Western Europe. But since the political walls in Central Europe began crumbling, the theme has shifted to the role of Europeans in a high-tech future.

''The intention is to focus on the cooperation and advances that are possible because of the improved economic climate and the process of democratization,'' said Gerhard Feltl, executive director of the Vienna half of the exposition.

Hunagrian authorities are expected to match the $800 million being put up by Austria so that work can begin on the two sites along the Danube, which flows through both capitals.

Subsequent funds will be raised by the exposition authorities with bonds or other forms of borrowing.

In future evidence of the new borders of Europe, the two sites will be linked by a high-speed non-stop train and a non-stop superhighway, which will supplement a fleet of jet motor boats already operating between Vienna and Budapest.

Feltl told a New York audience last week, ''Provided there is no setback, the 1990s will go down in history as the European decade. On the threshold of the third millenium the vision of a unified continent without political frontiers and trade barriers materializes.''

Exhibitors, he said, will be invited to demonstrate things and ideas that visualize and dramatize how the world will live, now that the age of the Cold War is over. He described it as ''a demonstration of optimism and confidence in the future'' on the scale of the Olympic Games.

WASHINGTON (MARCH 31) UPI - As the State Department described it, the killing of U.S. missionary William Robinson in Lebanon last week was a simple and brutal act of terrorism against an innocent man doing humanitarian work.

Three masked men fatally shot Robinson, 59, an American evangelical, Tuesday in an orphanage he operated for handicapped children. He had remained in Lebanon despite repeated State Department advice to leave an area where his safety could not be guaranteed.

As the Lebanese governor of southern Lebanon, Halim Fayyad, described it in an interview with United Press International last week, Robinson was a man who had helped bring about his own death by serving the Israeli occupation and helping to expand it and make it permanent.

Another observer, Arab League ambassador to the United States Clovis Maksooud, said the southern Lebanon ''security zone'' occupied by Israeli troops is a microcosm ''incorporating all of the tragedy and complexity of Lebanon in a tiny strip of land.''

Robinson's death dramatized that tragedy within the greater tragedies of Lebanon and the Middle East.

The security zone declared unilaterally by the Israelis in southern Lebanon is a 12-mile strip of land stretching north from the international border to the Litani River. It is a desolate and hilly area that had frequently been used by Arab infiltrators bound for northern Israel.

Since 1982, the Israeli army has occupied the area, in order to stem the infiltrators and guerrillas. The effect is to extend Israel's territory to the north, using the Israeli-occupied southern Lebanese army as the main occupying force in a territory that is poor, hostile and nearly ungovernable in the best of times.

It was in this area that Robinson, a former broadcaster with a Christian radio and television station, decided to establish his Christian Children's Home, an orphanage for mentally handicapped children.

But according to Fayyad, Robinson, under the shield of the Israeli-supported armed forces, took over a local public school in Rashaya Foukhar, expelled the village children and persuaded the village leadership to give him possession of about 5,000 acres of formerly public lands.

Fayyad said that Robinson had talked of building 100 housing units in the pine forests, something that could only be done with the permission and knowledge of the Israeli authorities.

Elders from 18 surrounding villages in southern Lebanon had sent a protest to Fayyad about what they believed was the theft of their common land.

The villagers suspected that Robinson's orphanage - even if he did not realize it - was to be the precursor of an Israeli expansion of settlements to accommodate the influx of new Jewish immigrants from Eastern Europe. Israeli authorities deny that any settlement had been planned.

Robinson ignored several specific death threats, and was singing bedtime prayers with his wife and 26 of his orphans when the gunmen broke in. They had shot his eight watchdogs. They then killed him.

A group calling itself the Lebanese National Resistance Front claimed responsibility, but Fayyad said that nobody can know if such a group exists, and if it does, whether it really was involved.

Fayyad, an appointed official of the fragmented Lebanese government, was in Washington this week to try to explain his country's plight to any American offical or reporter who would listen, but his mission was overshadowed by the Robinson slaying.

As has frequently happened, sudden and brutal violence had captured everybody's attention and, as Fayyad complained, the deeper tragedy of Lebanon was buried and once again ignored.

FORT WORTH, TX (MARCH 31) UPI - An Eastern Airlines pilot charged with buying crack cocaine from a Florida undercover police officer had tested positive for the drug seven months before his arrest but continued to fly for the airline, a newspaper reported Saturday.

Dain Schneemilch, 36, of Key Largo, Fla., was fired by Eastern on March 20 after he was charged with buying crack cocaine for $20 from an undercover officer in Key Largo on Feb. 23, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported in a copyright story.

Police in Monroe County, Fla., said they have video and audiotape of Schneemilch's drug buy. He has entered an innocent plea and the case is pending in Florida state court.

Schneemilch could not be reached for comment. His lawyer, Timothy Thomes of Key Largo, declined comment to the newspaper.

In a letter notifying Schneemilch of his termination by Eastern, the chief pilot of the airline's Miami crew base, Michael Vaughan, wrote that he also had learned that Schneemilch had tested positive for cocaine use on July 19.

The test had been administered by Eastern as part of Schneemilch's back-to-work physical exam after returning from the pilots strike.

Schneemilch, a member of the Air Line Pilots Association, had been on strike against Eastern since March 1988 but had decided to cross the picket lines to return to work.

Despite the results of his drug test, Schneemilch continued to fly as a second officer, or flight engineer, on Boeing 727s until at least mid-September, the newspaper said.

On Sept. 18, Schneemilch was promoted to first officer, or co-pilot, on the same aircraft.

An Eastern spokeswoman said Friday that Schneemilch never served as a first officer on any Eastern flight.

After receiving his promotion six months ago, Schneemilch entered ground school training for his new assignment. He was still in ground school at the time of his arrest in February, said spokeswoman Karen Ceremsak.

She said Schneemilch continued to fly for Eastern only because his positive cocaine test results went unnoticed, apparently because of an oversight.

''It was a clerical error, a mistake,'' she said. ''When he tested positive for cocaine use in July, it should have been noticed by someone on out staff, but it wasn't. Somebody reading those reports should have noticed it.

''But in the hectic pace created by trying to hire about 1,000 pilots last summer as we rebuilt our (route) system after the (pilots') strike last spring, someone just missed it.

''And I want to stress that (drug) tests we were doing at that time were not required by the FAA (Federal Aviation Administration),'' she said.

Ceremsak said that since Schneemilch's arrest, Eastern has reviewed the drug tests of all of the pilots it hired last summer, and his was the only one in which a positive result was overlooked.

Christopher Witkowski, director of the Aviation Consumer Action Project, an affiliate of Ralph Nader's Public Citizen watchdog group in Washington, said he found the incident ''very disturbing.''

''I would say that any airline that would allow a pilot, for the length of even two months or however long it was after testing positive for cocaine, I wouldn't fly on that airline.''

BOISE, ID (MARCH 31) UPI - Gov. Cecil Andrus' veto of a bill that would have given Idaho the most restrictive abortion law in the nation may be a boon to the anti-abortion movement, according to a professor of constitutional law.

Andrus, a long-time foe of abortion, said he vetoed the measure Friday because its exceptions were far too narrow, especially for victims of rape and incest.

The Legislature adjourned hours before the veto and the issue appears dead for 1990.

Brigham Young University Law Professor Richard Wilkins, a constitutional law specialist opposed to abortion, said if Andrus had signed the bill, and the Supreme Court declared it unconstitutional, it would have ''hurt the pro-life movement because it solidifies Roe vs. Wade,'' the high court's 1973 decision legalizing abortion.

Wilkins, in a telephone interview from Provo, Utah, said he spoke with Andrus about those same concerns this week.

Wilkins, who worked on the abortion issue for the Reagan administration for nine years, helped persuade the Utah Legislature to scrap a similar bill this year and unsuccessfully urged Idaho lawmakers to redraft the legislation.

Andrus said the issue was probably the most ''polarizing'' of any he has handled.

Compounding his political problem was a threatened boycott of Idaho potatoes and other things Idaho holds dear by the National Organization for Women and other pro-choice groups.

Officials say it will take time to repair the battering Idaho's image suffered in the crossfire between anti-abortion and pro-choice groups.

Jim Hawkins, director of the Idaho Commerce Department, was working on various damage control strategies before Andrus vetoed the measure Friday.

''It's been a very negative impact. It's caused a lot of divisiveness in this state,'' Hawkins said. He said Idahoans should ''put our arms around each other and move forward.''

State Sen. Marti Calabretta, a leading Democratic opponent of the bill, said he was satisfied with the veto.

''I feel vindicated that the bill was recognized for what it was,'' Calabretta said. ''I appreciate the fact that the governor looked at how it applied to Idahoans.''

He said lawmakers who voted for the anti-abortion measure will be challenged by abortion rights advocates in this year's elections.

Brian Johnston, Pacific-Mountain director of the National Right to Life Committee, said the veto was a disappointment but that the anti-abortion movement will move forward.

''The fact is most Americans favor this kind of legislation, of not using abortion as a form of birth control,'' Johnston said. He said the movement will continue in Idaho and elsewhere.

Andrus said he was not influenced by the boycott threat but by legal and medical considerations.

''This bill is drawn so narrowly that it would punitively and without compassion further harmed an Idaho woman who may find herself in the horrible, unthinkable position of confronting a pregnancy that resulted from rape or incest,'' Andrus said.

''The medical community advised us that they doubt there is any medical doctor who could perform any abortion in this state if the bill became law because of the legal liability restrictions putting the burden on them,'' Andrus said.

BOWLING GREEN, OH (MARCH 31) UPI - The fall of communism in East and Central Europe resulted more from envy of western popular culture than because of unhappiness with a political philosophy, a popular culture expert says.

Ray Browne, chairman of Bowling Green State University's popular culture department, links the demise of communism to ''envious eyes and rumbling stomachs.''

He said television revealed a cornucopia of goods and services people in the East Bloc never had. Even the arrival of McDonald's in Moscow provided a symbol of convenience, access, and other consumer advantages denied to the masses.

The result, Browne said recently, was a demand for a piece of the same action.

He predicted that popular culture studies will become more influential throughout the 1990s.

Browne said scholars in the Bowling Green program who were defensive or even apologetic about participating in that research are now proud of its spread and linkage to freedom and democracy.

(MARCH 31) UPI - Lithuania is threatened with a land-grab if it seceeds.

Abortion activists celebrate a veto by Idaho's governor.

More violence breaks out in the Greyhound bus strike.

A recommendation on the Lebanon hostage situation.

U-P-I has this and other top news today.

Lithuanians are under a new kind of pressure to stay in the Soviet Union... pressure from a neighboring republic.

The news agency Tass said today the republic south of Lithuania and Latvia... Byelorussia... will demand the return of large tracts of the territory of present-day Lithuania, if Lithuania secedes.

Tass issued a statement from the Byelorussian Supreme Soviet, or parliament. Quoting the statement now... ''If Lithuania secedes from the Soviet Union, Byelorussia will NOT consider itself bound by all laws, decrees and acts dealing with the turnover of part of Byelorussian lands to Lithuania.''

Parts of Byelorussia, also known as White Russia, were ceded to Lithuania in 1940 after Lithuania was annexed by the Soviet Union.

Yesterday, Moscow re-imposed control over Lithuania's judicial system... firing Lithuania's newly appointed prosecutor-general for ''violations of the Soviet constitution'' and appointing its own man to the job.

Control over the legal system in the Soviet Union's 15 constituent republics has always been jealously guarded by the central Union authorities.

The prosecutor-general takeover came despite appeals and a hand-delivered letter from President Bush to President Gorbachev ... expressing support for Lithuania's strive for independence and urging the Soviet president to solve Soviet-Lithuanian differences through peaceful means.

A crowd of two-thousand joyous abortion proponents gathered on the steps of the Idaho state Capitol to cheer the veto... chanting ''pro-choice, pro-choice'' and singing choruses of peace songs.

Opponents of the measure said it could have stopped up to 95 percent of all abortions in Idaho and was a scheme by national anti-abortion advocates to overturn the Supreme Court decision that allows abortion.

In vetoing the proposal, Andrus said it did NOT satisfy his views or the needs of Idaho.

Andrus said his decision was NOT influenced by threats of boycotts of Idaho potatoes, other products and tourism. Andrus said the bill could have stopped all abortions, even those sought because of rape or incest.

He also noted the state would have faced ''tremendous'' legal expenses defending the bill... and said its authors admitted they drafted it just for a court test.

His action did NOT satisfy anti-abortion forces.

Abortion foes argue Andrus can NO longer call himself one of them, despite the fact that he has run on an anti-abortion plank. A spokeswoman for the Right to Life League of Southern California says Andrus has set himself up for a fall from political power by his action.

(MARCH 31) UPI - Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole says she's optimistic federal mediators will resolve the month-long labor dispute between Greyhound officials and more than nine-thousand striking workers.

Dole's positive sentiment comes despite Greyhound's pulling out from talks scheduled to resume Monday with union leaders and government mediators in Tucson.

Greyhound's executive vice president, P. Anthony Lannie, says the cancelation of talks stems from continued violence against buses driven by NON-union employees.

The head of the workers' union dismissed Lannie's claim as NOTHING more than an attempt to smear the union and the workforce it represents.

Greyhound said it is willing to return to the bargaining table April 9th if NO new bouts of violence occur in the next nine days. But hours after that statement, another bus was fired on.

Greyhound says a bus was shot at last night as it drove between Philadelphia and Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. NO one was injured... which Greyhound says is the 25th shooting involving its buses since the dispute began March 2nd.

Striking workers in Las Vegas jeered NON-union driven buses and disconnected wires in two buses.

CHICAGO (MARCH 31) UPI - A former appellate judge who ruled in 1981 that 14-year-old immigrant Walter Polovchak should return to the Soviet Union with his parents has died at 73.

Funeral services were scheduled for Monday in Hillside for Helen F. McGillicuddy, Chicago, who died Thursday at an Evanston Hospital.

The graduate of Northwestern University and the DePaul University College of Law was part of the three-judge appeals panel that in 1981 ruled Polovchak should return to the Soviet Union with his parents. Polovchak eventually won a lengthy court battle to remain in the United States but his parents returned home.

McGillicuddy retired in December 1986, 10 years after she became the first Illinois woman elected to the appellate court. She became a Cook County circuit judge in 1962 and ruled on many family custody cases in the family and juvenile divisions.

As a lawyer, McGillicuddy had a private practice and had been an arbitrator for the Illinois Industrial Commission. She also was a certified public accountant.

McGillicuddy is survived by her brother, Monsignor Cornelius McGullicuddy, and a sister, Joan.

(MARCH 31) UPI - A ranking Iranian-backed Moslem leader says the United States should bow to Lebanese hostage-takers' conditions for the return of 18 kidnapped Westerners.

The remarks came yesterday from Islamic Amal movement leader Hussein Musawi, after a report he met earlier in the week with the brother of Iran's president.

Musawi told the Hezbollah's Voice of the Oppressed Radio station- quoting here- ''Those who have kept the hostages for a year, two, or five years will NOT let them go without anything in return.''

The Moslem extremist groups holding the hostages have issued varying demands- including release of 16 Shiite Moslems jailed in Kuwait and the release of 400 Shiites and Palestinians imprisoned in Israel.

Lebanese police say gunmen firing from a speeding car last night shot and wounded a Polish diplomat and his wife in Moslem west Beirut.

A previously UNknown group claimed responsibility today. The Polish couple was shot as they sat in a car outside a hotel.

Last week, a fire gutted a hall at the Soviet Embassy in west Beirut, killing one Soviet diplomat and wounding another.

NAIROBI, KENYA (MARCH 31) UPI - A Kenyan clergyman was sentenced to six years in prison for writing in his desk diary what the government said was seditious material to destabilize the government, newspapers reported Saturday.

The Rev. Lawford Ndege Imunde, of the Presbyterian Church of East Africa, pleaded guilty to charges of writing documents the prosecutor described as ''highly seditious and aimed at destabilizing the government,'' the daily Standard said.

Imunde, who has a degree in social science and theology, pleaded for leniency as a first offender, claiming the devil made him write the anti-government comments, the newspaper reported.

''I respect the government and President Daniel arap Moi. It was Satan who led me to do that,'' the Standard quoted him as saying.

Deputy public prosecutor Bernard Chunga told the court Imunde, under police custody, also acknowledged there were ''churches and individuals channeling money to Kenya churches to destabilize the government.''

''Some of the sermons delivered in those churches were part of an orchestrated move to undermine the Kenya government,'' Chunga said.

The prosecutor said money had been sent to Imune's Presbyterian Church, the Church Province of Kenya and the Kenya office of the National Council of Churches. He did not, however, specify who sent the funds or how they were used.

Moi has ruled Kenya through a one-party system for a decade.

Nairobi-based newpapers did not quote the seditious passages in the clergyman's personal desk diary nor did they give specifics of what they contained.

He is the first Kenyan church leader to be jailed for writing and possessing seditious material.

Relations between church and government in Kenya are frequently tense and were further strained last Sunday when South Africa's Archbishop Desmond Tutu said in Nairobi that some African states have less freedom than they did under colonial rule, interpreted as a reference to Kenya.

Tutu's remark came as Vice President George Saitoti called on church organizations to denounce people trying to subvert the government by spreading seditious rumors. ''Don't let them use the churches,'' he was quoted as saying by the official Kenya Times newspaper.

More than 50 prominent Kenyans have been picked up for questioning in a crack-down since the unexplained death of Foreign Minister Robert Ouko in mid-February.

Ouko disappeared and his partially burned body was found three days later on Feb. 16 in a field near his family farm in Koru in western Kenya.

Moi said said Ouko, shot once in the head, apparently had been murdered.

Memorial rites for Ouko on Feb. 23 sparked some of hte worst violence in Kenya in recent years.

(MARCH 31) UPI - America's Roman Catholic bishops say Congress has a moral responsibility to change the federal budget submitted by President Bush for fiscal 1991.

Los Angeles Archbishop Roger Mahony and Youngstown, Ohio, Bishop James Malone urged the House and Senate Budget committees to revamp the proposed budget to reflect the needs of U-S citizens.

Mahony and Young say Congress must pay ''special'' attention to the ''misplaced priorities'' present in Bush's proposed budget. The two say problems in the current proposal can be taken care of by reducing military spending and significantly increasing money to domestic social programs.

Mahony and Young defuse possible criticism of their desire to slash spending on weapon systems by saying the new political environment around the world makes such a move possible.

The two contend that spreading American democratic ideas does NOT have to come at the expense of U-S domestic social programming.

KATMANDU, NEPAL (MARCH 31) UPI - Police shot and wounded four pro-democracy protesters in a capital suburb Saturday and arrested dozens in raids on homes to quell mushrooming demands for political freedom in the Himalayan kingdom.

Despite the early morning police crackdown in the Katmandu suburb of Patan about 7,000 demonstrators spilled into the streets in the afternoon for a second rally and organizers vowed not to be intimidated by the killings Friday of two pro-democracy activists.

''We will counter murder with murder!'' the protesters chanted.

Since Feb. 18 a democracy movement has tried to break King Birendra's hold on power. It has led to thousands of arrests, at least 16 deaths and paralyzing strikes by professionals, students and others.

There has been little direct criticism of the king, which would be a criminal offense, but the movement appeared to be broadening and the foreign minister resigned Friday.

Two people were killed and 10 wounded in Patan Friday when police fired on protesters demanding an end to the kingdom's 29-year ban on political parties. Hours later, Foreign Minister Shailendra Kumar Upadhayaya resigned from the bitterly divided government to protest the violence.

Hundreds of townspeople took to the streets Saturday morning to protest the killings. Residents said some women brandished knives and sickles.

Police fired on the crowd, wounding four people, including a nurse who was taken to a hospital with a bullet in her lung, doctors told United Press International by telephone.

Doctors at two hospitals said police took away the bodies of the two people killed Friday during the night, possibly to dispose of them in private to avoid the risk of a public funeral.

Patan residents said hundreds of policemen raided homes indiscriminately Saturday morning, forcing residents onto the streets and making mass arrests.

The witnesses said the atmosphere was tense in the historic town of Hindu and Buddhist temples only a few miles outside Katmandu, and few people ventured into the streets following the new wave of violence.

A Parliament member from the town in a statement Saturday blamed the violence on ''repressive measures of the government and a lack of foresight.''

''I warn the government to avoid excesses,'' the statement said.

Two members of the city council, Mrigendra Rajbhandari and Daya Ratna Dhakwa, said they were resigned from their posts.

Veteran Patan communist leader Siddhi Lal Singh said in a telephone interview from his hideout that the pro-democracy movement would continue.

The Nepali Congress party and seven left front parties spearheading the democracy movement issued a statement threatening unspecified measures to counter the violent crackdown.

''If the peaceful demand for the restoration of civil liberties is suppressed with bullets, no Nepali will sit dumb and be a silent spectator '' the coalition said.

The government, acting under the Essential Services Operation Act, banned strikes by employees of essential services, the official national news agency said Saturday. The order includes workers in the postal, utility and transportation sectors.

Heavy police turnout in the Nepalese capital foiled an attempt by the Nepal Teachers Association to hold a mass meeting at the city center and three teachers were arrested.

Authorities also closed a women's university in Katmandu ''because of the the lack of proper academic atmosphere,'' the news agency said. The government closed six campuses Friday and two others were shut down by adminstrators in an effort to curb the student activism that has been the backbone of the protest movement.

Drone Prasad Acharya, a member of Parliament who was known to sympathize with the movement, was arrested in southeast Nepal hours after he was released from prison, the news agency said.

Acharya was first arrested Feb. 18, the day the movement was launched.

WARSAW, POLAND (MARCH 31) UPI - Solidarity founder Lech Walesa told Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki Saturday that disgruntled workers at the historic Gdansk shipyard - the labor union's birthplace - will stage an anti-government strike next week.

''The shipyard will go on strike against Mazowiecki and against Walesa on Monday,'' Walesa said at a conference of the Civic Committee, the Solidarity body grouping union activists, which the two men attended.

The strike, if materialized, would be the first such protest against the economic policy of the Solidarity-led government, which has introduced tough belt-tighting measures to slow inflation and introduce a capitalist system.

The founder of the East Bloc's first independent labor movement in 1980 indirectly blamed Mazowiecki for the slow pace of dismantling the economic structures of the former Communist Party leadership and even letting some members of the communist elite to open various enterprises.

''The government is following a good road but it is walking too slowly,'' Walesa said.

Walesa charged the communist-elite controlled enterprises with ''robbing the country'' and demanded that tough measures against be taken against them in the period of the revolutionary political and economic transformations in Poland.

''If there is a revolution, then decrees should be passed,'' he said advising Mazoswiecki to ban the operation of the businesses controlled by the former ranking Communist Party leadership.

Walesa said about 20 such companies were installed in the Gdansk shipyard.

Solidarity union activists at the shipyard in the Baltic seaport issued a statement obtained by United Press International Saturday saying ''the moods of the crew are bad, and the workers are dissatisfied'' over low wages and the way their problems are handled.

But a Solidarity source at the shipyard said, ''It is not sure the strike will take place.''

There was no comment from Mazowiecki on the threatened job action.

The Solidarity prime minister focused his remarks at the meeting on demands for a future German constitution following unification to have a clause on no territorial claims to any country in Europe.

''The final settlement of the unification issue means the regulating of the matter of our border in a treaty,'' Mazowiecki said.

''The future constitution of the unified Germany should have a clause that the country does not have any territorial claims to anybody,'' he said. ''Only such a settlement could be regarded satisfactory.''

Poland is concerned about its western borders on the Oder and Neisse rivers because West Germany has never recognized the German territory Poland recovered at the end of World War II.

Poland will take part in a portion of planned reunification talks among World War II victors - the United States, Soviet Union, Britain and France - and the two Germanys dealing with the border issue.

PITTSBURGH (MARCH 31) UPI - About 70 caged dogs and cats and a veterinary clinic were destroyed Saturday morning in a fire at the Western Pennsylvania Humane Society building, devastating animal lovers and society employees.

''A fire is a tragedy whether it be humans or animals,'' said Mary Klein, manager of the society's pet cemetery, located away from the fire-ravaged shelter. Several animals were rescued with injuries and there were no reports of staff injuries.

Fire officials said the three-alarm fire erupted at about 7 a.m. in the kitchen of the 1 1/2-story brick building on the city's North Side. Smoke and flames were reported coming out of the roof.

Fire Capt. Frank Henry said the cause of the blaze was under investigation and that he had ''no idea how the fire started.''

Klein said the pet cemetery received numerous calls from people expressing their condolences.

Klein said the fire ruined $200,000 worth of improvements to the refurbished veterinary clinic, which was expected to be opened in a couple weeks.

Among the animals killed in the fire was the office mascot, a stray cat named Sylvester who was cared for by the society's executive secretary, Dorothy Zewe, Klein said.

''He lived there for many years,'' Klein said. ''Sylvester was as nasty as Satan. Nobody could steal Sylvester. He loved his home there.''

PARIS (MARCH 31) UPI - France is sending 15 more combat aircraft and additional troops to eastern Chad as an ''implicit warning'' to Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi to halt attacks by his forces on Chadian President Hissene Habre's troops, Defense Ministry sources said Saturday.

The warplanes together with transport aircraft and support troops are being deployed from French bases at the Chadian capital of Ndjamena and Bouar in the Central African Republic, the sources said.

France currently has about 1,000 troops stationed in Chad. But only 100 of these are based in the east of the country in the city of Abeche, some 150 miles southeast of the Sudanese border.

Fighting broke out in the area a week ago between Chadian troops and about 2,500 members of the ''Islamic Legion,'' a Libyan-backed force consisting partly of mercenaries and led by the rebel Chadian commander Idriss Deby from a base in Sudan.

Only about 30 French civilians live in Abeche but French influence is strong in Chad, a former French colony that has fought an on-again off-again war with Libyan forces over the mineral-rich Aouzou Strip since 1973.

Defense Ministry officials described the ''limited reinforcement'' of French forces in the West African nation as ''an implicit warning'' to the Libyan-backed forces that captured the towns of Baha and Tine on the Chadian-Sudanese border last week that Paris intends to protect the Habre government.

Regular Chadian army units are believed to have regrouped at Iriba, some 36 miles to the west of the Sudanese border, Defense Ministry sources said.

The French Defense Ministry said Friday in a statement that ''clashes having taken place in the east of Chad, a limited reinforcement of the Epervier force has been decided.''

The French contingent in Chad, called ''Epervier,'' was deployed in Chad Feb. 15, 1986, in response to a Libyan offensive in the north of the country.

The reinforcement was decided ''in agreement with the Chadian authorities '' said the French statement, ''in order to guarantee the security of French troops present in that region.''

Libya has denied any involvement in the fighting. Forces loyal to Habre carried out a series of raids into Sudanese territory against the rebels in October and November.

In August 1989, Chad and Libya agreed to settle their territorial claims within a year. Chadian and Libyan foreign ministers met Monday and Tuesday in Libreville, the Gabonese capital, to try and resolve their differences.

Chad protested to the U.N. Security Council in a letter Monday over what it said was an attack by the Libyan-backed ''Islamic Legion.''

Le Monde, a leading French newspaper, said Saturday the French reinforcement was ''due to the aggressiveness of Libya, denounced again by Ndjamena after an ephemeral reconciliation, and also, it seems, to the incapacity of President Hissene Habre to reconcile all the Chadian parties.''

ST. PAUL, MN (MARCH 31) UPI - Three fired Northwest Airlines pilots have withdrawn their requests for a quick hearing by the National Transportation Safety Board to prepare their defense against charges they flew a jetliner while intoxicated.

Tuesday's scheduled hearing on the crew's appeal of the Federal Aviation Administration's revocation of their licenses was cancelled. Attorneys for the pilots said they wanted to concentrate on defending federal felony charges against the three.

''The criminal charges are quite serious and carry serious penalties,'' said Mark McDermott, an attorney for fired copilot Robert Kirchner. ''The pilot's license cases have to take a back seat, temporarily.''

Safety board spokeswoman Drucella Andersen said Friday the agency received letters from attorneys for Kirchner, 35, Highland Ranch, Colo., and flight engineer Joseph Balzer, 34, Antioch, Tenn., waiving their rights to expedited hearings. Capt. Norman Prouse, 51, Conyers, Ga., waived his right earlier.

The defense attorneys asked that the cases be placed on the board's non-emergency calendar, which means that the appeals will be heard within one year.

Northwest fired the men following their arrest March 8 at the completion of a March 8 flight from Fargo, N.D., to Minneapolis. The plane, with 91 passengers on board, landed safely.

The three were charged by federal and North Dakota authorities after tests showed they had blood-alcohol levels above allowable limits.

The FAA was criticized after it was learned that one of its inspectors had been tipped that the three had been drinking heavily the night before the flight but still allowed the Boeing 727 to take off. FAA administrators subsequently initiated policy changes to prevent similar occurences.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (MARCH 31) UPI - The African National Congress postponed Sunday scheduled April 11 peace talks with the white government to protest the ''unprovoked killing and maiming of defenseless'' demonstrators by the South African police and army.

A ''deeply concerned'' President Frederik de Klerk said the ANC decision was unwarranted. De Klerk had proposed the historic meeting in a bid to remove obstacles still standing in the way of formal power-sharing negotiations on ending the country's racial conflict.

ANC leader Nelson Mandela told a crowd of more than 85,000 in the nominally independent black homeland of Ciskei Saturday he informed de Klerk by telephone Friday that the ANC's National Executive Committee in exile had decided to suspend the talks.

''He asked me 'why' and I said: 'The action of the police against the people was something we could not tolerate. We can never accept this massacre,''' Mandela told the crowd. ''These do not create a climate conducive to negotiations.''

The Lusaka-based Executive Committee said the talks had been suspended over the killing of 11 blacks and the wounding of nearly 450 in police gunfire Monday during a march by 50,000 in the black township of Sebokeng south of Johannesburg. Police said they fired in self-defense but witness described the actions as unprovoked.

''For the third time in as many weeks, the South African police and army have indulged in the unprovoked killing and maiming of defenseless demonstrators,'' the Executive Committee statement said.

The announcement came a day after the cole of an attempt by Mandela and rival black Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi to halt a war between their followers in the strife-torn province of Natal after three days of fighting that left at least 41 dead. The ANC objected to meeting in a Buthelezi stronghold, citing security concerns.

The death toll rose overnight. Police reported three more deaths in the hard-hit Edendale Valley outside the provincial capital of Pietermaritzburg, where thousands have been left homeless in the upsurge of fighting.

Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu, who Friday canceled a visit to the United States because of the sharp upswing in violence, returned to South Africa from Kenya to hold Sunday church services in Sebokeng and visit shooting victims.

He declined to comment on the suspension of the talks but said he would join other church leaders ''in seeking urgent consultations with the ANC and the government.''

De Klerk said in a speech to the youth wing of his National Party that the police shooting did not warrant scuttling the talks.

He said he is studying a report on the incident but even if ''for argument's sake, there might be room for criticism of police action, I cannot agree that such criticism should stand in the way of discussions.''

De Klerk went on to say his government was ''deeply concerned'' about widespread violence he said was being committed in party by ''ANC supporters,'' Radio South Africa reported.

De Klerk, increasingly concerned over the level of violence in the country since he unveiled his reform program on Feb. 2, lifted a 30-year ban on the ANC and freed Mandela after 27 years in jail, was expected to speak about the matter to parliament on Monday.

A statement by the ANC's National Executive Committee announced the black nationalist organization's decision in a statement distributed in Johannesburg.

''Under the present circumstances, the NEC of the ANC considers it ill-advised to proceed with the arrangements to meet de Klerk and his colleagues on April 11,'' the statement said. ''Effective from this moment, all arrangements for this meeting stand suspended until further notice.

''The NEC shall convene a special sitting to review the situation within five days,'' it said.

De Klerk's government named its nine-member delegation earlier this week. Although the ANC had not named its entire team, it was to be led by Mandela.

The talks would have been the first between the ANC and the ruling National Party since it was elected to power in 1948 on a platform of protecting the interests of the minority white Afrikaner population.

Among the issues to be discussed was de Klerk's refusal to meet ANC demands to lift a nearly 4-year-old state of emergency before formal talks on a new constitution could begin.

LONDON (MARCH 31) UPI - The duchess of York, who recently gave birth to her second daughter, faces one of her toughest personal challenges yet - reshaping her poor royal image.

With media and public attention focused on the former Sarah Ferguson as the mother of the newest heir to the British throne, she has another chance to lose her stigma as one of the most unpopular members of the royal family, said Harold Brooks-Baker, publisher of Burke's Peerage, a bible of the aristocracy.

Eugenie Victoria Helena was born March 23 to Prince Andrew and his red-haired wife, nicknamed ''Fergie.''

''In my opinion the birth of this royal child, which will put her in the limelight for a few weeks once again, must be followed by some constructive work, something that pulls at the heartstrings of the public,'' Brooks-Baker said.

Princess Diana managed to shake off the tags of ''Disco Di'' and ''Dynasty Di'' with her extensive charity work and her close relationship with her two sons, William and Harry.

Princess Anne was the most unpopular royal person of her generation in the early 1970s, but her image improved markedly after she took on the charity Save the Children. Brooks-Baker said the image makeover was impressive ''considering the fact that she has admitted on radio that she doesn't even like children.''

At least one newspaper believes the duchess already is on her way to winning hearts.

The Sunday Times wrote of ''the transformation of Fergie,'' with pictures of her metamorphasis from ''Hooray Henrietta'' in 1986, to ''fashion victim in a designer disaster'' in 1987, very pregnant in 1988, and slim, ''glamorous mum-to-be'' in 1989.

''She is only too aware of the flak she is getting, and is determined not to make the same mistakes again,'' Andrew Morton, the duchess's biographer told The Times. ''It's already apparent that the duchess is relaunching her public image.''

A spirited woman who loves to joke with friends, ski and fly helicopters, the duchess has often attracted more public criticism than admiration.

British tabloids have pounced each of her perceived flaws from the size of her ''bum'' to her wardrobe and her performance as a wife and mother.

One of the fiercest media attacks came soon after the birth of Princess Beatrice, who was left in the care of a nanny when her mother flew to Australia for six weeks to visit her sister and see Andrew when his naval ship was in port.

The duchess's fondness for ski holidays and food have prompted a succession of tabloid nicknames such as ''Her Royal Idleness,'' ''Freeloading Fergie'' and ''The duchess of Pork.''

A recent profile of the duchess in Tatler magazine that told of the duchess's penchant for telling off-color jokes was said to have brought her to tears.

Royal watchers said the duchess, stung by the unfavorable attention, has been trying to overcome her bad ratings by losing weight and visiting charities.

But Brooks-Baker said she will need to keep up the good work if she wants to shed her freewheeling image forever.

''She has lost weight to please the public. She has been more accessible, more open, attending charity events,'' he said. ''She has done everything right, and she still is unpopular.''

In a recent poll, Britons gave only a 45 percent approval rating to the 30-year-old duchess, the second lowest score to Prince Edward's 37 percent. Princess Diana received 84 percent in the poll published by The Sunday Times newspaper Jan. 21.

Part of Fergie's image problem may be the inevitable comparisons to the thin and fashionable Princess Diana. While the royal sisters-in-law are close, Diana's demure, chic image has made the duchess of York seem even more flamboyant yet frumpy in contrast.

Another problem is the duchess's roots as a commoner.

''The public likes to think of members of the royal family ... as better than they are in every way,'' Brooks-Baker said. ''The duchess of York's early life was a bit untidy, and the public knows about that. It makes them feel that she isn't up to being a member of the royal family.''

But he expressed optimism that the duchess, like Princess Anne before her, will master her public-relations problem.

"She is intelligent, able and gifted and she is incredibly nice," Brooks-Baker said, with "far more natural charm and easy approach than the princess (Anne)."

MEXICO CITY (MARCH 31) UPI - The United States ceased beaming Spanish language TV-Marti test telecasts to Cuba Saturday morning, the official Cuban news agency Prensa Latina said.

Prensa Latina, monitored in Mexico City, quoted an official Cuban source as saying that the TV-Marti signal, started on a test basis earlier in the week, was not received Saturday.

''The so-called TV-Marti was absent, but the reasons are still unknown,'' Prensa Latina said.

It could not be immediately confirmed in Washington whether the telecasts had been cut off Saturday morning.

Mark Dillen, a spokesman for the State Department, said, ''I don't know whether there was a broadcast this morning or not. We had indicated that the broadcasts would continue, but I have not had a read-out on it today.''

The TV-Marti project began test broadcasts Tuesday, but Cuban authorities jammed the telecast throughout, arguing that that it violated Cuba's sovereignty and several international communications regulations.

Foreign ministers of seven Latin American coutries, who held a two-day meeting in Mexico City, Friday expressed serious concern over the TV-Marti telecast to Cuba.

Mexican Foreign Minister Fernando Solana told reporters Firday that his counterparts from Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela rejected unilateral actions that endanger hemispheric relations.

''They expressed their serious concern over the launching of television transmissions from the United States of America to Cuban territory through the project known as TV-Marti...,'' Solana said.

''What concerns us is that (the United States) is acting against international law that is basic for peace in the world,'' said Peruvian Foreign Minister Guillermo Larco Cox. ''The political aggression (of the United States) is increasing in intensity with time.''

MOSCOW (MARCH 31) UPI - Seepage of a highly toxic herbicide into a river that supplies water to the Bashkir republic capital of Ufa forced an emergency shutdown of drinking water, the official news agency Tass said Saturday.

Residents in the city of more than 1 million were told not to prepare food for at least 24 hours until water supplies were deemed safe, Tass said. The dispatch did not say when the event occurred.

Ufa is the capital of the central Bashkir Autonomous Soviet Republic and lies 372 miles southeast of Moscow. The republic has a population of 3.8 million people.

The water supply was halted after specialists found that concentrations of the toxic herbicide phenol had ''exceeded the norm by 500,000 times,'' Tass said. A herbicide is any chemical substance used to destroy plants or weeds.

''Ufa radio immediately broadcast an announcement banning the use of water '' Tass said.

Kindergarden children, the elderly and the autonomous republic's hospital patients were served bottled mineral water, fruit juice and dry bread.

The herbicide had entered the river that supplies Ufa's drinking water system from a small lake that receives waste from the Khimprom chemical production association.

''The waste had been accumulating there all winter and simply drifted into the Ufimka River, from which residents take their water,'' Tass said.

A decision was made to shut down several of the Khimprom herbicide facilities and to block off all exits from the lake, and a commission was set up to investigate the incident ''even though it is clear that it was caused by carelessness,'' Tass said.

''The plant's purification and several of its shops producing herbicides have been in a faulty condition for a long time,'' Tass reported.

There was no indication whether the poisoning of Ufa's water supply had caused any casualties.

NEW YORK (MARCH 31) UPI - After a solemn prayer service Saturday, the bodies of more than 50 victims of the Happy Land club fire were put aboard a jet bound for Honduras, the homeland many had left in search of the American dream.

The DC-8 jet chartered by the American Red Cross was scheduled to leave John F. Kennedy International Airport early Sunday morning, landing at 9:30 a.m. in San Pedro Sula, Honduras, where Honduran President Rafael Leonardo Callejas and many of the victims' relatives were expected to meet the flight.

The Rev. Kevin Sullivan of the Catholic Charities, standing in front of 39 metal caskets in the damp gray morning, gave a brief blessing before a crowd of relief workers and officials. The caskets, each covered with a bouquet of flowers, were placed in wooden shipping containers.

American Red Cross officials said they expected hearses to deliver to the airport hanger at least 11 more bodies of victims of the fire, which killed 87 people in one of the worst mass slayings in U.S. history.

Meanwhile, members of the city's special task force raided 261 suspected illegal social clubs overnight, said Sgt. Norris Hollomon, a police spokeman.

The action was the first on a weekend night by the task force since the fire last Sunday, and police found 65 illegal clubs operating Friday. Twenty-nine vacate orders, 57 summonses and 80 notices of violation were issued and one person was arrested, Hollomon said.

Since the city began the crackdown Sunday night, the task force has visited a total of 1,156 suspected social clubs, of which 125 were open. Vacate orders have been issued to 321 clubs.

The American Red Cross paid more than $40,000 for the DC-8 charter flight, and also has given the family of each victim $250 to help pay for burial costs, said Ed Hardy, a spokesman for the American Red Cross.

Julio Gonzalez, a Cuban immigrant accused of torching the Happy Land club in a jealous rage, was indicted by a grand jury Friday on 174 counts of murder - two counts for each of the 87 people killed in the fire.

He was charged with 87 counts of second-degree murder for showing ''depraved indifference to human life'' and 87 counts of felony murder for arson. Gonzalez was being held in the psychiatric ward at Bellevue Hospital.

The indictment also charged Gonzalez with two counts of arson, one count of attempted murder and one count of assault.

Enraged his girlfriend had jilted him, Gonzalez, 36, splashed a dollar's worth of gasoline in the lobby of the illegal social club and then set it on fire, police said.

The late-night revelers, most of them young Latin American immigrants, were trapped on the windowless second floor and were asphyxiated as they tried to escape. Firefighters and rescue workers found masses of bodies piled on top of each other.

Wakes and funerals were held Friday for 22 of those killed in the blaze.

Tan Sasha, the Honduran national airline, Friday afternoon flew 23 relatives of victims from Miami to San Pedro Sula, where they began making burial arrangements.

Economy and Finance Minister Moise Koumoue Koffi announced the immediate implementation of the measures on state radio after weeks of demonstrations. The cuts will lead to public sector salary reductions of between 8 and 40 percent.

Demonstrations planned for Saturday's announcement quickly were broken up by police, who had instructions to prevent the violent scenes of the past weeks.

A military helicopter hovered over the city center throughout the morning as the drastic measures were announced.

Detailing the cuts, which are intended as a way of filling a $390 million financing gap in the 1990 budget, the minister said that ''national solidarity'' was necessary in the face of the country's dire economic crisis. The Ivory Coast has suffered from the slump in world prices for its cocoa and coffee crops, which together form 66 per cent of the country's exports.

Union leaders remained adamant in their opposition to the government measures Saturday.

Marcel Ette, secretary general of the Ivory Coast University Teachers' Union, which has led the most vocal protests against the cuts, said ''we will continue to fight the measures which we consider to be the wrong policy and the union executive will be meeting Sunday to discuss our next move.''

But Ette said he did not expect to see the same mass demonstrations as witnessed in past weeks. More than 130 doctors and teachers who were arrested in the past seven days since have been released on the orders of 85-year-old President Felix Houphouet-Boigny.

The finance minister's statement comes a day after the government announced the reopening of all schools and colleges in Abidjan. Campus violence led to their closure March 3.

Students at the University of Abidjan and pupils at schools in the city are expected to return to classes Monday.

Effective Sunday cuts public sector salaries ranged from 40 percent for ministers and the directors of national institutions to 8 percent for government employees earning between $300 to $750.

Public sector salaries below $300 per month, which includes most of the country's 97,000 government employees, will not be affected by the cuts. The minister also announced a 10 percent tax increase for private sector business.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (MARCH 31) UPI - Hungary's two main opposition parties announced Saturday they have forged alliances with smaller parties to improve their chances in next Sunday's runoff election.

But the rival parties, the Hungarian Democratic Forum and the Alliance of Free Democrats, hinted for the first time they also might consider joining forces for a ''grand alliance'' against the Hungarian Socialist Party, successor to the old Communist Party.

''It would be a marriage of inconvenience,'' said Janos Kis of the Free Democrats when questioned about a possible coalition on the ''168 Hours'' talk show, broadcast on Budapest radio.

The center-right Forum and the liberal, pro-Western Free Democrats were bitter rivals in the campaign leading up to the initial round of Hungary's first democratic elections in more than four decades.

The Forum finished in first place with 24.7 percent of the vote and the Free Democrats came in second with 21.3 percent in the preliminary balloting March 25. Both easily outperformed the Socialists, which came in fourth with 10.8 percent.

Forum leaders said Saturday they have reached agreements on alliances with two other conservative groups, the Independent Smallholders Party and the Christian Democratic People's Party, to improve their chances in the second round of elections.

Under the terms of the agreements, the parties would unite behind the candidate of the party that ran strongest in each district.

The Indepenent Smallholders finished third in the first round, with 11.7 percent of the vote, while the Christian Democrats came in sixth with 6.9 percent.

The Free Democrats announced they had forged a similar alliance with the Young Democrats, who finished in fifth place last Sunday with 8.9 percent of the vote.

In another development, reform socialist and state minister Imre Pozsgay told state-run television he has decided not to run in his home district in next week's runoff election.

Pozsgay, who at one time was favored as the Socialists' choice for president, managed only a third-place showing in his district in the initial round of balloting.

He still has a chance of being elected to Parliament on a national list.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (MARCH 31) UPI - An unknown terrorist group claimed responsibility Saturday for the attempted assassination of a Polish diplomat and his wife, who were wounded when gunmen fired at them from a speeding car.

The group also warned Poland in a letter sent to a leftist newspaper against helping Soviet Jews emigrate to Israel.

Polish Consulate Borgan Sarkis, 47, and his wife, Eva Sarkis, 30, were shot outside the Bristol Hotel in Syrian-policed west Beirut late Friday and taken to the nearby American University Hospital suffering from bullet wounds, police said.

The leftist daily As Safir said a statement delivered to its offices in west Beirut and signed by ''The Revolutionary Action Organization, the Arab Resistance Front, (and) the Martyr Suleiman Halabi Unit'' claimed responsibility for the ''Polish diplomats operations.''

''We warn the Polish government against providing any assistance in transporting Soviet Jews to our sacred Palestinian land,'' the handwritten Arabic statement said.

As Safir said the statement, under the title ''Communique No.1,'' was delivered to its offices about midnight.

The Polish Foreign Ministry condemned the terrorist attack and said that security measures were being tightened at Polish embassies in Arab countries, which employ an estimated 10,000 Poles.

''Poland will do its best to counteract terrorism,'' said the Foreign Ministry in a statement.

Last week, a fire gutted a hall at the Soviet Embassy in west Beirut, killing one Soviet diplomat and wounding another.

The pro-Iranian fundamentalist group Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine recently threatened to attack targets of states that facilitate the migration of Jews to Israel.

The Polish government said in Warsaw Friday that it will offer ''humanitarian aid'' to Jews emigrating from the Soviet Union to Israel via Poland, but stressed that Palestinians have a right to their own state.

MADISON, WI (MARCH 31) UPI - Joseph O. Hirschfelder, a founder of modern theoretical chemistry and a key participant in the Manhattan Project during World War II, has died of cancer.

Hirschfelder, a University of Wisconsin-Madison professor emeritus of chemistry, was 78 when he died Friday at his home. Services are pending.

He was a key player in the creation of the atomic bomb built in Los Alamos N.M., that was used against Japan.

Hirschfelder, a Baltimore native, was the first to predict the existence of radioactive fallout, the UW said. He authored 232 scientific papers and edited several scientific monographs, but was best known as the co-author of the work ''The Molecular Theory of Gases and Liquids.''

He also made contributions toward a fundamental understanding of flames and detonation. In recent years, he studied quantum mechanical studies of molecular structure and intermolecular forces.

The chemist studied the interaction of molecules with external electromagnetic fields, and developed equations for motion for molecular properties such as spin and momentum.

Hirschfelder in 1976 was given the National Medal of Science, the nation's highest scientific achievement award. He joined the chemistry faculty at Wisconsin in 1937 and - except for a leave of absence during World War II to work at the Los Alamos weapons laboratory - spent his entire career there.

He earned doctoral degrees in chemistry and physics in 1936 at Princeton University. He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth, and a sister, Rosalie Akerlof, of Walnut Creek, Calif.

MOSCOW (MARCH 31) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev appealed to Lithuanian lawmakers Saturday to immediately annul the republic's declaration of independence from the Soviet Union and warned of ''grave consequences if the voice of reason is not heeded now.''

Urging talks on the republic's future within the framework of the Soviet Constitition, Gorbachev reiterated that the independence act by Lithuania's Parliament on March 11 was ruled illegal four days later by a resolution of the Congress of People's Deputies, the supreme legislative organ in the land.

He said the Lithuanian leadership's ''attempts to break the republic's ties with the Soviet Union and and its tactics of unilateral and ultimatum-like actions endanger the normal life and security of all people in the republic, Lithuanians and non-Lithuanians, and are a cause of grave concern in the country.''

''I would like to state once again that this path is ruinous and will lead only to a dead end,'' Gorbachev said in an appeal carried by the Tass news agency designated ''urgent'' and then read to the entire nation on the TV evening news show ''Vremya.''

In a seperate appeal to the people of Lithuania, he said: ''I am addressing you at a difficult time for our country. The March 11 decisions of the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet have brought us to a difficult point.''

''If the voice of reason is not heeeded now, developments can have grave consequences for all of us,'' he said without elaborating. ''We must be united in striving to prevent this.''

''I have appealed to the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet, proposing that it immediately annul the illegal acts it has adopted,'' he said. ''This will open a possibilty for discussing the entire range of problems on the solely acceptable basis - within the framework of the U.S.S.R. Constitution.''

The statement was the first definitive outline of Gorbachev's basis for a dialogue with the Lithuanians about their desire to separate from the Soviet Union to which they were annexed in 1940 along with Estonia and Latvia.

Since the declaration by the republican legislature, Gorbachev has refused to negotiate with Lithuania, saying Moscow negotiates only with foreign states and leaving the Lithuanians in growing isolation. Not one nation has recognized Lithuania's uniltateral declaration of sovereignty.

In his statements Saturday, Gorbachev escalated the pressure on embattled Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis, who as the head of the Sajudis nationalist movement spearheaded the independence movement.

Gorbachev, who has been under intense international pressure not to use force or intimidate the Lithuanians, put the blame for the crisis squarely on the Lithuanian legislators of the Sajudis movement.

He asked why the Lithuanians chose to challenge the Soviet Union when they knew that a law on secession for any republic was about to be debated in Parliament. It comes up for renewed discussion on Tuesday.

The Soviet leader also ridiculed the assurances of the Sajudis nationalists that going it alone immediately would not hurt the republic economically or risk their losing any territory to other republics.

Gorbachev said that the Byelorussian republic was already demanding Lithuanian territory it considers Byelorussian.

The Tass news agency said Byelorussia will demand the return of large tracts of the territory of present-day Lithuania if that republic secedes from the Soviet Union.

''If Lithuania secedes from the Soviet Union, Byelorussia will not consider itself bound by all laws, decrees and acts dealing with the turnover of part of Byelorussian lands to Lithuania,'' Tass said citing a statement by the Byelorussian Supreme Soviet, or parliament.

Parts of Byelorussia were ceded to Lithuania under 1940 acts which followed the annexation of the Baltic republic by the Soviet Union.

The Byelorussian statement appered to tighten the noose around Lithuania's unilateral declaration of independence.

Throughout last week, Soviet authorities have forcibly and increasingly reimposed central Soviet control over the life in the rebel republic.

Paratroopers entered hospitals to forcibly apprehend young Lithuanian deserters from the Soviet army who thought they were protected by Lithuania's new independent status.

The Soviet army took over the offices of the independent Lithuanian Communist Party, returning parts of the building to loyal Moscow communists.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 1) UPI - Salutes to the liberation of Eastern Europe and barbs at Washington officialdom dominated the annual Gridiron Club white tie dinner Saturday attended by a parade of dignitaries led by President Bush.

The club, which has satirized in song the follies and foibles of the nation's leading dignitaries for 105 years, featured Democrats reluctant to run against the politically popular Bush.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., spoke for the Democrats and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney spoke for the Republicans with Bush, the 18th consecutive president to attend the dinner, making the closing remarks.

In the traditional ''speech in the dark,'' Gridiron President David Broder a columnist for The Washington Post, welcomed Bush to an evening that ''has justly come to be known as the ''Night of the Long Butter Knives.''

This year's show was produced by music chairman Walter Mears of The Associated Press and skit producers were Richard Cooper of the Los Angeles Times and Susan Page of Newsday.

In the show, House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt told Buffalo Bob Strauss, ''We are here tonight to learn to kick and bite. ... If honesty won't fly, then we'll learn to lie.''

Roger Ailment, a take-off on imagemaker Roger Ailes, was hired to teach the Demcorats ''to play rough, like the Republicans do, start punchin' low and make up some charges too.''

The reluctant Democrats were playing it safe. They sang:

''We won't run - don't make us.

''We can't run - don't take us.

''We shan't run - we're bound to fail.

''We'd rather wait and run against Danny Quayle.''

To the tune of ''They All Laughed,'' the chorus sang about former President Jimmy Carter and his new popularity having won free and fair elections - ''in Nicaragua.''

''Born again - back on the talk shows.

''At long last, he's getting kudos.

''Peanut man, you've got the last laugh now.''

National security adviser Brent Scowcroft sang ''Deng Xiao-Ping'' to the music of ''China Town:''

''Deng Xiaoping, oh, Den Xiaoping.

''George still thinks you're keen.

''Though those tanks at Tiananmen Square

''Were a little mean.''

First lady Barbara Bush, who was present, heard herself portrayed as a wife who is much more liberal than her husband.

''The man that I married can sometimes be ''A little too far to the right of me

''He preaches pro-life in the name jof God

''He'd send a drug lord to a firing squad.

''The man that I married - who calls me 'Bar'

''Would machine-gun a deer from an armored car.''

The closing number was based on a World War II song ''When the Lights Go On Again All Over the World.''

''See the lights go on again,

''All over the world

''From Moscow to East Berlin

''New freedoms unfurl.''

Seven new members initiated into the club were Ronald Ostrow of the Los Angeles Times; Thomas Brazaitis of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Charles

Thatcher: '650 applicants and no vacancy'

LONDON (UPI) - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher tried Saturday to kill off speculation she will retire, declaring there is ''no vacancy'' at 10 Downing Street.

Thatcher's speech to the Conservative Central Council in Cheltenham, in the west of England, was studded with mostly light-hearted references to the bids to unseat her.

In a speech intended to ease party fears not only on the leadership question but also on the economy, Thatcher made her intentions apparent from the outset.

While expressing pleasure in being in Cheltenham, an elegant city where many people move after retirement, Thatcher, 64, said: ''To avoid any possible misunderstanding, and at the risk of disappointing a few gallant colonels, let me make one thing absolutely clear. I haven't come to Cheltenham to retire.

''Current status, 650 applicants, and no vacancy.''

With Thatcher's political fortunes plummeting, former Conservative Party Chairman Norman Tebbit said Friday he would run for prime minister if she ever resigned.

In a spate of public appearance, Former Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine has seemed to be campaigning for her job without actually declaring his attentions.

Thatcher also defended the hugely unpopular community charge, or poll tax, which becomes effective in England and Wales Sunday.

Outside about 200 people demonstrated against the head charge, and 48 of them were taken away by police when the press of the crowd threatened to topple crowd-control barriers. Two police were slightly hurt.

Tens of thousands of people demonstrated against the tax in central London and several hundred people turned violent, clashing with police. About 60 police and civilians were hurt and at least 100 arrested, Scotland Yard said.

Thatcher closed on a passionate note, saying a shining future was within Britain's reach, if only there was the will to press on.

''I have the stomach for that fight, so do you, and so, I believe, does Britain.''

LONDON (MARCH 31) UPI - Dozens of people were injured and at least 100 were arrested Saturday when a tax protest turned violent after marchers staged a demonstration outside Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's office.

''Many hundreds of hooligans have used the march as an excuse to attack police,'' a Scotland Yard spokeswoman said.

More than 40 police were injured, mostly on their heads and faces, and at least 20 civilians were hurt, she said.

In Glasgow, an estimated 25,000 people demonstrated against the community charge, or poll tax, which was introduced in Scotland last year. At least 100 were arrested on public disorder charges, Scotland Yard said.

Two hundred people marched in Cheltenham, in western England, where Thatcher defended the levy in a speech to Conservative Party members. Police hauled off 48 demonstrators.

The poll tax, which goes into effect in England and Wales Sunday, requires local city councils to set a flat sum that must be paid by every Briton who is at least 18 years old, with some exceptions.

Unlike the income tax, or the property tax it replaces, the community charge does not discriminate according to wealth. Consequently, the richest man in England pays as much as one of his servants.

The tax has been called ''political cyanide'' for the Conservatives.

Violent clashes between police and anti-tax mobs have become a regular item on the nightly news, and the party's popularity has plunged to its lowest level in nearly two decades.

In London, the majority of the tens of thousands of people opposed to the poll tax were peaceful in Trafalgar Square. The trouble began as they moved down Whitehall, toward the Houses of Parliament.

About 200 to 300 demonstrators stopped outside at the newly installed gates to Downing Street, where the prime minister lives and works. The thousands of people who were following were held up, causing confusion.

A march steward was shouted down when he told the sit-down demonstrators to move on.

Hundreds of police quickly moved in, some of them on horseback. Demonstrators taunted police, and some hurled bottles, cans and stones at them.

An estimated 70 police and demonstrators were injured in the fighting. One policeman fell unconscious after he was hit by hurled debris.

Some of the mob tore a Union Jack from an official flag pole, then pulled down the 20-foot pole itself.

The last time an English government imposed a head tax was in 1381, precipitating the peasants' revolt, when mobs beheaded the archbishop of Canterbury and treasury. The tax was abandoned.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (MARCH 31) UPI - Rebels of the leftist Morazanist National Liberation Front opened fire Saturday on a bus carrying 28 U.S. soldiers, wounding seven, including three seriously, Radio America reported.

The bus left the U.S. Palmerola military base bound for Tegucigalpa, 53 miles to the south, but leftist rebels intercepted the bus about 12 miles from the city, Radio America said.

The rebels fired at least 10 shots into the vehicle about 1 p.m., damaging the engine and wounding seven soldiers, the radio said. The broadcast said the leftist rebels of the Morazanist National Liberation Front later claimed responsibility for the attack.

Radio America said the seven wounded soldiers, including three in serious condition, were immediately taken to Tegucigalpa's Escuela Hospital, where they were treated.

The broadcast said five of the wounded were later transferred to the Palmerola base, while two were still under observation at Escuela Hospital.

Radio America quoted a doctor there saying the victims arrived at the hospital at 1:30 p.m. and that one of them was undergoing surgery to ALTONA, NY (APRIL 1) UPI - Mohawk Indian leaders met Saturday with police investigating a burst of gunfire that hit a Vermont Army National Guard helicopter over a tribal encampment and forced it to make an emergency landing.

State police were uncertain who fired the shots that injured a doctor aboard the low-flying chopper Friday. But they were treating the 5,500-acre encampment as a crime scene, and set up roadblocks and searched anyone entering or leaving the area, troopers said.

Three bullets struck the ''Huey'' helicopter as it returned from an emergency medical mission. The chopper began losing oil pressure and the pilot brought it down safely in a field in Ganienkeh Mohawk Indian territory near Lake Champlain just south of the U.S.-Canadian border.

Dr. James VanKirk, 27, a native of Chambersburg, Pa., was struck in the bicep by one of the bullets. He was recuperating at a hospital Saturday with his arm in a sling.

''I had absolutely no sensation in my right arm,'' he said of the shooting. ''It was terror, I thought my arm had been blown off.''

Trooper Richard Garcia said Maj. Robert Leu and other state police officers met with Mohawk leaders Saturday to discuss the shooting. Garcia said the talks reached a ''critical point'' but added that he could not provide additional details.

Mohawks in upstate New York have been feuding with the state and federal governments since July, when state police and the FBI raided several gambling casinos on the St. Regis Indian Reservation along the St. Lawrence River near Massena.

Mohawks at the encampment some 130 miles north of Albany and nearly 50 miles east of the reservation denied Indian activists shot at the helicopter.

''They deny the shot came from anyone in their community,'' said the Rev. Richard Campbell, pastor of Scotia Methodist Church, who has worked with the community. ''In my 13 years of knowing them, I have never known them to lie.''

VanKirk, a second-year resident at the Medical Center Hospital of Vermont in Burlington, was flying back to the hospital after an aborted medical pickup when he was hit by the bullet. He said it felt like a ''bomb'' went off in his shoulder.

''My initial response was surprise, and I looked to see if anything in the helicopter had blown up. And I looked to see what had happened and didn't see anything. Then over the headset, I heard the pilot say that we've been hit, we're losing oil pressure, we're going down,'' VanKirk said.

The bullet left his body after striking the collarbone. A specialist in internal medicine, VanKirk said he was lucky the bullet might have struck his spine had it not been diverted by the collarbone.

''The whole thing scares me to think about what could have happened. It was incredibly good fortune that the bullet went the direction that it did. A matter of millimeters and it could have done a lot of serious damage,'' he said.

VanKirk said the incident was a ''complete fluke,'' but added he would not participate in future helicopter rescue missions over New York state.

He said he expected to be out of the hospital within ''days,'' and back on the job within two weeks.

The Vermont Army National Guard helicopter was from the Delta 150th Aviation Battalion.

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (APRIL 1) UPI - The Nicaraguan Contra rebels have started to peacefully disarm, handing over their weapons to the Honduran armed forces, a presidential spokesman said Saturday.

At least 80 Contra rebels have turned over their arms to the Honduran military in the presence of observers of the United Nations Organization for Central America, or ONUCA, which is charged with overseeing the demobilization and disarming of Contras, said Gilberto Golstein, private secretary of Honduran President Rafael Leonardo Callejas.

''For the Honduran government this is big news because the peaceful disarming of the armed Nicaraguan Resistence (Contras) in our territory has definitively begun,'' said Golstein.

Contra leaders signed an agreement March 23 with a delegation representing Nicaraguan President-elect Violeta Chamorro. Under the agreement, known as the Toncontin Declaration, the rebels must disarm and demobilize before April 20.

Chamorro, of the U.S.-backed National Opposition Union coalition, or UNO, won a surprise victory in Feb. 25 elections and is scheduled to assume office April 25.

Golstein said that Contra Commander-in-Chief Isreal Galeano, known as Commander Franklin, had sent a letter to the Honduran president, affirming the Contras' readiness to comply with the accord.

''The Nicaraguan Resistence is taking all of the leading steps so that the said promise becomes a reality,'' Galeano said in the letter, whose contents were disclosed Saturday.

Golstein said the Honduran government will send a copy of Galeano's letter to Chamorro to make her aware that the Toncontin accord is ratified by the Contra leadership.

''The demobilization is a fact. With this (the ratification) there is no doubt that the (Contras) accept handing over their arms,'' Golstein said.

''It is estimated that there are currently about 5,000 Contras in Honduran territory, although this figure is subject to confirmation,'' Golstein said. Some reports say there are between 10,000 and 12,000 Contras based in camps in Honduras near the Nicaraguan border.

Also Saturday, Chamorro and the Contras named a commission to oversee the disarming and demobilization of rebels and their families currently living in Honduras.

BOSTON (APRIL 1) UPI - Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., said Saturday he will not announce a re-election bid until the House Ethics Committee finishes its investigation of his relationship with a former male prostitute.

Frank took the wait-and-see stance at a news conference preceding a 50th birthday party his supporters threw at the Copley Plaza hotel. The $250 per person event was a fund-raiser for Frank's political war chest.

''I'm going to wait until the ethics process is completed,'' Frank said.

Frank was joined at the event by Reps. Tom Lantos and Norman Mineta, both D-Calif., who praised their five-term House colleague.

Lantos, co-chairman of the congressional Human Rights Caucus, endorsed Frank for re-election and said he will encourage him to run again.

Frank would not speculate on what the Ethics Committee will decide or when its investigation will be finished.

Frank has admitted hiring ex-prostitute Steven Gobie and later employing him as his housekeeper and driver. He has denied Gobie's allegations that he knew Gobie was running a prostitution operation from Frank's former Capitol Hill apartment in Washington.

Gobie also claimed the Newton Democrat fixed parking tickets that Gobie received while running the prostitution ring.

One police officer was knocked unconscious when he was hit by hurled debris.

(MARCH 31) UPI - Police in Nepal shot and wounded four pro-democracy demonstrators in a suburb of Katmandu today. Dozens were arrested in raids on homes to put down growing demands for political freedom in the Himalayan kingdom. Soviet President Gorbachev is warning Lithuanian legislators that there's only one way out of the Soviet Union... and that's to wait for a Soviet law that will allow an ordered process of secession. Gorbachev says Lithuania's attempt to go the road alone will lead to a ''dead end.'' Gorbachev also warns that the republic of Byelorussia will be able to claim lands that are now part of Lithuania.

Tough talk from Moscow to Lithuania...

And anti-tax protests turn violent in Britain...

These stories... and more... next, from United Press International:

Soviet President Gorbachev issued a series of strong warnings to Lithuania today. He said there'd be ''grave consequences'' if Lithuania chose what he called the ''dead end'' road of independence.

For one thing... Gorbachev said... if Lithuania secedes from the Soviet Union, the republic of Byelorussia will feel free to reclaim lands taken from Byelorussia and given to Lithuania after the Russians forcibly took over Lithuania in 1940.

The Soviet leader ridiculed assurances of Lithuanian legislators that going it alone immediately would NOT hurt the republic economically or risk their losing any territory to other republics. NOT one nation has recognized Lithuania's uniltateral declaration of sovereignty.

Gorbachev re-iterated his plea to the legislators to annul their declaration of independence and wait for a Soviet law that would allow republics to apply to secede.

Marchers in London protesting a new head tax in Britain turned violent today and stoned police outside the office of Prime Minister Thatcher.

Police say at least 60 people were injured... more than half of them police. Some of the mob tore a Union Jack from a flag pole, then pulled down the 20-foot pole. Scotland Yard says ''hooligans'' used the march as an excuse to attack police.

In Glasgow, an estimated 25-thousand people demonstrated against the community charge, or poll tax, which was introduced in Scotland last year. At least 100 were arrested on public disorder charges.

Thatcher defended the tax in a speech in Cheltenham. Police hauled off 48 demonstrators there.

The tax goes into effect in England and Wales tomorrow. It requires local city councils to set a flat sum that must be paid by almost all adults, regardless of income.

The last English head tax was imposed in 1381 and started a revolt. The tax was abandoned.

(MARCH 31) UPI - The Soviet parliament has NOT passed the law allowing registration of new political parties... but the Liberal Democrats areN'T waiting.

Delegates from all 15 Soviet republics met in Moscow today and officially founded the Liberal Democratic Party... the first non-Communist policital party of its kind in Soviet history.

The official Soviet news agency Tass recognized the new party... noting that although the legislation to register new parties has not been passed, the amendments to the Soviet constitution adopted in March have paved the way for a multi-party system.

A bevy of new parties ranging from monarchists to anarchists have been waiting in the wings to establish themselves when the laws are adopted.

The Liberal Democrats are against building any specific social system. They favor private property and a market system instead of rigid central planning.

A spokesman for the president of Honduras says the Nicaraguan Contras stationed in Honduras have started to disarm peacefully... handing over their weapons to the Honduran armed forces.

Gilberto Golstein... private secretary to Honduran President Rafael Callejas... says at least 80 Contras have turned over their arms to the Honduran military. The transfers were monitored by United Nations observers.

Contra leaders signed an agreement last month with a delegation representing Nicaraguan President-elect Violeta Chamorro to disarm and demobilize before April 20th. Chamorro takes office April 25th.

Golstein estimates there are about five-thousand Contras in Honduran territory... although he says the figure is subject to confirmation. Some reports say there are between 10-thousand and 12-thousand Contras based in camps in Honduras near the Nicaraguan border.

(MARCH 31) UPI - NASA managers at Cape Canaveral, Florida, today cleared the shuttle Discovery for take-off two days earlier than originally planned.

The flight is set to begin the morning of April 10th. The countdown is to begin three days before lift-off.

One NASA administrator says the shuttle will carry ''one of the most exciting payloads ever.''

The payload is the Hubble Space Telescope, one-and-a-half-BILLION dollars worth of astronomers' dreams.

Sitting in space, the telescope should be able to see with ten times the clarity of Earth-bound instruments. It's said to be the most significant leap forward in astronomy since Galileo first trained his telescope on the heavens 400 years ago. It should answer fundamental questions about the development of the universe.

The earlier departure was made possible by engineers who worked ahead of schedule to hook up electrical connections between Discovery and the telescope, which lies in the shuttle's cargo bay.

Sources say Vice President Quayle hopes to attend the blastoff, schedule permitting.

About 75 caged dogs and cats died today when a fire engulfed a Pittsburgh veterinary clinic.

Fire and clinic officials say the fire broke out at about 7 a-m when NO staff members were in the offices of the Western Pennsylvania Humane Society. Firefighters rescued about five animals and gave them oxygen.

Fire officials say the three-alarm blaze started in a small kitchen area in the one-and-a-half-story brick building. But they have NO idea how it began.

Among the animals killed in the fire was the office mascot... a stray cat named Sylvester who was cared for by the society's executive secretary.

Humane Society officials say the society will rely on donations to rebuild the shelter.

(MARCH 31) UPI - A newborn girl is in an Atlanta hospital, awaiting the birth of her twin sister... in about four months.

Officials at Crawford-Long Hospital of Emory University say Donna Krasenics gave birth Thursday to one-pound, eight-ounce Shakoora Krasenics 15 weeks prematurely. After Shakoora's birth, doctors were able to stop further labor... preventing the other twin from being born.

Shakoora was placed in an incubator in intensive care and is reported in critical but stable condition. Hospital spokeswoman Tisha Burland says the hospital has taken care of much lighter and much sicker babies.

The baby's sister is expected in July.

The 24-year-old mother was listed in good condition, but will have to stay in bed until her second baby is born.

Doctors say this is one of only 14 known cases of its kind in which twins or triplets were born weeks or months apart.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Columbia Savings and Loan Association (NYSE:CSV)(PSE:CSVPRA) announced Sunday a net loss of $591.1 million, or $30.11 per share, primary and fully diluted, for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared with net earnings of $65.0 million, or $1.49 per share, fully diluted, for 1988.

The 1989 net loss included a fourth quarter loss of $379.1 million, or $19.17 per share, primary and fully diluted, compared with earnings of $16.2 million, or 37 cents per share, fully diluted, for the like period in 1988.

Columbia said that the 1989 loss primarily resulted from the substantial decline in the high-yield securities market. Columbia incurred accounting losses of $389.5 million from lower of aggregate cost or market (''LOCOM'') adjustments because its portfolio of high-yield securities are designated for financial reporting purposes as being ''held for sale'' rather than ''held for investment'' as a result of the divestiture mandated by FIRREA.

In addition, credit deterioration in this portfolio resulted in increased provisions for credit loss reserves of $465.6 million in 1989. These reserves, net of charge-offs, stood at $275.0 million at Dec. 31, 1989 and represented approximately 7.5 percent of this portfolio at such date.

Columbia noted that the level of credit deterioration and issuer defaults in 1989 significantly exceeded levels in prior years.

Included in the 1989 loss was a $61.6 million net loss on real estate operations that primarily reflected the weakening in the Southern California office lease market.

Columbia's net interest income decreased by $37.5 million from 1988 levels because of the increased cost of funds during the first half of 1989 and a substantial increase in nonaccrual assets, primarily investment securities and an associated reversal of previously accrued but unpaid dividend and interest income.

The 1989 net loss was offset in part by realization of significant gains on sales of assets. Columbia in 1989 realized gains on sales of investment securities of $116.5 million (before writedowns on other investment securities of $106.2 million) and gains on sales of mortgage-backed securities of $103.3 million.

Columbia is a California-chartered savings and loan association employing 950 people in 29 offices in Southern California.

BONN (APRIL 1) - More than 20,000 foreigners living in West Germany demonstrated in several cities during the weekend against a draft law on foreign residents which would make expulsion easier, police said Sunday.

Demonstrations took place in Hamburg, Munich and West Berlin, and participants chanted "We're the people, too", alluding to a slogan used last fall in East Germany.

The bill adds a number of grounds to the existing ones for expulsion from West Germany. Some speakers at the demonstrations denounced the discrimination they said the bill, if approved by the Bundestag (parliament), would cause by distinguishing between West Germans and foreigners living in the country.

In Munich, the deputy chairman of the Bavarian Social Democratic Party (SPD), Renate Schmidt, called the bill proposed by Interior Minister Wolfgang Schaeuble "retrograde and a sign of an outdated nationalism. At a time when walls are falling, it is irresponsible to want to create new obstacles between people".

PARIS (APRIL 1) - Seven South Americans have been arrested and 438 kg (964 lbs) of pure cocaine seized in two police raids in French Guiana, police said here on Sunday.

The cocaine, with a value of 11 million dollars, was intended for the European market, they said. The hauls are among the largest ever made in France.

When the first seizure of 78 kg was made on March 25, police arrested two Brazilians and one Peruvian, who were charged on Thursday in Cayenne, capital of French Guiana.

The second bust took place on Saturday at Cayenne airport, where 360 kg of "top-quality" cocaine were found in a plane. The pilot and a passenger, probably Colombians, were arrested, as were two Peruvians who were to take delivery of the drug.

The police sources said two independent networks were involved in the two hauls.

TEHERAN (APRIL 1) - The secretary general of the African National Congress (ANC), Alfred Nzo, met here Sunday with President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, Teheran Radio reported.

Mr. Rafsanjani pledged his country's support for the "anti-apartheid struggle of the South African people" and said he hoped the black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela would also visit Iran.

"For many years, I was also a prisoner and that is why I can not forget the feelings of a former detainee toward another prisoner," the radio quoted Mr. Rafsanjani as saying.

Mr. Mandela was freed February 11 after serving 27 years in prison, while the Iranian president was jailed several times before the 1979 Islamic revolution that toppled the shah.

Mr. Nzo informed the president of developments in South Africa since Mr. Mandela's release and called for Iran to maintain its support for the ANC.

The ANC official, who arrived here Friday for a six-day official visit, met Saturday with Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati.

"Since the victory of the Islamic revolution, Iran has stood among the first and foremost countries supporting the people of South Africa against apartheid," Mr. Nzo said in an interview quoted by IRNA news agecny.

"Hundreds of political prisoners are still in South African jails and that is why the ANC has called on its friends to step up international pressure on the South African regime by means of some economic sanctions," he said.

KATHMANDU (APRIL 1) - Senior Indian and Nepalese officials agreed here Sunday to finalize an agreement to end a year-old trade and transit dispute between the two South Asian neighbors, officials said.

At brief talks between Indian Foreign Secretary Shailendra Kumar Singh and his Nepalese counterpart N.B. Shah, the two decided to meet again Monday to seal the accord, the sources said.

The documents will cover new trade and transit agreements, controls on smuggling and mutual security concerns.

India imposed a virtual blockade on this landlocked Himalayan kingdom in March last year after the two sides failed to agree on terms for renewing 1978 treaties on trade and transit.

Nepal, which receives most of its imports from or via India, suffered huge economic losses and widespread shortages because of the dispute.

TALLINN (APRIL 1) - Estonian nationalists Sunday called on Moscow to negotiate on independence for their small republic after parliament here voted not to recognize Estonia's 50-year-old annexation by the Soviet Union.

A delegation comprising members of the Soviet Supreme, or local parliament, and a parallel body just set up, the Estonian Congress, should hold talks with federal authorities, said Estonian Heritage Society chairman Trivimi Velliste.

Estonian president Arnold Ruutel had already made "contact" with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and there should be more such talks, Mr. Velliste told Agence France-Presse.

Mr. Ruutel accompanied several leaders of the Estonian Communist Party to a Kremlin meeting on March 20, he added. His organization is one of three that set up the new Estonian Congress.

The local parliament,in its vote Friday, also proclaimed Estonia to be in a "transition period" leading up to independence.

"We're in a kind of in-between reign now", Mr. Velliste said, "We can no longer speak of Soviet Socialist Estonia, but we can't call it independent Estonia either".

Even if outside observers see the Estonian parliament's move as evidence of the independence movement's radicalization, several nationalist leaders insisted there was no parallel with neighbouring Lithuania, whose parliament declared independence three weeks ago.

Tallinn's move was a "jump forward, but we see no need to declare independence right now" and follow the example of Lithuanians "who chose the hard way".

But for Endel Lippma, a member of parliament, the most important thing was that it had enabled Estonia to change its "constitutional base" by declaring Soviet power there "illegal".

Both he and Mr. Velliste refused to put a time limit on the transition period to independence. "We've waited 50 years, we're in no hurry", the deputy said.

MANCHESTER, England (APRIL 1) - Thirty-two people were injured, including several prison guards, Sunday when about 500 inmates rioted at overcrowded Strangeways prison in this northwestern city, official sources and the local ambulance service said.

The Home Office (interior ministry) said the prisoners surrendered, although some inmates were still moving around freely on the premises that were surrounded by the police.

The prisoners attacked prison guards and had keys to several buildings. Fires broke out in several cells.

About 50 prisoners took up position on the prison roof pelting police officers, according to the police.

Strangeways prison was built in the last century to house 970 inmates but their current number stands at 1,600.

Authorities were unable to explain the cause for the riot at the prison whose chronic overcrowding and aging buildings had been criticised.

The prison mutiny followed violent demonstrations in London and other British cities against a new tax system on Saturday.

A total 133 people were hurt and 341 arrested when a mass protest ended in the capital's worst unrest in decades.

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (APRIL 1) - Nelson Mandela damned the police here Sunday at the biggest rally he has addressed since he was freed from jail on February 11, correspondents said.

An estimated 200,000 supporters turned up at the black township of Motherwell near this south coast port to hear the African National Congress deputy president explain why the ANC had called off preliminary talks scheduled for April 11 to pave the way for negotiations with the government.

Visibly moved by the size of the welcome, Mr. Mandela said the talks had been suspended in protest at the deaths of "at least 16" protestors shot dead by police in Sebokeng township some 70 kilometres (42 miles) south of Johannesburg on Monday.

Expressing the ANC's deep concern at "the wave of oppression experienced by our people," Mr. Mandela said: "The actions of the police against peaceful protest in various parts of the country are in direct conflict with the public positions taken by the government.

"Our people in the townships and in the countryside are experiencing a reality no different from that experienced under (Pieter) Botha and (John) Vorster," South Africa's two previous leaders.

NICOSIA (APRIL 1) - Libya lodged a protest at the expulsion of two of its diplomats from Ethiopia, the Libyan news agency JANA monitored here said Sunday.

The expulsion order came after two bombs exploded in a new apartment wing of the Addis Ababa Hilton Hotel late Friday. Israeli Ambassador Meyer Joffe, who lives in the wing, was believed to be the main target of the attack, which caused no casualties.

The two envoys have been ordered to leave Ethiopia on Monday for what Ethiopian authorities said were "activities incompatible with their status as members of the Libyan People's Bureau", or embassy.

JANA said the Ethiopian ambassador in Tripoli was summoned to the foreign ministry and notified of the protest.

"The decision to expell the two diplomats is unjustified because they have not committed acts inconsistent with the nature of their work", JANA quoted the foreign ministry as saying.

The ministry called on Ethiopian authorities to give an official explanation for the measure. The diplomats were named as Ali Abdala Awiddan and Saied S. Saied.

In recent weeks Addis Ababa has accused unnamed Arab states of stepping up support for Eritrean and Tigre rebels in northern Ethiopia.

The allegations intensified after Ethiopia and Israel announced their decision to re-establish diplomatic relations after 16 years in November.

Three weeks ago university students demonstrated outside the Libyan and Sudanese embassies in Addis Ababa, chanting "hands off Ethiopia".

KATHMANDU (APRIL 1) - Nepalese authorities Sunday ordered the indefinite closure of all schools in Kathmandu and two other towns rocked by pro-democracy protests last week.

The education ministry's announcement, broadcast on state-run television and radio, said only that the academic atmosphere in a few schools had not been favourable for regular classes.

The indefinite closure affects over 400 primary, middle and secondary schools in Kathmandu, Lalitpur and Bhaktapur, officials said.

The school closure came as the government tried to quell a seven-week movement demanding the restoration of multi-party democracy in this Himalayan kingdom, governed for the past three decades through a partyless system known as Panchayat.

Children as young as six or seven have been seen waving anti-Panchayat banners, and the Nepal National Teachers Organization reported that several small children were detained by authorites for one day last week.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 1) - U.S. authorities are aghast at the rising number of women -- of all social classes -- giving birth to impaired babies after smoking crack, a powerful form of cocaine.

The National Drug Control Strategy, a government organization, says 100,000 "crack babies" are born in the United States every year.

But experts say the real number is nearly four times higher because expectant mothers are not regularly tested for drugs.

The National Association for Perinatal Addiction Research and Education (NAPARE), issuing the first hospital study of crack babies, said some 375,000 infants -- or 11 per cent of all U.S. newborns -- were born drug-impaired every year and that the number was rising.

"Cocaine is popular, glamorous, middle-class, plentiful, and possibly more dangerous to an unborn baby than any other illicit drug," said Dr. Ira Chasnoff, NAPARE president.

In D.C. General Hospital in Washington, a city ravaged by the crack epidemic, one in five babies is born to a mother addicted to drugs.

And the phenomenon reaches beyond crowed urban areas to comfortable suburbs and rural towns, with both ghetto and white middle class mothers giving birth to babies who often show severe physical and neurological damage, the NAPARE study said.

Those babies are growing into what specialists call a "biological underclass" of impaired children.

Research shows that not all newborns of crack-smoking mothers are addicted to the drug, but that all are impaired and their development stunted for years, Dr. Chasnoff said.

A study by Judith Howard, a university researcher in Los Angeles, shows crack wreaks the most havoc on a fetus in the first three months of pregnancy, during brain formation, causing "very, very serious" problems.

Crack babies are generally born six to 10 weeks premature and often weigh less than one kilogram (2.2 pounds). NAPARE said it takes the babies three months to reach the birthweight of normal babies, and two years for their heads to match the size of the normal infants' heads at birth.

Crack babies often switch from a state of overexcitement to lethargy, cry a lot, addiction and health experts say, adding that they do not know the precise reasons for this behaviour.

In addition, the crack babies are 10 times more likely than normal babies to die of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

The children begin to show behavior problems at about the age of two or three, specialists said.

"Most of them test within normal range on a cognitive level but they find certain tasks very difficult," said Patricia O'Keefe, NAPARE spokeswoman. "They lack ability to organize themselves, and have concentration problems."

While the majority of mothers keep the crack babies, between 30 per cent and 50 per cent land in orphanages, with little chance of being adopted.

The first wave of crack babies is just reaching school age, prompting education officials to look at the problem, Ms. O'Keefe said.

While crack has had the most dramatic effect on the infants, other drugs are leaving children impaired as well, health officials said. Tests show expectant mothers are also abusing alcohol, heroin, methadone, cocaine, amphetamines, PCP and marijuana.

The only way to solve the problem is by stopping it before it begins, experts said, and for health workers to recognize the substance-abusing woman.

"We must address all the issues: drug use prevention, treatment of pregnant drug abusers and their children, and equally important, the poverty, malnutrution and immaturity which underlie the problems," Dr. Chasnoff said.

BUCHAREST (APRIL 1) - Some 3,000 people marched through Bucharest Sunday shouting anti-government and anti-communist slogans, correspondents reported.

The demonstrators who had earlier attended a rally organised by the "Brotherhood of free trade unions" marched towards the headquarters of the interim government.

They were joined on the way by students from the "Organisation of December 21" - a group which fought on the barricades against Mr. Ceausescu's elite Securitate troops at the beginning of the December uprising.

The demonstrators shouted "down with Iliescu" - the country's president Ion Iliescu - "down with communism", "out with the Nomenklatura" and "long live Timisoara".

The government and the ruling National Salvation Front council on Saturday held commemorative ceremonies in various parts of Bucharest to mark the 100th day since the start of the "revolution". But attendance never exceeded a few hundred people.

ISLAMABAD (APRIL 1) - Afghan guerrillas have shot down two transport helicopters near southern Kandahar city, killing five crew members, resistance sources said Sunday.

The helicopters crashed in the Daman area, 15 kilometers (9 miles) east of Afghanistan's second largest city, after they were fired on by U.S.-made Stinger missiles, the pro-resistance Afghan Islamic Press (AIP) reported.

Quoting a local rebel leader, AIP said the helicopters had been returning to Kalat after transporting food and other consumer goods to Kandahar.

It said rebel mujahedeen had recovered the bodies of five crew members from the wreckage.

BORDEAUX, France (APRIL 1) - Firemen succeeded Sunday in "containing" a huge forest fire which threatened three villages and destroyed more than 5,000 hectares (12.500 acres) of pine forest in the Bordeaux region of south-western France.

About 60 families were evacuated from the villages overnight as the fire fanned by steady winds, moved northwards across a front 25 to 30 kilometers (15 to 20 miles) wide.

Fire fighting coordinators said the "situation is stabilised but anything can happen if the wind starts blowing up again."

Two Canadair aircraft arrived Sunday to back up two other Canadairs fighting the blaze while about one thousand firemen and troops were deployed on the ground.

Months of drought facilitated the spread of the fire through the tinder-dry undergrowth. But firemen said the blaze had caught and spread so rapidly from so many different spots that they did not rule out arson.

Police arrived Sunday to open an investigation.

Firemen have concentrated on protecting the three villages closest to the fire: Salaunes, Saint-Helene and Carcans. No casualties or damage other than a gutted barn have been reported.

The region's vineyards were not threatened.

SEBOKENG, South Africa (APRIL 1) - Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu vowed Sunday in this grief-stricken black township south of Johannesburg to band together with church leaders to get peace talks going.

Speaking to reporters after preaching at churches in the surrounding Vaal triangle, he said church leaders were to meet Zulu leader Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi in the KwaZulu tribal homeland Monday to seek an end to the virtual civil war in Natal which has killed at least 100 Zulus in the past week.

Admitting that he had tried and failed before, he said: "We hope that this time we will be slightly more successful in ending the carnage in that country."

He said church leaders were also to meet with the African National Congress and the government to urge them to get back on the path to negotiations following the decision by the ANC's external leadership in Lusaka on Saturday to call off talks-about-talks scheduled for April 11.

"We do not intend with the situation as sensitive as it is to issue any statement or comment further than to say it is obviously a crisis.

"Our hope is that our intervention will be a factor which might bring the negotiations back on track."

LONDON (APRIL 1) - Police opened a high-level investigation here Sunday after 133 people were hurt and 341 arrested when a mass protest against a new tax system ended in the capital's worst riot in decades.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said the probe would involve "a large number" of police officers who would begin questioning witnesses and studying photographs and video tapes of the violence.

A chief aim of the enquiry was to determine whether the rioting and looting which rocked several areas of central London Saturday was pre-planned and if so by whom, the spokesman said.

The violence erupted during a demonstration attended by tens of thousands of people in London's Trafalgar Square against the so-called poll tax system which went into effect Sunday despite opposition to it around the country.

Police blamed the violence on a group of more than 3,000 "hardcore violent people" who attacked police with bricks, stones, planks of wood and other objects and set fire to buildings in the square.

Mounted police and riot squads broke up the demonstration but smaller groups of protesters moved to the nearby Soho district, overturning and setting fire to cars, breaking shop windows, attacking police and looting.

As a march which preceded the demonstration was passing Downing Street, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's official residence, "certain people were stopping," according to Deputy Assistant Commissioner David Meynell who was in charge of police security at the demonstration.

"There was some planning there, obviously," he added.

A total of 58 police officers were injured in the clashes with demonstrators while 75 members of the public were also hurt. Four people were still in hospital Sunday and 20 police horses were also injured in the violence.

A spokesman for Britain's Socialist Workers Party denied claims that the party had any role in the violence. Mr. Meynell said witnesses had seen black flags, usually used to represent anarchist groups, near Downing Street.

Several small fires were started in and around the South African embassy which overlooks the square and South African Foreign Minister Pik Botha issued a statement calling the attacks "senseless".

British politicians across the political spectrum condemned the violence with Mrs. Thatcher calling it "deplorable."

DENVER (APRIL 1) UPI - Anderson Hunt, disappointed with his defense, took it out on Georgia Tech with his offense.

Hunt made back-to-back 3-point shots in a decisive second-half spurt Saturday night, leading No. 2 Nevada-Las Vegas past the Yellow Jackets 90-81 and into the Rebels' first NCAA championship game.

UNLV, 34-5, will meet 14th-ranked Duke Monday night in McNichols Sports Arena for the title. The Blue Devils, 29-8, burned Arkansas over the final five minutes for a 97-83 victory in Saturday's first semifinal.

Neither team has a title, with Duke 0 for 3 in NCAA Tournament finals.

''I was a little down at the half because I wasn't playing the way that I should on defense,'' said Hunt, who finished with 20 points. ''So I went out the second half and told myself to shut the door.''

He slammed it with the two 3-pointers. The shots, coming from opposite wings, carried UNLV from a tenuous 76-74 lead to an 82-74 bulge with 4:30 to play.

After a Georgia Tech basket, Hunt made one of two free throws, then Moses Scurry - a key player for the Rebels with 11 rebounds in the second half - added a basket and UNLV led 85-76 with 2:35 left.

Hunt's shots helped UNLV win a 3-point shootout with the Yellow Jackets. The Rebels made 10 of 15 bombs, Georgia Tech eight of 21. Dennis Scott, who had a game-high 29 points, was seven of 14 on 3-pointers but made only three second-half baskets.

''They're a great perimeter-shooting team but we are too,'' Hunt said. ''A couple of times they lost us, and we hit the open shots.''

Stacey Augmon scored 22 points to lead UNLV to its 10th straight victory. Larry Johnson scored 15, Greg Anthony 14, and David Butler contributed 13 points and 10 rebounds.

For Georgia Tech, Brian Oliver added 24 points and Kenny Anderson scored 16. The Yellow Jackets, after shooting 67 percent in taking a 53-46 halftime lead, were held to 35 percent over the final 20 minutes.

''Their denial defense took us out of our offense, and we couldn't get anything in the second half,'' said Scott, who made only three of nine shots after intermission.

Hunt's heroics came after the Rebels had established control with a 17-4 run over the first nine minutes of the second half.

The Yellow Jackets made only one of nine shots and had six turnovers in that stretch. As critical for Georgia Tech, Freshman of the Year Anderson had to sit several minutes after getting his fourth foul with 11:38 left.

''Kenny's the pilot, he runs our offense,'' said Georgia Tech's Johnny McNeil. ''Even though he's a freshman, when he goes out it hurts us.''

When Anderson returned with seven minutes to play, Georgia Tech received two lifts. The second was the fifth foul on UNLV All-America Larry Johnson who had to leave with 6:50 to play and UNLV leading 76-70.

Georgia Tech scored the next two baskets, the second from Anderson.

But Hunt's shooting and Scurry's rebounding kept the Rebels running.

''When (Hunt) shoots well, it takes us to another level,'' said UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian.

And Scurry?

''I really thought in the last half, he just dominated the boards,'' Tarkanian said. ''His play off the bench was the real key to the victory.''

Scott hit four 3-pointers and had 20 first-half points, helping Georgia Tech to a 53-46 lead at the break. It was the biggest margin of the half for the Yellow Jackets.

They were down 23-15, but Scott's 3-pointer capped an 11-0 surge that gave Tech a 26-23 lead with 11:10 left. UNLV notched three ties but never went on top the rest of the half.

The Rebels, who shot 54.5 percent in the opening half, wilted over the final five minutes and were outscored 11-5. UNLV didn't score a point in the final 3:20 of the half.

DENVER (APRIL 1) UPI - Robert Brickey needed just three seconds to erase any doubt about his playing condition.

Immediately after Duke center Alaa Abdelnaby controlled the opening tip in the NCAA Tournament semifinal game with Arkansas, Brickey grabbed a pass from Phil Henderson. He raced to the basket and slammed in a two-handed dunk for the game's first two points.

Brickey suffered a pulled hamstring against St. John's earlier in the tournament and has only practiced at half speed. He played all out against Arkansas Saturday, finishing with 17 points, 11 rebounds and three assists in 24 minutes to help Duke to a 97-83 victory and a trip to the tournament final.

''Robert Brickey had maybe the best game of his career,'' Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said of the senior guard.

''I don't know if was the best, that's something that's hard to determine '' said Brickey. ''But it's definitely in the top five.''

The performance was especailly sweet for the 6-foot-5 Fayetteville, N.C. native. In the Blue Devils' last two appearances in the Final Four in 1988 and last year, Brickey was forced to leave both games with ailments. In the Blue Devils' semifinal loss to Seton Hall last year, Brickey detached a muscle in his hip and the year before he suffered an allergic reaction to penicillin and Duke struggled in his abscence and bowed to Kansas.

''It feels good to have finally finished a Final Four game and not be sick or injured,'' said Brickey. ''On the way here in the bus, the guys were asking me what injury I was going to get this year.''

Brickey made of 8 of 10 shots from the field, and opened the second half much like he did the first, receiving a touch pass from Christian Laettner and slamming through a 360-degree dunk. He scored 13 points in the half, added 9 rebounds and pestered Arkansas guard Todd Day with tight defense.

''I thought Robert Brickey played an excellent game,'' said Arkansas Coach Nolan Richardson. ''I thought he got after the ball. He hurt us several times in garbage type situations. He got big rebounds, and would stick it back in.''

''It means so much to be going to the championship game, because we've been denied twice already,'' said Brickey who said he was bothered by the Denver altitude. ''We've worked so hard and we just want to peak on Monday night.''

With a healthy Robert Brickey they may.

MERCURY, NV (APRIL 1) UPI - More than 870 anti-nuclear protesters, seeking an end to weapons testing, were arrested Saturday during a demonstration at the Nevada Test Site.

Department of Energy officials said that 13 busloads of demonstrators were hauled away from the the desert facility 65 miles northwest of Las Vegas and an additional 250 people arrested were awaiting transportation.

The demonstrators were participating in a five-day ''Decade to Disarm'' protest, sponsored by three peace groups: American Peace Test, the Western Shoshone Council and a Soviet anti-nuclear group called the ''Nevada'' movement.

The action began Thursday and was timed to coincide with the deployment last week of the Trident II missile from Kings Bay Naval Submarine Base in southern Georgia, organizers said. The Trident II is the Navy's most powerful nuclear weapon.

The protest also was scheduled to coincide with similar demonstrations this weekend in Great Britain and the Soviet Union, American Peace Test spokeswoman Katherin Dress said.

Energy Department spokesman Derek Scammell said 871 people were arrested, including 449 males and 422 females. Scammell said about 1,600 people participated in the protest.

Since Thursday, 1,063 protesters have been arrested, Scammell said.

Nevada Highway Patrol Capt. Glenn Jewett said most of the arrests occurred when the demonstrators crossed the cattle guard at the main Mercury entrance and stepped onto the top-secret federal government property that makes up the nation's nuclear weapons testing grounds.

Jewett said the action was calm and no violence was reported. ''It's a good crowd,'' he said.

However, protesters closed the access road at the Test Site's Mercury entrance for more than five hours Saturday when they physically blocked the highway and then built a makeshift wall across it.

Highway Patrol trooper Phillip Dart said the wall was made with rocks up to 18 inches in diameter. It stood 2 feet high in some places, he said.

Dart said the highway had been closed for about five hours when Department of Transportation workers were called at 5 p.m. to remove the rocks.

Those arrested Saturday were bused to the Nye County sheriff's office in Beatty, where they were booked on misdemeanor trespass charges and released.

Since 1986, American Peace Test has organized non-violent direct actions at the Nevada Test Site. More than 10,000 people have participated in the protests and more than 5,000 arrests have been made as a result, Dress said.

On Sunday, an 8 a.m. mass was scheduled at the Mercury entrance, followed by a parade of giant puppets, kites and banners. More arrests are expected during activities Sunday and Monday.

KANSAS CITY, MO (APRIL 1) UPI - A train on a roller coaster at the Worlds of Fun amusement park ran into the rear of another Saturday, causing minor injuries to nearly 40 adults and children, park officials said.

The most serious injury reported by medical personnel at the park apparently was a broken nose, said John Hudacek, general manager of the park. Other riders suffered lacerations and facial bruises, while some of the injured complained of whiplash, Hudacek said.

The accident occurred about 6 p.m. on the Timber Wolf roller coaster, which opened last year, Hudacek said. The trains collided at the end of the ride in an area where a brake is supposed to slow the trains just before the riders get off, Hudacek said.

The first train became stuck on the brake and did not roll forward to the disembarkment area, he said. The second train then struck the rear of the first train, he said.

Each train was made up of six cars carrying four passengers each for a total of 48 riders on the two trains, park officials said.

Medical personnel at the park sent 23 people to several hospitals in the area by ambulance, the park's general manager said. He said another five people were referred to hospitals, while about 10 more decided to seek treatment on their own.

Hudacek said 2 million people had ridden the computer-controlled roller coaster in 1989. The ride was rated the second-best roller coaster in the world by Inside Track, a publication of the American Coaster Enthusiasts.

The mishap occurred on the opening day of the park's 18th season.

''We went through all of our normal safety checks and procedures this morning before opening,'' Hudacek said. ''We don't know why it happened, but we will investigate. People from the ride manufacturer and our own engineering staff will try to determine the cause.''

(APRIL 1) UPI - Energy Department officials say 871 anti-nuclear demonstrators were arrested on misdemeanor trespass charges Saturday at the Nevada Test Site in Mercury, 65 miles northwest of Las Vegas. The protesters were taking part in a five-day demonstration which began Thursday. Protest organizers say the demonstration was scheduled to coincide with similar rallies in Great Britain and the Soviet Union.

A U-S Embassy official in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, says seven U-S Air Force personnel were injured Saturday when three leftist rebels fired on their bus. The bus was carrying 28 servicemen returning from a recreational outing. Embassy spokesman Terrence Kneebone says the rebel snipers fired ''about 14 gunshots'' into the bus about six miles from Tegucigalpa. Radio America says the leftist group Morazanist National Liberation Front is claiming responsibility for the attack.

Moslems and Christians fighting in Lebanon are turning on their own kind. Rival Christian forces waged war Saturday in a village just north of Beirut. Police say at least 50 people were killed and 110 wounded in less than 48 hours. Residents of Christian areas fled to Moslem west Beirut. But police say rival Shiite groups clashed there Friday night, wounding several people.

An UNknown terrorist group is claiming responsibility for Friday's attempted assassination of a Polish diplomat and his wife in Lebanon. Police say the couple was shot and wounded as they stood outside the Bristol Hotel in Syrian-controlled west Beirut. The group has sent a written statement to a leftist newspaper warning the Polish government against providing any assistance in transporting Soviet Jews to Israel.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (APRIL 1) UPI - President Suharto rejected a request for clemency by a political prisoner sentenced to death for taking part in a failed communist coup attempt in 1965, a court official said Sunday.

A Central Jakarta district court spokesman confirmed that Asep Suryaman, 68, will be executed before a firing squad, but gave no details. Executions in Indonesia are carried out in secret.

He said the rejection decree dated March 7 was received by the court on March 19. The court convicted Suryaman in 1975 of taking part in the failed communist coup in 1965 that eventually led to the downfall of then President Sukarno.

Four other prisoners sentenced for participating in the coup were shot by firing squad in mid-February, sparking international protests. The Dutch government said it might withhold $13 million in loans to Indonesia because of the executions.

Despite international condemnation, Indonesia has continued to execute aged political prisoners, many of whom were sentenced to death nearly two decades ago.

According to a report by London-based Amnesty International, Indonesia has executed 25 political prisoners since 1985, compared with four during the preceding decade.

They were among a half a million people detained during a brutal crackdown that followed the September 1965 coup attempt.

Armed Forces Commander Gen. Try Sutrisno said pending executions are not subject to international influence.

''No other country will shake our government,'' he said. ''Not a single foreign power can dictate to Indonesia.''

(APRIL 1) UPI - Heavy rain in Pennsylvania's Allegheny County caused a landslide which led to a pipeline leak of nearly 76-thousand gallons into the Allegheny River early Saturday. The Coast Guard and the pipeline owner used booms to contain the slick and keep it away from water supplies. But thousands of riverside residents north of Pittsburgh in Allegheny and Westmoreland counties were told to conserve water.

A professor of constitutional law says he advised Idaho Governor Cecil Andrus that the state's bill to outlaw most abortions would have hurt the anti-abortion movement. Brigham Young University Law Professor Richard Wilkins, who opposes abortion, says the bill was too narrow. If the Supreme Court declared it UNconstitutional, it would have strengthened the decision which legalized abortion. Andrus vetoed the bill Friday.

Another sign the Iron Curtain has torn. Austrian authorities have approved 800-Million dollars in seed money for a 1995 World's Fair to be held jointly in Vienna and Budapest, Hungary. The two exposition sites, 150 miles apart along the Danube River, will highlight the European role in a high-tech future. Some 35-Million visitors are expected to visit the World's Fair.

(APRIL 1) UPI - The New York Islanders, who rode an extraordinary ability to come back to a dynasty in the 1980s, captured the final NHL playoff berth in their last game of the season.

Of course, they needed to do more than take care of business - they needed a break. Like the time Pittsburgh defenseman Randy Carlyle gave up the puck in front of the net to send the Islanders to a playoff series triumph.

Well, the Islanders have the Penguins to thank again after Pittsburgh completed its season-ending skid with a 3-2 overtime loss to Buffalo that combined with the Islanders' 6-2 rout of Philadelphia to send New York into the postseason one point ahead of Pittsburgh.

Had the teams tied in the standings, the Penguins would have advanced.

If this last-chance scenario seems awfully familiar for the team coached by Al Arbour, now add in the fact that the Islanders' first playoff opponents are the New York Rangers.

Times haven't changed as much as was assumed only days ago. The Rangers had clinched the Patrick Division and the Islanders needed to win their last two games and have the Penguins lose their last two.

All of that is out the window: this is the playoffs. The Rangers have a star, defenseman Brian Leetch, out of the lineup with a broken ankle to ravage their power play and the Islanders have their scoring leader, Pat LaFontaine, healed from his broken hand.

Bring on the postseason - and try telling the combatants that the Rangers-Islanders rivalry is on simmer.

--- AROUND THE NHL ---

In other games, New Jersey trounced Detroit 5-1, Hartford edged Quebec 3-2 Washington nipped the Rangers 2-1, Boston and Montreal tied 2-2, Toronto topped Chicago 6-4, Minnesota downed St. Louis 6-3, and Vancouver defeated Los Angeles 6-3.

Islanders 6, Flyers 2

At Uniondale, N.Y., team captain Brent Sutter scored two first-period goals and added two assists to eliminate Philadelphia. New York, which finished last in the division and next-to-last in the league last year, had challenged to become the first team in history to go from division champion to last place and back to first over three seasons. The Islanders staged the NHL's longest (nine-game) winning streak in January and held first place from Feb. 2-20 until LaFontaine's broken hand sent the streaky team into a tailspin.

Sabres 3, Penguins 2 (OT)

At Pittsburgh, Uwe Krupp scored on a 60-foot slap shot one minute into overtime, sealing second place in the Adams Division for the Sabres and eliminating Pittsburgh. The victory ensured the Sabres' home advantage for their first-round series against Montreal. Penguins star Mario Lemieux played for the first time since leaving the team Feb. 14 with a herniated back, and scored one goal and set up the other. The Penguins went 0-5-3 in their last eight games.

Devils 5, Red Wings 1

At East Rutherford, N.J., Claude Vilgrain and Peter Stastny scored first-period goals and Patrik Sundstrom scored power-play goals in the second and third sessions against Detroit. New Jersey defenseman Alexei Kasatonov added three assists and Sean Burke made 22 saves.

Whalers 3, Nordiques 2

At Quebec, Ray Ferraro broke a tie 1:43 into the third period to lift Hartford and send the Nordiques to their 60th loss of the season. Whalers captain Ron Francis contributed an assist to reach 100 points for the first time in his 9-year career. Joe Sakic, Quebec's lone All-Star, recorded his 100th point of the season with his 38th goal, making the first-round 1987 draft choice the first player to reach the 100-point plateau while playing for a last-place team.

Capitals 2, Rangers 1

At Landover, Md., Mike Ridley and Dino Ciccarelli scored and Mike Liut stopped 27 shots to lift Washington past the Rangers. Liut, acquired by the Capitals from Hartford on March 5, foiled several New York breakaways in registering his 270th career NHL win, tying him with Bernie Parent for 13th on the league's all-time victory list. The Capitals finished the season with a 19-18-3 record at home, their worst since the 1981-82 season.

Canadiens 2, Bruins 2

At Montreal, Bobby Smith scored on a deflection at 14:10 of the the third period, extending the Canadiens' unbeaten streak at the Montreal Forum to 12 games. Montreal's 9-0-3 run at the Forum is its longest streak of the season. The Bruins' point for tying allowed them to reach the 100-point plateau for the 13th time in their 66-year history.

Maple Leafs 6, Blackhawks 4

At Toronto, Ed Olczyk scored once and added two assists against Chicago to help the Maple Leafs clinch third place in the Norris Division in the final game of their turnaround season. Toronto will face the runner-up St.

Louis Blues in the first round and the Blackhawks will play the fourth-place Minnesota North Stars.

North Stars 6, Blues 3

At St. Louis, Brian Bellows broke a tie late in the third period with his 55th goal to lift Minnesota. Brett Hull of St. Louis set an NHL record for goals by a right winger in a season, scoring his 71st and 72nd of the campaign. Hull, who had not scored in three games, scored power-play goals in each of the second and third periods. The record previously was held by Jari Kurri of the Edmonton Oilers, who scored 71 in the 1984-85 season.

Canucks 6, Kings 3

At Vancouver, British Columbia, Paul Reinhart scored the winning goal and assisted on another, leading Vancouver to a season-ending victory over Los Angeles. The Kings played without injured star Wayne Gretzky, who is nursing a back injury.

KATMANDU, Nepal (APRIL 1) UPI - Thousands of armed pro-democracy protesters took over the streets Sunday hours after King Birendra announced a major shakeup of his kingdom's deeply divided government.

Throughout the night, bands of citizens had set up road blocks and patrolled their neighborhoods in Katmandu to fend off parties of police that have reportedly been raiding private homes to make arrests.

The city was plunged into darkeness as protesters snuffed out lights, using the bells in Hindu temples to warn of approaching policemen. There were no reports of violence but the capital, along with the nearby historic city of Patan, were tense.

Doctors and health workers staged a general strike Sunday that virtually shut down hospitals to protest the imprisonment of medical professionals involved in the month-old movement for the establishment of a democratic system of political parties. The government also announced it was closing all schools in and around Katmandu following a series of violent clashes on campuses in recent days between student activists and police.

The Harvard-educated King Birendra announced he was retaining Marich Man Singh as his prime minister but he fired nine other ministers. He named Soviet-trained engineer Hari Bahadur Busneyt as foreign minister to replace Shailendra Kumar Upadhayaya, who resigned Friday in protest when police fired on demonstrators in the town of Patan, killing two.

There are 11 full Cabinet ministers, seven ministers of state and seven assistant ministers in the Nepalese government. Among those fired Sunday were the ministers of housing, labor, justice and land reforms.

An estimated 7,000 people, many carrying knives, sticks and sickles and chanting ''we will retaliate murder with murder,'' took to the streets Sunday in Katmandu to protest that police have repeatedly fired on protesters.

At least 16 people have been killed in violent pro-democracy demonstrations since the movement was started a little over a month ago by opposition members who want an end to the kingdom's 29-year ban on political parties.

Hospitals provided emergency services, but the medical strike virtually paralyzed other health services in the kingdom. Police barred people from entering hospitals that sported banners reading, ''innocent school children are not extremists - police opening fire on them are extremists.''

The government shakeup Sunday coincided with the arrival of an 11-member delegation from India, led by Indian Foreign Secretary S.K. Singh, to discuss relations between the neighboring countries.

Government leaders have called for a meeting of senior government politicians on April 18, ''to take stock of the present political situation and discuss timely political reforms.''

The opposition, composed of the banned Nepali Congress party and seven left front parties, have already rejected King Birendra's hint that he would agree to political reforms within the framework of the current panchayat system, which rules through a series of councils over which Birendra has ultimate authority.

King Birendra is the world's only Hindu king and one of its last absolute monarchs, inheriting absolute power from his father when he ascended the throne in January 1972.

In 1979 a seven-week student revolt threatened to engulf Nepal's 14 million people and topple his absolute monarchy, but he mollified the reformists by calling for an unprecedented referendum to decide the issue.

The referendum narrowly passed in favor of the his panchayet system. Nepal which has one of the lowest per capita incomes in the world, suffers from a lack of capital, skills and inflation fanned by chronic fuel shortages.

MANILA, Philippines (APRIL 1) UPI - A communist rebel leader said Sunday guerrillas would step up attacks on Americans and warned Japan for the first time against its alleged involvement in Manila's counter-insurgency drive.

''We will certainly intensify attacks against U.S. imperialism as long as it increases intervention and control of our country,'' Romulo Kintanar, chief of the 19,000-member communist New Peoples Army, said in a statement to news agencies.

''Our main targets are invasion troops and all U.S. personnel involved in counter-insurgency,'' he said, adding that other American civilians would not be targeted.

Guerrillas have been blamed in the past two years for the deaths of eight Americans, including three active military personnel, one retiree, two defense employees and two civilians.

Kintanar also said he had information that Japanese Official Development Assistance is being used for Manila's counter-insurgency campaign and for projects that have deprived farmers of land and polluted the environment.

''We warn the Japanese government to stop this and urge the Japanese people to oppose this act of their government,'' Kintanar said.

The NPA is the armed wing of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines which has been battling the Manila government for 21 years.

(APRIL 1) UPI - The driver of a Southeast Trailways bus carrying passengers for strike-plagued Greyhound was shot and wounded by a sniper who fired at the bus from a passing pickup truck north of Nashville, Tenn. officials said Sunday.

The driver, David E. Bryant, 58, was shot late Saturday night as the bus traveled northbound on Interstate 65 near Cross Plains, about 25 miles north of Nashville, police said.

The bus was carrying passengers for Greyhound from Nashville to Detroit, Greyhound spokesman George Gravely said. The bus sniping was the 26th since the Greyhound strike began March 2, and apparently the most serious so far.

None of the 48 passengers was injured and the driver was airlifted to Vanderbilt Hospital in Nashville. The driver was undergoing surgery Sunday morning and listed in stable condition.

Bryant, of Cincinnati, was wounded in the left arm, the left side of his torso, and the upper right leg, hospital spokesman Wayne Wood said. The wounds were apparently caused by two shots, Wood said.

Passengers on the bus told investigators the shots were fired from a blue pickup truck, said Officer Carlton Watson of the Cross Plains Police Department.

Southeast Trailways and Greyhound have separate owners, but the they often share passengers under an agreement called ''revenue pooling,'' Gravely said. Southeast was carrying Greyhound passengers under this agreement, not because of the strike against Greyhound, Gravely said.

Asked whether the shooting was strike-related, Greyhound spokeswoman Jeanne Fry said, ''At this time we can't speculate whether that's the case or not.''

Greyhound officials earlier this week called off plans for contract negotiations with the bus drivers' union, citing recent threats and violence by striking drivers. The company has offered a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a bus sniper.

Although company and union officials were slated to resume contract negotiations Monday in Tucson, Ariz., Greyhound Executive Vice President P. Anthony Lannie sent word to both the drivers' union and the federal Mediation and Conciliation Service Friday that he would not attend the talks.

Lannie, citing a bus sniping in Oklahoma and a reported bomb threat in Chicago Friday, said: ''We cannot resume negotiations while the violence continues. Accordingly, we will not be in Tucson next Monday for bargaining.''

In a letter to Edward M. Strait, president of Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, Lannie said the Greyhound bargaining team would meet with union negotiators in Tucson on April 9 if there were no new reports of violence in the next nine days.

The Tennessee sniping apparently violates that condition.

Strait repeated the union's condemnation of violence and suggested that some of the incidents have been perpetrated by ''unsafe and ill-trained replacement drivers against all people on the picket lines.''

A Greyhound maintenance facility in Chicago received a bomb threat Friday, forcing the evacuation of about 50 workers, federal agents said. No bomb was found.

In Oklahoma, a bus carrying 26 passengers from New York was struck by a shotgun blast Friday as it was traveling on Interstate 44, just east of Tulsa. Shotgun pellets hit the front of the bus but no injuries were reported, Scarpino said.

Another Greyhound bus was shot at Friday evening between Philadelphia and Harrisburg, Pa.

The strike began after negotiations broke off on a proposed three-year contract for about 9,000 Greyhound union employees, including some 6,300 drivers.

Company officials have said Greyhound plans to have 3,200 full-time drivers and to operate its full regularly scheduled service by Easter. Greyhound said it has hired 1,700 replacement drivers and that 400 union drivers have crossed the picket lines. It is currently providing about 50 percent of its service.

SEOUL, South Korea (APRIL 1) UPI - Opposition leader Kim Dae Jung renewed a demand Sunday that the present National Assembly be dissolved and new elections called to seek a popular verdict on the current political alignment.

Kim made the demand at an outdoor rally staged by his Party for Peace and Democracy, or PPD, in Puchon, 20 miles west of Seoul, to kick off a campaign to collect 10 million signatures against the new union of the ruling Democratic Liberal Party and former opposition groups.

''The present National Assembly is not in a position to represent the will of the people,'' said Kim, who leads the major remaining opposition group, now heavily outnumbered in the South Korean Parliament. ''It should be dissolved and a new Assembly must be formed through new elections.''

Kim was the main opposition leader until January, when Kim Young-sam and Kim Jong-pil, formerly government foes, joined President Roh Tae-woo to inaugurate the new ruling party through the merger of their groups.

The new government party controls 216 of the 299 parliamentary seats, enough to control passage of legislation. Kim Dae Jung's party has 70 seats. There are 11 independents and two seats remain vacant.

Kim Dae Jung and others in the opposition have been criticizing the formation of the new government party on grounds that it undermines the results of the 1988 parliamentary election, which gave the opposition control of the National Assembly.

At the rally, Kim said the new political alignment giving the government party an overwhelming majority in parliament represented a scheme for Roh to retain influence after his retirement at the end of his current five-year term in February 1993.

Kim said he will be ready to meet Roh and discuss major political issues if he promises that local autonomy previously agreed on between the ruling and opposition parties will be implemented on schedule.

About 20,000 people attended the rally, which lasted for about 1 1/2 hours. No demonstrations followed the gathering.

NEW YORK (APRIL 1) UPI - A woman was arrested Sunday for allegedly stabbing two men, one fatally, when they told her she was using tainted cocaine, police said.

The incident occurred about 11:30 p.m. Saturday in a single room occupancy hotel in upper Manhattan while two men were taking cocaine intravenously with Vivian Moss, 28, of the Bronx, said Sgt. Nick Vreeland, a police spokesman.

Moss allegedly stabbed both men with a kitchen knife, killing one and seriously injuring the other, Vreeland said.

Tom Gambia, 49, who lived in the hotel, was stabbed in the chest and died a short time later at St. Luke's Hospital, Vreeland said.

His companion, Charles Houston, 43, who also lived in the hotel, was stabbed in the stomach and listed in serious condition at St. Luke's.

Moss was charged early Sunday with second-degree murder and first-degree assault, Vreeland said.

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (APRIL 1) UPI - One week after the last of 50,000 Indian troops withdrew from Sri Lanka, the leader of the victorious Tamil Tiger guerrillas said Sunday that his fighters will not lay down their arms and will continue the struggle of the Tamil-speaking people.

Tiger leader Velupillai Prabahakaran returned in triumph to Nallur in northern Jaffna peninsula two years after the skin of his pet leopard was displayed as a war trophy by Indian troops, who drove his 4,000 guerrillas into Sri Lanka's jungles but failed to disarm or pacify them.

''We have fought and defeated the (world's) fourth-largest army. We have shown the world by defeating the Indian army. No one can crush us,'' Prabhakaran said at a news conference in the northern peninsula, now virtually under complete control of the Tigers.

''The Indian government should now realize they cannot disarm the Tigers. The new Indian government should initiate talks to renew the relationship with us. We are not against the Indian government or the people, but we are against the atrocities carried out by the Indian army,'' he said.

Sri Lanka is a teardrop-shaped island nation of 17 million, formerly called Ceylon, off India's southeast coast. Its 3 million ethnic Tamils feel dominated by the ethnic Sinhalese Buddhist majority.

With covert Indian military aid provided under the late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, Tamil guerrillas launched a separatist war around 1983. Gandhi helped the guerrillas curry favor with South India's Tamils and keep the pro-American Colombo government from allowing a U.S. naval base in the region.

But when the powerful Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam under Prabhakaran were blamed for massacres of hundreds of Sinhalese villagers in 1987, India signed a peace accord with Colombo and sent in troops. The Tigers, however, refused to lay down their arms.

In what some called ''India's Vietnam,'' young Tiger fighters armed with assault rifles and homemade mortars and wearing cyanide capsules with which to commit suicide in case of capture killed more than 1,000 Indian soldiers before New Delhi called the rest home March 24 this year.

Prabhakaran now has reached a peace accord with Colombo. He praised President Ranasinghe Premadasa for ''creating a climate'' that might end the violence that has claimed over 6,000 lives.

He also said that the problems of the people in the Tamil-dominated north and east should be solved in a humanitarian manner as has been done in the other provinces.

''If these problems are not settled, we are ready to fight,'' he warned. ''We will try to solve our problems in the democratic way, but failing that we will fight. We are the sole representatives of the people of the north and east.''

He also said that the Tigers will carry out their fight in a democratic way to win the hearts and the minds of the people.

''The Sinhalese politicians and the Sinhalese people should realize why the LTTE has been waging a war in the north and east.'' He said the People's Front of the Liberation Tigers, the Tigers' political arm, will now operate as a political party throughout the country.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (APRIL 1) UPI - A car slammed into a crowd gathering to hear freed black leader Nelson Mandela on the outskirts of the southeastern city of Port Elizabeth early Sunday, killing 13 people and injuring 12 others, state-run radio reported.

The driver of the car, who was not identified, was attacked and beaten by the crowd and rushed to a hospital in serious condition, the report said.

The radio said the victims were pedestrians among a crowd gathering for a rally in Port Elizabeth's black area of Motherwell Sunday to be addressed by African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (APRIL 1) UPI - A cease-fire agreement and a stalemate Sunday ended two days of fierce clashes between rival Christian forces northeast of Beirut that killed at least 50 people and wounded 110.

Police said sporadic machine gun and mortar fire echoed across the village of Qlaiat, where troops under Gen. Michel Aoun and the rival militiamen of Samir Geagea's Lebanese Forces engaged in bloody battles Friday and Saturday.

Qlaiat is a strategic village controlled by Aoun's troops in the Christian Maronite heartland of Kesrouwane, 12 miles north of Beirut, an area that is largely a Lebanese Forces militia stronghold.

Police said big guns fell silent along the 4-mile front in Kesrouwane late Saturday after a Christian mediation team managed to persuade the two rival leaders to hold their fire.

Military sources said Geagea had launched attacks against Aoun's positions in Qlaiat with the aim of driving him out of Kesrouwane. They said Geagea wanted to distract Aoun from attacking his miltia headquarters in east Beirut.

More than 50 people were killed and 110 were wounded in two days, raising the casualty toll in two months to 850 dead and 2,820 wounded.

Security sources in east Beirut said neither faction was able to score a clear victory or gain ground despite the huge firepower involved in the fighting.

Military sources said around 1,000 troops, backed by tanks, armored personnel carriers and relentless shelling from 200 artillery pieces, confronted a similar militia force with the same fire power.

''It is clear now that the struggle in east Beirut has reached the limit of a miltiary parity between the two sides,'' said the east Beirut-based Ad Diyar newspaper.

''The power of each side stopped at front lines separating them inside the Christian enclave (in central Lebanon),'' the paper said.

Aoun and Geagea have been locked in a bitter struggle for control of the Christian enclave. A Christian mediation team has failed to reach a common ground for a political agreement.

Aoun told reporters Sunday at his bunker in the Baabda presidential palace 5 miles southeast of Beirut, that this past weekend of fighting ''was the last of the hot phases in Lebanon.''

''We have reached the final stage. Change will prevail soon,'' he said, without elaboration.

BUFFALO, NY (APRIL 1) UPI - The city's cash-strapped transit authority shut down bus and train service Sunday, forcing thousands to plan alternate routes to work and school and leaving Buffalo the largest city in the nation without mass transit.

The transit system, which serves about 135,000 weekday riders, including some 20,000 public school students, stopped running about 1 a.m., hours after the Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority commissioners voted 6-2 Saturday night in favor of the shutdown.

The stoppage idled about 1,100 workers and came after months of attempts by Erie County and Buffalo officials to find a way to provide the authority with a dedicated source of funding. NFTA had been threatening for six months to close down the system for lack of funds.

The shutdown affects bus service in Erie and Niagara counties and service on Buffalo's light rail rapid transit line.

''It's like a ton of bricks have been dropped on your back all at once,'' said Joseph Rogalski, the operator of the last light rail rapid transit train, which began its final run shortly after midnight. ''It's going to be the longest 6 miles yet.''

The stoppage was expected to have a severe impact when the work week begins Monday. Elementary school students in the city are carried by a private bus firm, but high school students who normally use NFTA buses will be forced to find other ways to get to their schools.

Further complicating the situation, several highway repair projects have altered normal traffic patterns in the Buffalo area.

In an 11th hour meeting in a crammed NFTA board room, authority commissioners turned down a proposal to borrow $1 million from a self-insurance fund. Under the proposal, Erie County also would have given the authority $2.1 million in emergency funds.

Three times in the past six months, Erie County has provided emergency funding for NFTA in the face of a threatened shutdown. The last bailout came just over two weeks ago.

NFTA commissioners voted late last week to shut down the system Sunday morning after the Erie County Legislature failed to approve a proposed utility tax that would have provided an estimated $9 million annually for the authority.

''We urge the community to talk to the opponents (of the tax) as firmly, as loudly, and as quickly as possible so we can resolve this,'' NFTA chairman Robert Gioia said following the vote Saturday night.

New York State has set aside $2 million in funding for the authority, but will not release the money until lawmakers come up with a dedicated funding source.

SRINAGAR, India (APRIL 1) UPI - Separatist violence Sunday in the troubled Kashmir city of Srinagar left a security force officer dead and at least 14 people injured, police and witnesses said.

Police said one of two militants appeared from a side street in the city's Khanauar district and threw a grenade at a Central Reserve Police Force patrol, killing one officer instantly.

Others in the patrol fired at the militants but missed and injured 10 bystanders, police said.

Six bystanders in the area were arrested but police gave no reason for the action.

In a separate incident, witnesses said members of the reserve police opened fire in the Nawpora area of town, injuring at least four people. Police confirmed the report but could not say what prompted the incident.

Witnesses said a butcher and one of his customers sustained bullet wounds in the gunfire but officials at area hospitals said the two had not been admitted for treatment.

Two other people apparently injured in the shooting, a woman wounded in the left arm and a man shot in the right hand, were treated at the Bones and Joint Hospital, a hospital source said.

The unrest in Srinagar, the Jammu and Kashmir state summer capital 400 miles north of New Delhi, occurred during a six-hour relaxation in the curfew that began at 5 a.m.

Normal life in the Kashmir Valley has been disrupted since mid-January whensecurity forces opened fire on protesters during a 2-year-old independence movement. Since then, more than 180 people have died, most of whom were demonstrators shot by security forces.

The separatist campaign, aimed at forcing India to allow Kashmir to become independent, is supported by virtually all of the area's 3 million Moslems.

Militants claim an independent Kashmir is necessary because of years of alleged discrimination by the mostly-Hindu New Delhi government.

New Delhi has deployed tens of thousands of security and paramilitary forces throughout Kashmir but has failed to crush the independence drive.

SEGUNDO MONTES, El Salvador (APRIL 1) UPI - Col. Humberto Corado Figueroa emerged from the cloud of red earth that swallowed his helicopter as it landed and strode into the new town with several officers closely guarding his back.

Reaching the speaker's platform from music heralded the birth of the town of Segundo Montes, Corado delivered a welcome and a warning to the 8,500 people who had come to carve out a new life in the war zone they fled nine years ago.

The government is willing to support the new town's development, he said, but the repatriates must live independently of the leftist rebels with whom they share northern Morazan province.

''We think it is very positive that they have returned'' to El Salvador after 9 years in a refugee camp in neighboring Honduras, said Corado, military commander for the province. ''But we think some other place would have been better.''

He said the refugees have ties to rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, and may attempt to aid the rebels in their decade-old guerrilla insurgency against the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government.

The decade-long civil war has cost over 72,000 lives, mostly civilians.

The repatriation of refugees to northern Morazan ''could be part of the global strategy'' of the guerrillas, Corado said.

The refugees decided to resettle on the Torola river, which divides the southern part of Morazan province from a 125-square-mile area in the north that is under rebel control for most of the year. Segundo Montes - constructed by the government - is on the north side of the Torola, on land the rebels claim as ''liberated territory.''

Its precarious position on the line between the army and the rebels makes the settlement vulnerable.

''It is a very combative zone,'' said Corado. ''Military confrontations can arise in the area at any time.''

The potential for tragedy was illustrated Feb. 11, when fighting broke out near the Corral de Piedra refugee settlement in Chalatenango province, 30 miles north of San Salvador. A U.S.-made rocket fired from a Salvadoran Air Force helicopter hit a house in the settlement, killing four children and an adult and wounded more than a dozen other people, most of them young children.

Corado's lack of trust in the refugees was mirrored in the faces of children and adults who crowded around the soldiers providing security for the colonel. Silent crowds shadowed the soldiers wherever they went.

''They don't belong here,'' whispered an elderly man who joined the vigil.

The animosity is based on terrible memories. Most of the refugees left for Honduras in the early 1980s after the armed forces launched a savage attempt to root out rebels in northern Morazan. The mobile rebel units are an elusive target and much of the weight of the army's counterinsurgency efforts fell on the civilian population.

During the first part of the decade, human rights organizations attributed thousands of civilian deaths in the area to indiscriminate bombings or outright massacres carried out by government troops.

The resettlement's name, too, echoes military abuse. Father Segundo Montes worked with the refugees before he, five other Jesuit priests, their houskeeper and her teenage daughter were killed last Nov. 16 in San Salvador by government troops acting on orders from superiors.

The military's suspicions have also made it difficult for the refugees to get materials necessary to their community's development.

The new city's commerce with the south is limited by army roadblocks and the river. Rebels blew up the bridge over the Torola twice before the government decided not to rebuild it several years ago. During the rainy season, high water and strong currents make the crossing impossible.

Ramon Cadena of the United Nations High Commission for Refugees said the residents of Segundo Montes have entered into discussions with both the military and the FMLN in an attempt to overcome the problems they face.

He said the talks should allow for the construction of a new bridge with equipment from the government, money from the United Nations and other humanitarian sources and labor from the refugees.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 1) UPI - For all the pride and comfort that President Bush takes in his knowledge of foreign affairs, the mixed signals emanating from the White House last week on the conflict in Lithuania may have seemed strange if not perplexing.

It began when Defense Secretary Dick Cheney stated what should have been the obvious on a Sunday television interview program: that any violent Soviet attempt to quash the secession movement could disrupt the current warming trend in superpower relations.

Lest anyone think that Cheney, a self-professed skeptic on Soviet intentions, was speaking out of school, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater issued a similar warning the next day - mild compared to some - about the consequences of an escalated confrontation.

After that, the confusion set in.

Alarmed about the heavy-handedness some news accounts had ascribed to his comments Monday, Fitzwater retreated Tuesday in the name of caution. While again expressing ''deep concern'' about the course of events in Lithuania, he announced the United States would not comment on specific developments but instead intended ''simply to focus on the overall issue there.''

''We were a little concerned at the way some of my words yesterday were played ... and I want to be a little more careful today,'' Fitzwater explained to reporters.

At that point, the flip-flops picked up steam. When Fitzwater's words were reported as a move to mute the earlier U.S. stand, driven in large part by a desire to not alienate Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev with arms control agreements and so much else on the U.S.-Soviet agenda, administration officials scrambled to let some reporters know that the United States remained concerned if not upset about the Soviet use of intimidation to reassert control over Lithuania.

Wednesday night, Bush called British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to discuss a telephone conversation she had earlier in the day with Gorbachev.

Since its declaration of independence two weeks before placed Lithuania on a collision course with the Kremlin, Bush had chosen to rely on official statements and indirect assurances from Gorbachev that force would not be used to keep the breakaway republic in the Soviet fold. The call to Thatcher, Fitzwater said, was part of that indirect consultation.

And why had Bush, the reach-out-and-touch long-distance diplomat who had boasted since the Malta summit about his ability to confront Gorbachev even on matters of disagreement, not phoned Gorbachev himself to inquire about Soviet intentions? Because of the ''complex and delicate'' nature of the crisis, Fitzwater said, ''The president simply feels this is not the time to make a direct contact to Chairman Gorbachev.''

The lifespan of that statement was surprisingly short even by the standards of an administration where key officials have been left in the dark by decisions made at the top. Hours later, Bush sent Gorbachev a personal message underscoring the American desire for a peaceful settlement in Lithuania.

As usual, Bush had a simple explanation for why the move Fitzwater earlier characterized as untimely had suddenly become prudent: With some conservatives urging more forceful criticism of the Soviets and Gorbachev said to be complaining about Western interference in his internal affairs, Bush wanted to ensure there was ''no disconnect because of misinformation'' between Washington and Moscow.

''I do not want to risk misunderstanding by failing to communicate,'' he said.

The episode raised new questions about how well the administration was reading and reacting to the events in Lithuania. It also reflected all the passion for prudence, pragmatism and unpredictability that Bush has displayed in foreign policy.

SALT LAKE CITY (APRIL 1) UPI - Romanian orphans will receive aid from the Mormon Church, leaders of the 7.3-million member religion said Sunday, and urged people in the East European nation to show mercy to their former leaders.

The Mormon Church has been expanding into European nations once closed to its religious activities by former communist governments. The new growth has been supervised by Russell M. Nelson, a member of the church's Council of the Twelve.

Upon returning from Romania, Nelson ''shared with us the pitiable plight of orphan children in that land, perhaps 30,000 in the city of Bucharest alone,'' Thomas S. Monson, a counselor to Mormon President Ezra Taft Benson, told the church's 160th annual General Conference.

''He visited one such orphanage and arranged that the church might provide vaccine, medical dressings and other urgently needed supplies,'' Monson said.

In addition, he said, some Mormon married couples ''will be identified and called to fill special missions to these children. I can think of no more Christlike service than to hold a motherless child in one's arms or to take a fatherless boy by the hand.''

The 90-year-old Benson, who has been suffering recently from health problems, attended the Saturday-Sunday conference but did not address the more than 8,000 people gathered in the historic Tabernacle on Salt Lake City's Temple Square.

Gordon B. Hinckley, Benson's other counselor, told the conference that for months Mormons have joined other peoples throughout the world in watching the ''unbelievable'' changes in Eastern Europe.

''Dictators have fallen and the voices of the people are heard again with a new song of freedom,'' Hinckley said.

But Hinckley said he had watched on television reports of the summary trial of former Romanian leader Nicolae Ceausescu and of his execution on Christmas Day 1989.

''In the moment of his extremity he wished for mercy on the part of his accusers. I know nothing of the court system under which he and his wife were tried. I know only that the hearing was short, the judgment death, and the execution quick and final,'' he said.

''There had been no mercy shown through long years of oppression, harsh and unrelenting. And, now in this hour of bitter culmination, none was extended,'' Hinckley said.

''Mercy is of the very essence of the gospel of Jesus Christ. The degree to which each of us is able to extend it becomes an expression of the reality of our discipleship under him who is our Lord and master.

''How great a thing is mercy. Most often it is quiet and unassuming. It receives few headlines. It is the antithesis of vengeance and hatred, of greed and offensive egotism. If cultivated among all men, it would put an end to the atrocities of war,'' Hinckley said.

The conference also was televised by satellite to more than 2,600 Mormon chapels in the United States, Canada, the Dominican Republic and Puerto Rico.

(APRIL 1) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... Here's the latest news from U-P-I.

The driver of a Southeast Trailways bus was shot and wounded late Saturday night north of Nashville, Tennessee. The Greyhound office in Dallas announced the shooting... saying it's possible the shooting was related to the strike against Greyhound. Greyhound does NOT own Southeast Trailways but the smaller company is operating on some Greyhound routes during the strike. NONE of the passengers aboard the Nashville-to-Detroit bus was hurt.

871 anti-nuclear demonstrators were arrested at the Nevada Test site Saturday and charged with trespassing. Energy Department spokesman Derek Scammell says the people arrested total about half of the estimated 16-hundred demonstrating. Nevada Highway Patrol Captain Glenn Jewett says the demonstration was calm and there was NO violence. Organizers say the protesters were taking part in a five-day demonstration calling for an end to weapons testing.

Seven American servicemen were wounded in Honduras Saturday in an attack on their bus. A U-S Embassy official in Tegucigalpa says the bus was carrying 28 U-S Air Force personnel back to base from a recreational outing when it was ambushed about six miles from the capital. Radio America says the Morazanist National Liberation Front claims responsibility for the attack.

Honduran officials say the Nicaraguan Contra rebels are beginning to lay down their arms. At least 80 rebels have turned their weapons over to the Honduran military in the presence of international observers. The rebels did sign an agreement to disarm and demobilize before April 20th.

Nearly 40 adults and children have minor injuries after a collision between two trains on a roller coaster at an amusement park in Kansas City Missouri. One train ran into the rear of another at Worlds of Fun last night. The park's general manager, John Hudacek, says the most serious injury apparently was a broken nose.

BONN, West Germany (APRIL 1) UPI - A proposal by West Germany's central bank to merge East and West German currency at a 2-to-1 rate would wipe out the savings of elderly East Germans and cut wages in half, officials said Sunday.

The proposal, made by Bundesbank chairman Otto Poehl on Saturday, was immediately criticized as going back on a pledge to East German voters that their savings would be converted at a 1-to-1 rate.

Merging the East German mark with the West German Deutsche mark would bring the currencies under one system and would boost East Germany's faltering economy.

Under the West German central bank proposal, only a small portion of East German savings accounts - up to 2,000 marks, or $1,175 per person - would be exchanged at a 1-to-1 rate. The remainder would be exchanged at a 2-to-1 rate. East German Prime Minister Hans Modrow said such a decision could cause a new exodus of East Germans to West Germany.

''We now have a situation which contradicts everything that (West German Chancellor) Helmut Kohl said during the election campaign here,'' Modrow said. ''This could lead to great discontent among East Germans.''

Poehl defended the proposal, saying it raises the current value of the East German mark, which is set at a 1-to-3 exchange rate. He said the decision to allow savings of up to 2,000 marks to be exchanged at 1-to-1 rate was made as a concession by Kohl and other West German politicians during the East German election campaign.

The East German official news agency ADN said the proposal generated numerous complaint calls to the government's Christian Democratic Union offices, headed by a conservative three party alliance that won the elections March 18.

Merging the two German currencies was a major campaign issue in the first free elections in East Germany in nearly 50 years. The alliance, which promised swift currency reform, was heavily backed by Kohl.

Martin Kirchner, general secretary of the East German CDU, said Sunday that the Bundesbank proposal was ''unacceptable'' and that East Germans felt betrayed by it.

Five days before the election, Kohl told East Germans at a rally in Cottbus that he favored a 1-to-1 exchange rate for savings accounts but gave no further details. He ruled out the rate for other areas such as pensions and wages.

On Sunday, Kohl denied making wide-ranging promises on currency reform but said in a radio interview: ''We intend to do what we said we'd do.''

In Bonn, Free Democratic Party chairman Otto Lambsdorff, the junior partner in Kohl's ruling coalition, said the Bundesbank proposal would hurt the elderly and the wage earner.

Lambsdorff was quoted in the Welt am Sonntag newspaper as saying that the proposal would be like ''breaking a promise'' to the East German people. He said the elderly are particularly vulnerable in East Germany because they rely heavily on savings to augment low retirement pay.

Elmar Pieroth, a leading West German CDU economist who has been proposed as East Germany's new economics minister, also insisted the rate be made at 1-to-1. He said that rate should also include retirement pay and wages.

''East Germans do not pull down super wages,'' he said. ''They average about 1,000 marks (about 588 dollars) a month.''

Pieroth said the 1-to-1 rate was needed to offset the expected cost of living increase when a free market system replaces government subsidies.

The final decision on monetary reform is seen as a crucial first step toward eventual German reunification. Officials have said they want to have the currency system in place by mid-summer.

The East German mark has little value outside the East Bloc. There have been fears that too favorable an exchange rate could fuel West German inflation.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 1) UPI - Two senators said Sunday it is time to get tough on the proliferation of nuclear weapons overseas, particularly in light of the recent attempt to ship potential bomb triggers to Iraq.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, ranking Republican on the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, said the United States should be as hard on Iraq as it is on Libya when it comes to weapons proliferation.

''I think we should. I think that's precisely the case,'' Cohen said on ABC's ''This Week With David Brinkley'' program. ''There should be sound and fury, and all we're hearing now is the sound of silence.

''I think that we have to raise this to a level of condemnation and say that we are not going to walk softly and carry a little stick any longer.''

Cohen suggested using economic sanctions to block the expansion of nuclear weapons.

''... We ought to take our allies and say, 'Look, we are simply proposing the proposition that if you hand a flamethrower to a pyromaniac, then someone's going to get burned, either you or someone else,'' Cohen said.

Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, echoed Cohen's opinion.

''I think we need to get tough, not just with those Middle Eastern countries, but with those who are supplying them. ... I think we need to use strong diplomatic measures with those folks who are in the business of supplying these weapons,'' said Bingaman, who also appeared on the ABC program.

Authorities in London charged three people Thursday with trying to smuggle to Iraq 40 components needed to set off nuclear weapons.

The indictment in the case was unsealed in San Diego. It charges the defendants with conspiring to export banned military equipment to Iraq.

Meanwhile last week, officials in Baghdad denied Iraq wanted the components, known as capacitors, and said their country was the victim of a smear campaign.

Nizar Hamdoon, the Iraqi deputy foreign minister, suggested Sunday that the seized devices may have been intended for industrial research.

''Iraq was interested in getting the high-velocity, rather high-voltage, capacitors to have many industrial applications in laser and other industrial fields,'' Hamdoon said on the CBS program ''Face the Nation.''

Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations disputed the senators' position and denied that his country tried to obtain the devices secretively.

''We used telexes with the British company and we issued a user certificate in accordance with British laws so there was nothing secret about it,'' ambassador Abdul Amir Al-Anbari told the ABC program.

Al-Anbari said, ''We don't have a nuclear reactor to manufacture a nuclear device.''

And he stressed, ''Iraq ... is against the use of any nuclear device in the region because it would be a mutual suicide.''

FREEPORT, PA (APRIL 1) UPI - An 8-mile fuel slick created by a punctured pipeline worked its way down the Allegheny River Sunday, forcing the closure of water intake pipes and prompting water conservation orders for about 1 million people in a dozen communities.

Authorities in the affected Allegheny and Westmoreland county towns shut intake valves to keep the slick from tainting water supplies and banned all nonessential use of water.

They set up portable tanks to provide drinking and cooking water and urged residents to turn off hot water heaters in towns where water levels reached the crisis stage.

Schools and businesses might be ordered to close if water supplies became even more critical, authorities said.

A landslide, perhaps caused by heavy rains, released about 75,800 gallons of gasoline and other petroleum products overnight Friday from a 10-inch pipeline at Freeport, about 30 miles north of Pittsburgh. The fuel spilled into an Allegheny tributary and from there into the river.

The slick, drifting south at a rate of about a half-mile an hour, was located just north of Pittsburgh at Oakmont, authorities said Sunday. It was expected to take at least four days for the oil to move through the Pittsburgh area.

The city of Pittsburgh, with an estimated five days' reserve supply of water, issued a call for voluntary conservation by its 350,000 water customers. The request was to take effect at 5 p.m. Sunday. The city intended to monitor the situation to determine if its water intakes had to be closed.

The Coast Guard and the pipeline owner, Buckeye Pipeline Co., continued to work to recover the fuel, setting up more than 1,000 feet of booms at Freeport and Brackenridge.

The leak was discovered when workers at a pipeline control room across Pennsylvania in Allentown noticed a drop in pressure at about 11 p.m. Friday, the company said.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the company accepted responsibility for the cleanup and was hiring private contractors to help federal emergency teams do the job.

Federal authorities also were at the scene to assess any damage to the environment.

LONDON (APRIL 1) UPI - Scotland Yard opened an investigation Sunday of a protest of a newly imposed tax that degenerated into a riot, with mobs overturning cars, setting fire to buildings and looting shops.

Scores of people were hurt as the rampage spread through central London Saturday night. Seventy-five civilians and 58 police were treated for injuries and four people remained hospitalized Sunday afternoon.

Police arrested 341 people, mostly on public disorder charges, Scotland Yard said. More than 400 crimes were reported.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, at her country home of Chequers, expressed ''absolute horror'' at the violence.

''People have a right to demonstrate peacefully and that is what most of them were doing,'' she said. ''They were taken over by some extreme groups and we saw some of the worst scenes of violence by people who have no consideration for other people at all, no consideration for their property.''

Flanked by police as he surveyed the wreckage at Covent Garden, Home Secretary David Waddington blamed extreme leftists and ''mindless thugs.''

''I think 350 premises have been damaged, and I think it is worth the public realizing that not only were a large number of police injured but a large number of innocent members of the public.''

A pressing crowd shouted ''Stasi,'' the name of the reviled East German security police. Three people were arrested.

It began as a peaceful demonstration in Trafalgar Square Saturday afternoon.

A crowd estimated at 40,000 by police and 150,000 by organizers gathered to show opposition to the new community poll tax that went into effect Sunday in England and Wales, one year after it was imposed in Scotland.

The tax requires local city councils to set a flat sum that must be paid by every Briton who is at least 18 years old, with some exceptions.

Unlike the income tax, or the property tax it replaces, the poll tax does not discriminate according to wealth, which has caused bitter complaints that the richest man in England, the duke of Westminster, pays the same amount as one of his servants.

As the demonstrators marched toward the Houses of Parliament, about 1,000 people stopped outside at the newly installed gates to Downing Street, where the prime minister lives and works.

Fearing that they planned to storm Thatcher's residence, hundreds of police quickly moved in, some of them on horseback. Young demonstrators taunted police, and some hurled bottles, cans, stones and garbage cans at them.

''As usual the police were in the front line, many of them injured ... I am very grateful to them for the job they do to protect us,'' Thatcher said.

As night fell, the rioters moved north into Covent Garden and Soho, smashing windows, looting shops and overturning and torching cars.

An estimated $162,000 in damage was done to an automobile showroom. Passersby took refuge in a cinema and in the backs of pubs and restaurants.

''All hell broke loose. It just exploded,'' pub manager Simon Bowden said.

Fire was set to a portable toilet outside a seven-story office building on the Strand. Fire trucks were initially blocked by demonstrators. A number of smaller fires around Trafalgar Square and St. Martin's Lane, including a blaze caused by a gasoline bomb hurled at South Africa House, were quickly doused.

''It was supposed to be about poll tax. But this was anarchy, pure and simple. Cars were overturned, shops looted, buildings set on fire. And all the time the crowd cheered,'' The Mail said.

Demonstrator Sean Little echoed the daily's analysis.

''A few people who had absolutely nothing to do with what we were trying to do latched on to a cause, had far too much to drink, slight incitement by the police, and they just got completely out of hand,'' he said.

''They had nothing to do with our cause whatsover. I've spoken to a few of them and they were not interest in what we were trying to do. They just wanted to break things up.''

Scotland Yard launched a high-level investigation into whether the riot was planned.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 1) UPI - The chief of the Environmental Protection Agency acknowledged Sunday that a proposed new clean air law will put some coal miners out of work, but said he is hopeful that technology can save jobs.

''We are going to see some losses in those jobs. ... We are not pleased about that. It is not something we want to see happen,'' EPA administrator William Reilly said on NBC's ''Meet the Press.''

''We are prepared to work very carefully with those workers and with the state to try to ensure that we have as good a safety net and unemployment retraining provisions as possible,'' he said.

The Senate, considering the clean air legislation last week, narrowly rejected an amendment by Sen. Robert Byrd, D.-W.Va., that would have provided help to unemployed miners of high-sulfur coal.

To reduce acid rain, the administration-backed legislation would restrict sulfur dioxide emissions. The new limits are expected to cause thousands of job losses in the mines throughout Appalachia and the Midwest.

Reilly said he expects the job losses to begin in about five years. He is hopeful that technological advances can save some of the jobs in the East, where high-sulfur coal is mined.

''Honestly, I think the real future for miners of high-sulfur coal is clean-coal technology,'' Reilly said. ''We have in this administration made a very strong, a very expensive commitment to developing a capacity to burn high-sulfur coal more efficiently and with less impact on the environment.

''We expect to see the benefits of that in the not-too-distant future,''

he said.

Reilly said most of the job losses ''will come in the next century, and by that time we expect to have substantial new coal technology to ease that shift.''

(APRIL 1) UPI - Nevada authorities expect they will have to make more arrests today and tomorrow as anti-nuclear protesters continue a five-day demonstration against nuclear weapons testing at the Nevada Test Site. 871 arrests were made yesterday. TRURO, Nova Scotia (APRIL 1) UPI - An automobile slammed head-on Sunday into a bus carrying country singer Willie Nelson on a tour of eastern Canada, police said. The lone motorist was killed in the accident.

Nelson and four others aboard the bus were unhurt in the crash, which forced the bus into a ditch, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said.

The dead motorist was identified as Paul Leonard Burtch, 20, of Lower Sackville, Nova Scotia.

Police said Burtch's 1990 Pontiac Sunbird crossed the center line of Route 104 and hit Nelson's bus head-on about 3:30 a.m. near the town of Riversdale, 10 miles east of Truro. Truro is about 60 miles north of Halifax in central Nova Scotia.

Nelson's bus was being towed out of the ditch Sunday afternoon.

It was not known what caused the driver to swerve into oncoming traffic, police said. The accident was under investigation.

MIAMI (APRIL 1) UPI - A U.S. Coast Guard boarding team acting on behalf of the Spanish government seized a Spanish fishing vessel carrying at least 185 pounds of cocaine and held the crew, the Coast Guard said Sunday.

The seizure was made Friday in international waters about 250 miles southeast of Puerto Rico, but was not made public until after the vessel reached Puerto Rico Sunday.

A Coast Guard law enforcement team aboard the USS South Carolina, a U.S. Navy cruiser, spotted the crew of the Spanish vessel Terral throwing bundles into the ocean, Lt. Cmdr. Jeff Karonis said.

The Navy crew and the Coast Guard team recovered the bundles and found them to contain 185 pounds of cocaine.

The United States notified the government of Spain, which authorized the seizure of the ship and asked the Coast Guard to detain the crew, Karonis said.

The Terral and its crew of 10 Spanish citizens were escorted to San Juan, Puerto Rico Sunday by the Coast Guard Cutter Chilula. They were turned over to the jurisdiction of the Spanish consulate in Puerto Rico, and were being held by U.S. immigration authorities pending transfer to Spain for prosecution.

It was unclear who was to pick up the floating bundles of cocaine.

''CBS Sports announced today that it had declined to renew Brent Musburger's employment agreement, which expires within the next few months '' said a statement issued by CBS Sports president Neal Pilson.

''Brent has made an important contribution to the success of CBS Sports during the past 15 years,'' Pilson said. ''We have great respect for Brent and we wish him well.''

A CBS spokeswoman would not elaborate on the reasons for the decision.

Musburger is scheduled to make his final network appearance Monday night when he does the play-by-play at the NCAA basketball championship in Denver.

Musburger joined CBS Sports in 1975 as host of ''The NFL Today.'' He has anchored most of the network's major sports broadcasts, including ''CBS Sports Saturday and CBS Sports Sunday,'' the late-night U.S. Open Highlights tennis broadcasts, the NBA finals, the Masters tournament and the Pan American Games.

It had been expected that Musburger would take a primary role in baseball coverage under a new CBS contract with major league baseball.

His broadcast career began with the CBS Radio Chicago afffiliate WBBM in 1968 as sports director. He next moved to Los Angeles, where he co-anchored the nightly news for KNXT-TV, now KCBS-TV.

NEW YORK (APRIL 1) UPI - Police slammed shut 23 more illegal social clubs early Sunday, hoping to prevent a repeat of the blaze that asphyxiated 87 young partiers last week at a Bronx social club.

The crackdown came as the bodies of 48 victims of the fire arrived in Honduras, the impoverished Central American country many had left in search of a better life in the United States. Other bodies have been flown to Puerto Rico, Ecuador, and the Dominican Republic.

A special police task force has issued vacate orders to a total of 346 illicit clubs since a sweep by the city began last Sunday, said Officer Anthony Mazzola, a police spokesman.

Happy Land itself was issued a vacate order last fall for numerous fire code violations, but managed to stay open by falling through the cracks of regulatory red tape.

The Cuban immigrant accused of torching the club in a fit of jealous rage was indicted Friday on 174 counts of murder by a Bronx grand jury.

Julio Gonzalez, accused of the worst mass killing in U.S. history, was charged with 87 counts of second-degree murder for showing ''depraved indifference to human life'' and 87 counts of felony murder for arson.

The indictment also charged Gonzalez with two counts of arson, one count of attempted murder and one count of assault.

Relief workers, meanwhile, said the real tragedy of the fire has only now become apparent.

Many of the Honduran immigrants were sending money back home, and those families will now have to make up for the loss of their primary breadwinners, said Ken Curtin, director of Disaster Services for the Red Cross of Greater New York.

''We're trying to deal with the special needs of people not only in the Bronx, but also those supporting families in Honduras,'' he said.

Particularly upsetting, he said, were the cases of children who had been temporarily placed with friends or relatives in Honduras while one or both parents earned enough money to bring them to New York.

''There are children in Honduras, teenagers, who were planning to come to New York to be with their parents,'' Curtin said. ''Now they're in temporary homes staying with relatives.''

The Honduran Red Cross and Catholic Charities were organizing relief efforts in Honduras, Curtin said, relieving his organization of some of the reconstructive burden.

''This has been very intense week,'' he said.

The city's special task force has visited 1,251 suspected social clubs, of which 172 were open, Mazzola said. One person has been arrested, while 339 notices of violations and 202 summonses have been issued.

Political leaders have vowed the sweep will put the clubs permanently out of business, unlike two other similar programs launched in 1976 and 1988 in the wake of two other deadly social club fires.

''I, frankly, believe that (Mayor David Dinkins) will sustain this effort, and that he has the will to do it,'' Bronx Borough President Fernando Ferrer said on WNBC-TV's ''News Forum.''

Enraged his girlfriend had jilted him, Gonzalez, 36, splashed a dollar's worth of gasoline in the lobby of the illegal social club and then set it on fire, police said.

The late-night revelers were trapped on the windowless second floor and were asphyxiated as they tried to escape. Horrified firefighters and rescue workers found masses of bodies piled on top of each other.

The Happy Land social club fire was the worse mass slaying in U.S. history. Some 97 people were killed in an arson fire at the Dupont Plaza Hotel in San Juan, Puerto Rico on Dec. 31, 1986.

MOSCOW (APRIL 1) UPI - Lithuania's Parliament will convene Monday to discuss Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's demand to curtail its independence drive or face grave consequences, the republic's embattled president said Sunday.

Swedish and Danish television showed pictures of four heavily armored personnel carriers barreling through the center of Vilnius and past parliament, where its presidium, or executive arm, was meeting.

Last weekend, the Soviet army sent an armored column of more than 100 vehicles, including some tanks, roaring past parliament in a show of strength.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis, who was given a virtual ultimatum Saturday to annul the unilateral declaration of independence of March 11 or remain isolated, indicated the pressure was mounting for Lithuania to back down.

In his twin appeals to the Lithuanian Parliament and the Lithuanian people Gorbachev urged the lawmakers to rescind the March 11 declaration of independence as a condition for talks with Mosow. Failure to retract the declaration would bring ''grave consequences,'' he warned.

Speaking Sunday on Lithuanian television, Landsbergis said the the Lithuanian Parliament will consider Gorbachev's appeal on Monday and Tuesday in what promises to be a dramatic session with the tiny republic suddenly driven into a corner.

''It cannot be now demanded that we annul everything we bore in our hearts '' said Landsbergis, who founded Lithuania's Sajudis indepdence movement two years ago and then became the republic's president in March.

Gorbachev, in his appeal to the Lithuanian people, laid out what he said was the only acceptable for negotiating with Moscow.

''I am addressing you at a difficult time for our country,'' Gorbachev said. ''The March 11 decisions of the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet have brought us to a difficult point.''

''If the voice of reason is not heeded now, developments can have grave consequences for all of us,'' he said. ''We must be united in striving to prevent this.

''I have appealed to the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet, proposing that it immediately annul the illegal acts it has adopted,'' he said. ''This will open a possibility for discussing the entire range of problems on the solely acceptable basis - within the framework of the U.S.S.R. Constitution.''

Gorbachev reiterated that the independence act by Lithuania's Parliament on March 11 was ruled illegal by a resolution of the Congress of People's Deputies on March 15, the Soviet Union's supreme legislative organ.

Other resolutons and acts adopted by the Lithuanian Parliament have said the laws of the Soviet Union have no force on Lithuanian territory.

''I would like to state once again that this path is ruinous and will lead only to a dead end,'' Gorbachev said.

The appeal was carried by the Tass news agency and designated ''urgent'' and then read to the entire nation on the TV evening news show, ''Vremya.''

The statements represented the first definitive outline of Gorbachev's basis for a dialogue with the Lithuanians about their desire to separate from the Soviet Union to which they were annexed in 1940 along with Estonia and Latvia.

Since the declaration by Lithuania's Supreme Soviet, Gorbachev has refused to negotiate with Lithuania, saying Moscow negotiates only with foreign states.

(APRIL 1) UPI - Congressman Barney Frank says he WON'T announce his political intentions until the House Ethics Committee completes investigating him. Frank admits hiring a former male prostitute- Stephen Gobie- but denies allegations that he allowed Gobie to run a prostitution ring from his Washington apartment. Frank, a Massachusetts Democrat, made his comments at a birthday party in his honor last night in Boston.

Opposition groups in Nepal are skeptical about Nepalese King Birendra's intention to reform the nation's government by maintaining the current political framework. Birendra today fired nine ministers. It's NOT known if the action was taken to appease pro-democracy protesters who are calling for an end to a 29-year ban against political parties. Thousands of demonstrators marched again today.

America's time-pieces have been turned forward one hour for daylight-saving time. The ''springing forward'' is steeped in the idea of providing extra evening sunlight on either side of the hottest days of the year- generally in late July. But NOT everyone is happy about D-S-T. Farmers grouse about later sunrises, while fundamentalist Christians consider the concept unnatural.

Today is April first, a good day to view life through a wizened eye. But despite its reputation as a jackpot day for practical jokers, this April Fools' Day has practical aspects as well. Today marks the increase of the nation's minimum wage to three dollars and 80 cents an hour. It also marks the start of a strict NO smoking policy aboard AMTRAK trains and the return of floating gambling dens on the Mississippi River.

Southeast Trailways and Greyhound are separate companies but share passengers under a ''revenue pooling'' agreement. A Greyhound spokeswoman says the officials have NOT determined whether the latest shooting incident was strike-related. Greyhound is offering 100-thousand dollars for information leading to the conviction of a bus sniper.

State-run South African radio says 13 people were killed and a dozen others injured today when a car careened into a crowd on the outskirts of Port Elizabeth. The crowd was gathering at a rally to hear freed black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela. The radio report says the driver of the car was attacked and beaten by angry members of the crowd and was hospitalized in serious condition.

(APRIL 1) UPI - New calls for political reform in South Korea. One of the country's leading dissidents today repeated a demand that the National Assembly be dissolved and that new elections be called. Kim Dae Jung made the demand at a rally of his opposition Peace and Democracy Party in Puchon, 20-miles west of Seoul. The P-D-P is leading a petition drive to collect 10-Million signatures opposing the new union of the ruling Democratic Liberal Party and former opposition groups. That coalition controls 216 of the 299 seats in South Korea's parliament.

(APRIL 1) UPI - Thousands of commuters were left stranded in Buffalo, New York, today after transit officials shut down all bus and train service. The Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority voted 6-2 last night in favor of the shutdown after failing in a last-ditch bid to raise funds for the public transportation system.

The full impact of the shutdown woN'T be felt until tomorrow, when the work week begins. The transit system serves about 135-thousand weekday riders, including some 20-thousand public school students. The stoppage idled about 11-hundred workers. Transit officials had been threatening for six months to close down the system because of funding problems.

The driver of a Southeast Trailways bus who was shot and wounded by a sniper last night is reported in stable condition... undergoing surgery at a Nashville, Tennessee, hospital. Authorities say the driver was carrying passengers for strike-bound Greyhound when a sniper fired at the bus from a passing pickup truck. NONE of the 48 passengers was hurt.

The bodies of 50 of the 87 victims of last Sunday's fire at a Bronx social club were being flown to their native Honduras this morning aboard a D-C-8 jet chartered by the American Red Cross. BOULDER, CO (APRIL 2) UPI - A small plane crashed into a residential neighborhood Sunday, taking out power lines, cars and several buildings before smashing into a vacant house and exploding, officials said. At least one person aboard the plane was killed and one man on the ground was injured.

The plane, believed to be a twin-engine craft, crashed about 3:30 p.m. into the middle-class neighborhood in the Rocky Mountain foothills about 40 miles northwest of Denver.

The plane skidded down an alley that divides the block, taking out four or five garages and sheds, electrical and telephone lines, and scattering pieces of its burning fuselage before it crashed into the vacant house and exploded in flames, police spokesman David Grimm said.

Rescue workers pulled a body from the debris of the burning home, and Grimm said, ''We presume the body is the pilot, but it is burned beyond recognition. You can barely tell there is a plane in there. It looks like a bomb went off.''

''We don't have any idea yet how many people were in the plane,'' the police spokesman said, adding that investigators had pieced together the identification number of the plane and were trying to determine its origin and destination.

Witnesses said it appeared that three homes caught fire, but Grimm noted, ''It looks as though it only hit one house, ... but it knocked down several other structures. We think they are garages and backyard sheds. There are a number of cars that appear to be turned over and burned.''

The victim on the ground, Harold Parks, was ''literally blown'' out of his garage where he was working by the impact of the wreck, a witness said. His son, Steve Davis, a Boulder County deputy sheriff, said Parks suffered a broken leg.

Several witnesses saw the plane approach the city, about 40 miles northwest of Denver. Kristy Turner, who lives about 3 miles west of town, said she was working in her driveway when she heard the loud noise of a plane engine flying overhead.

''It just dropped in real low over Sugarloaf Mountain. You could see it was out of control,'' Turner said. ''It was flipping over on its side and dropping down and up drastically.''

Turner said she watched as the plane passed over the city and nose-dived straight to the ground. ''There were just huge billows of smoke,'' she said.

Virginia Maitland, who lives just a few houses down from where the plane crashed, said she was feeding her baby when she heard a loud boom. ''I jumped up and then heard a second crash and boom, like something had exploded,'' she said. ''In just a matter of seconds the fire was raging. There are at least three houses on fire.''

Another witness, Gary Faris, said he was sitting in his backyard when he noticed that the plane was in trouble.

''Its left wingtip was pointing straight down,'' Faris said. ''It was definitely a twin-engine plane. He leveled out just above the hospital. He went out of our sight, and not a second later we heard the impact.''

Faris said there was no visible damage to the plane before it crashed. ''The engine was screaming wild, but there was no smoke,'' he said. ''But he did look like he was having trouble holding it.''

Grant Moore, 37, was hiking on top of 6,700-foot Mount Sanitas west of town when he saw the plane about 200 feet above him.

''The plane wobbled side to side, and then it fishtailed,'' Moore said. ''Then it stopped fishtailing and started dipping its wings from side to side. It looked like the pilot was trying all the moves he could make to get control.''

Moore said he lost sight of the plane when it went over a ridge. About a minute later he heard an explosion.

''My heart sank,'' he said.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (APRIL 2) UPI - El Salvador's Roman Catholic Church condemned right-wing death squads Sunday and scolded President Alfredo Cristiani for saying they will exist as long as there is an armed insurgency in the country.

The church issued the rebuke as leftist rebels and government troops observed a one-day truce to allow for a nationwide vaccination campaign.

Deputy Health Minister Gustavo Argueta inaugurated the campaign and praised the church for its efforts in bringing about the cease-fire.

The vaccination program, supported by the U.N. Children's Fund, is aimed at innoculating 150,000 infants under the age of 1 and 30,000 pregnant women against polio, whooping cough, tetanus, measles and diphtheria.

The rebel's clandestine Radio Venceremos urged parents to take their children to be vaccinated, reaffirming the guerrillas' commitment to maintaining the truce. The armed forces also reported total calm across the country.

Monsignor Ricardo Urioste, secretary general of the San Salvador diocese, condemned killings by right-wing death squads in his sermon at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart.

Cristiani, during a visit last week to Venezuela, said ''violence breeds violence'' and that El Salvador's notorious death squads will continue to be active as long as leftist rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front continue their armed struggle.

Urioste said the church ''protests against all that goes against life created by God.''

He said the church considers the violence in El Salvador to be a product of the social injustice that has prevailed for years, and he stressed that violence is the wrong road to solve political and social problems.

The death squads, which have been linked to the Salvadoran military, have been responsible for many of the more than 72,000 deaths during a decade of civil war in El Salvador.

The squads have preyed on suspected leftists, employing kidnapping, torture and murder.

Former President Jose Napoleon Duarte and former U.S. Ambassador Robert White linked the death squads to Cristiani's Nationalist Republican Alliance, known as ARENA, and to ARENA founder and current legislator Roberto D'Aubuisson.

D'Aubuisson has been accused of ordering the 1980 assassination of Archbishop Oscar Romero, although he has never been charged in the killing.

GUATEMALA CITY (APRIL 1) UPI - The leader of the National Advancement Party, an increasingly popular moderate political organization, Sunday denounced a grenade attack on the group's headquarters in the capital, calling it ''an act of intimidation.''

Luis Flores Asturias, secretary general of the party, known by the Spanish acronym PAN, said a man who appeared drunk stopped at party headquarters shortly before 3 p.m. Saturday and demanded to be allowed in, but security guards denied him entrance.

Minutes later a car sped by and its occupants tossed a grenade over the perimeter wall. The grenade exploded, shattering windows, pulverizing a section of the concrete driveway and injuring security guards Julio Cesar Gudiel Ramirez, Oscar Anibal Garcia and Gerardo Santos Zea.

The three guards were treated Saturday at the capital's Social Security Hospital and later released.

No one claimed responsibility for the attack and the assailants have not been identified.

''This is definitely an act of intimidation. It could have been any of a number of groups, but most likely it was one of the traditionalist parties. We are a young party that has grown quickly, and they are trying to discourage people from joining,'' Asturias said.

In an interview from Salama, about 37 miles from the capital, PAN presidential candidate Alvaro Arzu said the attack was the result of the party's rising popularity.

''It's ironic that while we are out here campaigning in conflictive areas, our party is attacked in the capital, which is normally peaceful,'' Arzu said.

''It looks as if the drunk man came by to check the place out and see how many people were here,'' Asturias said, adding that a group of 17 young party activists had gone out to lunch minutes before the explosion.

''The problem with politics in Guatemala is that it is a dirty, dangerous business. We expected something like this to happen. We were talking about it just three weeks ago,'' Asturias said.

PAN registered as a political party in May 1989 and now has some 7,000 active members.

In a nationwide poll carried out last month by the Chamber of Free Enterprise, 8 percent of potential voters named Arzu when asked who they would choose for president if elections - scheduled for the fall - were held the next day.

The poll showed that 24 percent of the voters in the capital favored the PAN over other parties, three percent more than in December. Thirty-eight percent of those polled were undecided.

DENVER (APRIL 2) UPI - Brent Musburger, the highest-profile broadcaster in sports television, will not have his contract renewed because of conflicts with CBS over his role at the network.

Word of the unanticipated split Sunday came the day before Musburger was to handle the play-by-play report of Monday night's NCAA championship game between Duke and Nevada-Las Vegas.

CBS Sports President Neal Pilson said in a two-paragraph statement from the network's temporary quarters in Denver that Monday night's game would be Musburger's last assignment with CBS.

Musburger's contract was to expire in a few months. Ted Shaker, executive producer for CBS Sports, said renewal negotiations had been going on ''for some time.''

''We just didn't seem to be on the same page,'' Shaker said. ''Finally, it came down to not renewing at all.''

Such is the power of sports television and Musburger's place in the industry that Sunday's developments overshadowed news conferences by the Duke and Nevada-Las Vegas teams.

Musburger, 50, helped CBS become a force in sports television and has anchored most major sports events. But Shaker suggested Musburger's on-air presence no longer suited the network's needs.

''I don't know how you put image in a contract,'' he said.

Shaker said discussion of the move occurred after Saturday night's Final Four coverage. Pilson met with Todd Musburger, the broadcaster's brother and agent.

Shaker said it was Todd Musburger's decision to announce the move immediately if CBS was not intent on renewal.

Susan Kerr, a CBS spokeswoman, said the network did not plan to handle the announcement in such a manner and called it an ''unfortunate circumstance'' that the news came on the eve of the championship game.

Shaker called Musburger a ''professional'' and said he was not concerned over his performance Monday night. Shaker said it would be Musburger's decision on whether he addresses his departure during the broadcast.

Musburger phoned a brief statement to CBS's workroom in Denver. He did not mention his conflicts with the network but said he had a ''great run'' with CBS and now plans an ''extended vacation.'' He said he hopes to eventually resume broadcasting.

CBS chose not to distribute the remarks, saying the network wanted Musburger to speak for himself.

Shaker said Musburger and CBS had disagreements over money and assignments. Musburger is believed to be the second highest paid on-air broadcaster at CBS after news anchor Dan Rather.

Musburger is one of CBS's most versatile broadcasters, having covered pro and college football and basketball, golf and tennis. He joined CBS in 1975 as host of ''The NFL Today'' and is covering his sixth NCAA Tournament.

However, his exuberance and constant visibility irritated many critics. Musburger seemed to be everywhere, and while his work was diligent his coverage often bordered on boosterism.

Shaker said it was ''overblown'' to suggest CBS chose to renew the contract because of media pressure.

''But it's insulting to say we don't understand our own business,'' he said.

Shaker said the network was troubled by Musburger's workload. He said CBS will not name a replacement for Musburger but wants to incorporate its other announcers into coverage.

''One thing we're proud of is our bench,'' Shaker said.

The split comes at a time when CBS is to begin baseball telecasts this season. Musburger was scheduled to lead the broadcast team. Shaker did not know who would fill Musburger's baseball spot.

''Brent has made an important contribution to the success of CBS Sports during the past 15 years,'' Pilson in his only remark in the statement. ''We have great respect for Brent and we wish him well.''

Kerr, in a national media conference call, said a decision on the network's baseball telecast team likely would be made by the end of the week.

''There are a lot of people we could turn to,'' said the network spokeswoman. ''A lot of people have been asking me about Al Michaels (of ABC) but I understand he is under contract. I have no knowledge that he has been talked to.''

Kerr said the network in the 1990s did not want a single person handling most major events and that Shaker wanted to provide opportunities to showcase other CBS Sports talent, such as Jim Nantz and Greg Gumbel.

''Those are two of the people he would like to give major exposure to,'' she said.

The spokeswoman said employees at CBS, for the most part, were surprised by the split.

''Shock is not too strong a word,'' she said. ''There weren't a lot of pepole who knew the difficulty in the contract negotiations.

''Nobody ever looked at CBS Sports without thinking of Brent Musburger, including those of us here. He does have a lot of good friends here, a lot of people here who are sad.''

(APRIL 1) UPI - Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis announced today that the republic's parliament will meet tomorrow to discuss Soviet President Gorbachev's ultimatum to withdraw its declaration of independence.

Landsbergis indicates the pressure is mounting for Lithuania to back down on its drive to independence.

He spoke on national television today... telling Lithuanians the parliament will consider Gorbachev's demand. But Landsbergis added- ''It canNOT be now demanded that we annul everything we bore in our hearts.''

An aide to Landsbergis tells United Press International that the presidium or executive arm, of Lithuania's parliament met today... but the aide did NOT say what was dicusssed.

Gorbachev yesterday warned of ''grave consequences'' if Lithuania does NOT give up its efforts at independence.

China is taking NO chances in trying to avoid a repeat of last year's pro-democracy protests in Tiananmen Square in Beijing.

Police today cordoned off most of the central square from the public. The square was occupied by uniformed marching bands and groups of children called the Communist Party's Young Pioneers.

Fire trucks with water cannon were stationed on either side of the square. Lookouts with binoculars were perched on nearby roofs.

One Chinese official said the security ''proves how terrified the leadership is.''

Just days ago, the government warned citizens to avoid Tiananmen Square from today to June 4th. That span covers a series of anniversaries marking last spring's protest movement in the square.

Overseas dissidents who fled Beijing have recently sent fax messages and letters to Beijing urging residents to ''take walks'' through the square. The walks are to protest the army's killing of hundreds, perhaps thousands of demonstrators last June.

(APRIL 1) UPI - Scotland Yard says it's investigating yesterday's tax protest that degenerated into a riot in central London.

Police arrested 341 people around the country... mostly on public disorder charges. More than 400 crimes have been reported.

The king of Nepal today made an effort to appease pro-democracy protesters but thousands of angry marchers again took to the streets of the capital of Katmandu.

Harvard-educated King Birendra fired nine of his 11 Cabinet members. But analysts note he retained the minister of state for home affairs, suggesting a continued hard-line approach to opposition.

The king replaced his foreign minister, who resigned yesterday to protest police shootings which killed two demonstrators in the town of Patan.

In Katmandu, seven-thousand pro-democracy protesters armed with knives, sticks and sickles took over the streets hours after the king's announcement.

They called for answering ''murder with murder.''

95 percent of doctors and health professionals are refusing to go to work, virtually shutting down all hospitals and clinics.

Schools were closed because of what was called a ''lack of academic atmosphere.''

Last night, bands of citizens set up road blocks and patrolled neighborhoods in Katmandu to fend off reported police raids.

(APRIL 1) UPI - A fuel spill is threatening the drinking water supply of one-Million people living along the Allegheny River in Pennsylvania.

The eight-mile slick has forced authorities to close water intake pipes and ban all NON-essential water uses by residents of a dozen communities.

Allegheny and Westmoreland counties have set up portable tanks to provide drinking and cooking water.

Authorities say schools and businesses might be closed if water supplies become even more critical.

The slick was caused by a landslide which cracked a pipeline Friday night at Freeport, 30 miles north of Pittsburgh. The pipeline released about 76-thousand gallons of gasoline and other petroleum products, which spilled into a tributary to the Allegheny.

The slick is expected to take at least four days to move by Pittsburgh. City officials have called for voluntary water conservation.

A Republican and a Democratic senator today issued a bipartisan call for the United States to get tough against foreign countries trying to get their first nuclear weapons.

Their calls come after Thursday's charges accusing Iraq of trying to acquire nuclear weapons detonators.

Republican William Cohen of Maine says the United States should be as hard on Iraq as it is on Libya when it comes to weapons proliferation.

Cohen said Washington should warn allies- quote- ''that if you hand a flamethrower to a pyromaniac, then someone's going to get burned.''

Cohen suggested using economic sanctions to block the spread of nuclear arms.

Democratic Senator Jeff Bingaman of New Mexico said U-S officials should use ''strong diplomatic measures'' against both buyers and sellers of nuclear weapons devices.

Iraq's deputy foreign minister suggested today that the seized devices were meant for industrial research.

(APRIL 1) UPI - A plane crash in Boulder, Colorado...

Strikebound Greyhound vows NOT to be intimidated by ''terrorism''...

And Buffalo, New York, is without mass transit tonight...

These stories... and the latest on Lithuania... next, from United Press International:

A small plane crashed into a house in a residential neighborhood of Boulder, Colorado, this afternoon. At least one person on the ground was slightly injured.

The fate of those on the plane is NOT known, but police doubted anyone aboard could've survived. Police spokesman David Grimm says he could hardly tell there was a plane at the crash site.

The plane is believed to have been a twin-engine craft. It crashed into what apparently was a vacant home... scattering burning parts throughout the neighborhood and sparking several fires in nearby buildings.

Police are trying to piece together a tail section to get numbers to identify the aircraft.

Grimm says the plane appears to have hit only one house, but knocked down several garages and sheds. Cars were turned over and burned.

A witness says the only known injury from the crash was blown out of his garage by the impact of the wreck. He was treated for a minor hip injury.

The chairman of Greyhound says the company will continue to refuse negotiations with striking workers until violence against the carrier stops.

Chairman Fred Currey says union officials- quote- ''deplore violence but do NOthing about it.''

Late last night, the driver of a Southeast Trailways bus carrying Greyhound passengers was shot in northern Tennessee by a sniper in a passing pickup truck. The bus driver was hospitalized in critical condition.

Currey was asked at a news conference in Nashville today whether he thought strikers were responsible for the latest in a series of shooting incidents. He replied that people can draw their own conclusions.

Last week, Greyhound called off plans for renewing contract negotiations. The company has offered a 100-thousand-dollar reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any bus snipers.

Edward Strait... president of the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions... repeated the union's condemnation of violence. He suggested some violence has been caused by ''unsafe and ill-trained replacement drivers'' against people on the picket lines.

(APRIL 1) UPI - Commuters in Buffalo, New York, will have a tough time getting to the hockey game between the Buffalo Sabres and the Quebec Nordiques tonight. And they'll have even a harder time getting to work or to school in the morning.

Officials of the cash-strapped Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority voted late last night to shut down all service because they did NOT get a tax increase they'd been seeking from county legislators. Transit officials hope public outcry over the shut-down will inspire the government to give them a permanent funding source.

The Buffalo teachers union plans to seek a court order tomorrow to get the transit system back in operation.

Three times in the past six months the authority has threatened to close... but each time the county bailed the authority out with emergency funding. There has been little talk of raising the basic one-dollar fare on the system.

Moscow is keeping up the pressure on Lithuania as legislators prepare to discuss Soviet President Gorbachev's demand to stop the march to independence tomorrow.

Last weekend, the Soviet army sent an armored column of more than 100 vehicles... including tanks... rumbling past parliament in a show of strength.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis indicated the pressure was mounting for Lithuania to back down. Speaking today on Lithuanian television, Landsbergis said the Lithuanian Parliament will consider Gorbachev's warning tomorrow and Tuesday in what promises to be a dramatic session.

(APRIL 1) UPI - Four large liquid fuel tanks near Sydney, Australia, exploded today... sending balls of flame 600 feet high and forcing the evacuation of thousands of people from their homes.

Fire chiefs say the blaze was the most violent in Sydney's history. Police describe the evacuation of everyone within a two-mile radius of the fire as the biggest emergency operation in the city in 20 years.

The conflagration in the south suburbs prompted authorities to close the nearby international airport.

Despite the destruction, police say NO one was injured. The blaze was brought under control after seven hours and residents allowed to return to their homes a couple of hours after that.

The blast involved four tanks of more than 26-thousand gallons of liquid petroleum gas at the Boral Gas plant. The gas includes propane and butane and is used in cooking stoves and automobiles in Australia.

One fire control officer said the main explosion was like a bomb. Residents thought a plane had crashed.

The cease-fire has been broken once again in Beirut.

Mortar batteries and rocket launchers lit up the sky tonight in fighting between the two Christian generals that signed a truce 24 hours ago. Police say automatic gunfire and other artillery rumbled through east Beirut... destroying apartment buildings and killing at least three people.

The new eruption of violence raises the death toll to 58 and the number of wounded to 110 in two days of heavy fighting. Since the battles began in January, more than 900 people have died and more than two-thousand have been wounded.

Military sources say General Samir Geagea launched attacks against General Michel Aoun's army in neighboring villages to distract Aoun from attacking the militia headquarters in east Beirut.

A source close to Aoun says the general is ''now ready to engage in political efforts to break the deadlock and reach a settlement.''

The B-B-C reports more than 100 prisoners barricaded themselves on a prison roof and one-thousand more were loose inside the facility.

The uprising began during a service in the prison chapel and swept through the jail as others joined the violence in a protest against living conditions. The prisoners' complaints have NOT been made available to the media.

Fires were set in a cellblock, classroom and gymnasium.

Officials refused to comment on reports that a number of prison guards had been taken hostage.

The area surrounding the prison was sealed off and police helicopters hovered overhead to monitor prisoners' movements. Police in full riot gear entered the prison.

The justice system lost a suspected drug-dealer, but the University of Miami gained a professor. At least that's how the University of Miami student newspaper reported it.

The school paper scored an April Fools' scoop with a prank story saying that Panama's Manuel Noriega had been freed from prison under a work-release plan. The story said Noriega would teach ''Geography of Coca-Growing Regions'' at the University of Miami.

Miami Hurricane Editor Tom Higgens claims a lot of people- including administrators- thought the story was real. Higgens maintains students were threatening to drop out of the university.

The story ran Friday, the last issue published before April Fools' Day.

The phony report said Noriega liked the campus because its ''swaying palm trees'' reminded him of home.

April Fools' pranksters were also busy in Hollywood, California, where they altered the famous city sign to read HA'LLYWOOD... that's H-A-apostrophe-double-L-Y-W-double-O-D.

But heavy fog obscured the attempt at humor until police could remove the fabric that changed the sign.

BAKERSFIELD, CA (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Wells Fargo & Co. (NYSE:WFC) completed the purchase of Central Pacific Corp. (ASE:CTA) and its subsidiary, American National Bank, on Saturday, March 31, 1990.

The purchase price was approximately $160 million, or $28.50 per share.

Wiley will join Wells Fargo Bank as executive vice president and manager of Wells Fargo's new Inland Valley division, which includes 71 offices from San Joaquin County to Riverside County, and has its headquarters in Bakersfield.

Ray Dezember, chairman of Central Pacific Corp., has joined Wells Fargo & Co.'s board of directors.

Out of 29 American National offices, 15 were converted to Wells Fargo Bank branches over the weekend. Fourteen offices were consolidated into either Wells Fargo or other converted American National offices, where offices of the two banks were located very near each other.

In addition, two Wells Fargo branches, one in Bakersfield and the other in Visalia, were closed and merged with American National offices. A total of 15 new offices were added to Wells Fargo's branch system statewide as a result of the merger.

The 15 new Wells Fargo offices include two offices in Bakersfield and one office each in Caruthers, Ceres, Chowchilla, Delano, Fresno, Lancaster, McFarland, Palmdale, Rialto, Riverbank, Rosamond, San Bernardino and Victorville. Wells Fargo will keep American National's original Bakersfield branch at 22nd and L Streets as its Bakersfield downtown office.

Wiley, who will continue to oversee these offices in his new division, said the offices have been remodeled to give them the ''Wells Fargo look.'' New ATMs, customer service telephones and new teller computer systems have been added to the branches.

Wiley also announced that Wells Fargo has established, effective today, two new Bakersfield-based lending centers, one for small business loans, the other for real estate construction loans. These centers will be staffed entirely by former American National Bank employees.

Every effort has been made to place as many of the American National employees as possible who wanted positions at Wells Fargo, according to Lois Rice, executive vice president of Wells Fargo Bank. Rice said final figures on the number of employees who will retain jobs at Wells Fargo will be available later in the month.

Wells Fargo signed a definitive agreement to purchase Central Pacific Corp. on Sept. 21, 1989. The acquisition received approval from federal regulators, including the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC) and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System on Monday, Feb. 26, 1990.

Wells Fargo has also recently purchased Glendale-based Valley National Bank and Solana Beach-based Torrey Pines Group and its subsidiary, Torrey Pines Bank, on Jan. 1 and April 1, 1990, respectively.

Wells Fargo & Co., which had $48.7 billion in assets at Dec. 31, 1989, is the parent of Wells Fargo Bank, the third largest bank in California. FORT WORTH, TX (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - American Airlines Decision Technologies announced Monday that it will market its newly developed software designed to help airlines more efficiently schedule cockpit and cabin crews.

The software, called the Workstation Crew Allocation System, runs on the RISC platform of MIPS Computer Systems Inc. American Airlines recently converted its crew scheduling software to the MIPS system.

It has enabled American to solve very large optimization problems and schedule crews for all of its fleets. Currently the state-of-the-art system provides scheduling for as many as 180 MD80 aircraft, for example, and American officials said they anticipate scheduling up to 350 aircraft in one fleet by the mid 1990s. American Airlines Decision Technologies will begin marketing the Workstation Crew Allocation System to other carriers in April.

The software is based on American's mainframe-driven system known as TRIP, the industry leader which is used by 10 airlines today.

The MIPS system configuration used by American Airlines is comprised of R82030 workstations networked to the MIPS RC3240 deskside servers, one of which serves as a communications gateway to an IBM 3090 mainframe. The workstations, each with a 16-inch color monitor, include 12 MB of memory and 172 MB of disk.

An RS2030 workstation delivers 12 mips of performance and an RC3240 RISComputer delivers 18 mips of performance. American delivers the Workstation Crew Allocation System with RISC/os (MIPS' implementation of the UNIX operating system), FORTRAN compiler, X Window System, and OSF/Motif.

American Airlines Decision Technologies is a wholly owned subsidiary of AMR Corp. and is a leader in the development of new technology for the airline industry.

MIPS Computer Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:MIPS) is a leading supplier of RISC-based products, including technology, computer systems, optimizing compilers and operating systems. OAKLAND, CA (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - The U.S. Department of Energy and GE Nuclear Energy signed a $140 million contract here Monday to continue development of GE's Simplified Boiling Water Reactor (SBWR), an advanced light water reactor design that emphasizes simplicity through natural circulation and passive systems.

The DOE will provide $48.5 million of the contract total. In addition to the DOE award, another $90 million will be added to the endeavor by a team of U.S. and overseas firms, as well as the Electric Power Research Institute, the nonprofit research and development arm of the electric power industry.

The contract signing took place at the DOE's San Francisco Operations Office which is responsible for management of DOE's Simplified Passive Advanced Light Water Reactor Program.

Besides design and development, the contract calls for GE to submit its SBWR design to the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission for certification as a standardized nuclear plant design. GE has targeted 1995 for NRC certification.

The SBWR features natural circulation and passive, simplified safety systems including a passive core cooling system in which water flows by gravity to the reactor. In the event that the SBWR's safety systems are called upon, they will perform reliably without the need for pumps, traditional heat exchangers or even operator action.

GE's SBWR effort began in the early 1980s. In 1985, the company teamed with the architect engineering firm Bechtel, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, to perform a conceptual design study for EPRI.

GE's SBWR work has drawn strong international support. Engineers representing companies in Japan, The Netherlands and Italy have joined with the GE engineering team in San Jose, Calif., to continue work to optimize the SBWR design.

The SBWR program is one of three advanced nuclear power plants of GE design. The Tokyo Electric Power Co. will soon begin building two Advanced Boiling Water Reactors (ABWR) of GE design. The first unit is scheduled for commercial operation in 1996 and the second in 1998. The ABWR will also be certified by the NRC in the United States in 1991. In addition, GE is working on an advanced liquid metal reactor under a $90 million contract awarded by the DOE last year.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Charles A. Norris, president of Deer Park Spring Water Inc., has been named president of the McKesson Water Division, the nation's second largest bottled water company, Rex R. Malson, president and chief operating officer of McKesson Corp., announced Monday.

His appointment is effective May 7.

McKesson Water, headquartered in Los Angeles, produces and markets bottled drinking water and operates water vending machines in California, Arizona, Nevada, Texas, Louisiana and Florida under the Sparkletts, Alhambra, Crystal-Fresh and Aqua-Vend brand names.

McKesson Water also produces and markets seltzer under the Sparkletts brand and imports and sells natural fruit flavored sparkling spring water under the Wallaroo brand. Revenues in the current fiscal year ending March 31 will be approximately $230 million.

Norris, who has been with Deer Park since 1981, was named president in 1987. Deer Park, headquartered in Lodi, N.J., is the fifth largest bottled water company in the U.S., with operations from Massachusetts to Florida.

In announcing the appointment of Norris, Malson said, ''We are fortunate to be able to attract an executive with such an outstanding track record in the bottled water industry.''

JACKSON, MI (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - EastGroup Properties (ASE:EGP) announced today the results for the three months and year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, the trust reported net income of $13,996,000 ($5.56 per share). Of this amount, $2,154,000 (86 cents per share), was income from operations, $12,297,000 ($4.88 per share) represented gains on sales of investments and a loss of $(455,000) (18 cents per share) was from a non-cash bond restructuring loss.

In keeping with EastGroup's investment strategy, the 1989 gains on the sales of investments were largely reinvested through tax deferred exchanges into (1) the 51 percent ownership of the 201,000 square foot 8150 Leesburg Pike office building in Tyson's Corner, Va. (which brings EastGroup's ownership to 100 percent), (2) the 208,000 square foot Sunbelt Center Warehouse and 34,500 square foot La Quinta Drive Warehouse in Orlando, Fla., and (3) the 97,500 square foot Deerwood Center Warehouse in Jacksonville, Fla.

Net income for the year ended Dec. 31, 1988, was $8,863,000 ($3.48 per share). Of this amount, $3,892,000 ($1.50 per share) was income from operations, and $5,034,000 ($1.98 per share) represented gains on sales of investments. The 1988 gains were reinvested in eight warehouses located in Texas and Colorado.

The trust's net loss for the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, was $1,938,000 (78 cents per share). Of this amount, $463,000 (18 cents per share) was income from operations, $(1,946,000) (78 cents per share) represented the trust's loss on sales of investments which was due primarily to a $2,171,000 loss recorded on a writedown of a tract of land in New Orleans, and $(455,000) (18 cents per share) was from a bond restructuring loss.

These figures compare with the loss from the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988, of $1,065,000 (40 cents per share). Of this amount, $224,000 (10 cents per share) was income from operations and ($1,289,000) (50 cents per share) represented the trust's loss on sales of investments.

Cash flow from operations was 33 cents per share for the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, as compared to 44 cents per share for the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988. Our results were negatively impacted by the four Travelodge Motels, which had cash losses from operations of 12 cents per share in the fourth quarter.

SUNNYVALE, CA (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Advanced Micro Devices Inc. Monday announced it is shipping volume quantities of the industry's fastest commercially available megabit EPROM.

Manufactured in an aggressive CMOS technology that results in the industry's smallest die size, the Am27H010 features a 45 nanosecond access time.

The 45ns CMOS Am27H010 allows users to maximize system performance by executing code directly from the EPROM, without the need for wait states. This device also reduces total system cost and eliminates cache and bank interleaved memory architectures which take up valuable board space.

The Am27H010 can be used with RISC, CISC and digital signal processors to take advantage of today's fast clock speeds. The addition of even a single wait state with these processors slows performance by 30 percent. The Am27H010 allows zero wait state operation of all popular high-performance processors such as the 25MHz 80286.

System applications for the new high-speed device include laser printers, workstations, graphics, switching networks, and digital signal processing.

The Am27H010 utilizes the standard JEDEC pinout making it functionally compatible with AMD's earlier commodity megabit devices including the Am27C010. This EPROM supports AMD's Flashrite programming algorithm which allows the entire chip to be programmed in less than 30 seconds.

AMD's Am27H010, organized 128K x 8 bits, is now available in production quantities in 32-pin DIP and surface mount packages. In 1,000 piece quantities, the 45ns Am27H010 is priced at $40 in commercial temperature ranges in ceramic DIP packages.

At 55ns, in 1,000-piece quantities, the device is priced at $27. The Am27H010 is also available in 70ns and 90ns speed grades. It is also offered in industrial and extended temperature ranges. Delivery is from stock. A military qualified version will be available in the third quarter of 1990.

Advanced Micro Devices Inc. is the fifth-largest U.S.-based manufacturer of integrated circuits. The company provides total high-performance solutions for the manufacturers of communications and computation equipment, executed in bipolar and CMOS technologies.

AMD specializes in microprocessors and related peripherals, memories, networking and communications devices, office automation components and programmable logic devices. The company has manufacturing plants in the United States, Europe and the Far East.

REDWOOD CITY, CA (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Network Equipment Technologies Inc. (NYSE:NWK) said Monday it expects revenue and net income for the fourth fiscal quarter and year ended March 31 to be significantly less than anticipated.

The company estimates that while revenue for the quarter will exceed revenue of the comparable period last year, earnings per share could be less than last year's 33 cents per share. The company also said that revenue in the fourth quarter ended March 31 will be lower than the $52 million reported in the third fiscal quarter.

N.E.T. said that its results reflected a greater than expected drop-off in sales through its IBM channel, and failure to receive final confirmation of certain, anticipated orders at the end of the fiscal quarter.

N.E.T. expects to announce final results on April 25.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - LIVE Entertainment Inc. (NASDAQ:LIVE) announced Monday record results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Revenues for 1989 were $437,262,000, a 24 percent increase over the $352,128,000 for 1988. This includes $52,202,000 from Strawberries, the music and video retail chain acquired on June 2, 1989. Excluding those revenues, LIVE's revenues rose 9 percent over those of a year ago.

Operating profit of $42,864,000 showed a 30 percent increase over 1988's $32,918,000. Income before taxes, amortization of goodwill and other income was $26,326,000 for 1989, an 18 percent increase over the previous year. Goodwill and covenant amortization for 1989 of $3,935,000 was nearly twice the comparable 1988 figure of $2,098,000. Pre-tax income, exclusive of other income, was $22,391,000.

Other income, primarily the proceeds from key man life insurance policies covering Jose E. Menendez, LIVE's late chairman, net of certain other deductions and expenses, totaled $6,236,000 before taxes. This compares to $7,241,000 of other income in 1988, principally the gain on the sale of LIVE's videocassette manufacturing company.

Net income attributable to common stock of $19,060,000 in 1989 was 30 percent above the comparable 1988 figure of $14,688,000. Tax charges under FASB 96, primarily deferred taxes, of $9,200,000 were substantially higher than previously anticipated and than the rate reported for the nine months.

This charge will not cause actual taxes paid to be above the company's prior projection, either for 1989 or in future years. In 1988 preferred dividends were $2,860,000; for 1989, such dividends were only $367,000 in the first quarter, prior to the conversion of all outstanding preferred stock into common in April, 1989.

Earnings per share in 1989 was $1.67 compared to $1.78 per fully diluted share in 1988. The decline in earnings per share, despite the substantial increase in net income, is the effect of a 19 percent increase in the number of shares outstanding vs. last year and a decline in the contribution from other income compared to 1988.

For the fourth quarter of 1989, revenues of $181,115,000 were 37 percent above those of 1988's final period; excluding Strawberries' fourth quarter revenues of $24,655,000, total revenues were 21 percent above those of 1988's fourth period.

Operating profit of $20,549,000 was 22 percent higher than the 1988 fourth quarter figure of $16,796,000. Income before taxes, amortization of goodwill and other income was $15,229,000 for 1989, a 12 percent increase over the previous year. Goodwill and covenant amortization for 1989 of $1,595,000 was more than five times the comparable 1988 figure.

Carolco Pictures Inc. (NYSE:CRC) owns a 49 percent voting interest in LIVE.

ACTON, MA (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Bechtel Software Inc. has added a new reporting module to SYNERGY, its ORACLE-based, project management and control software.

The new module, called Report Designer, is a menu-style report generation tool which considerably reduces the time required and the level of user sophistication needed to produce customized project management reports.

Report Designer users can produce a wide variety of basic and complex reports from any ORACLE tabels or views, while increasing productivity by up to ten times. Report Designer functions as a guide, prompting the user for information regarding the data, text headings, and format of the desired report.

KANSAS CITY, MO (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Oppenheimer Industries Inc. announced its board of directors has approved a preliminary agreement for potential sale of a controlling interest in the company.

Control would be transferred through a two-step transaction to a group composed of U.S. Real Estate Advisors Inc. and Wespac Investors Trust III. The board's preliminary approval is subject to due diligence and reaching a definitive acquisition agreement.

In June, 1989, Oppenheimer annoucned a restructuring plan to divest itself of all holdings except for the 380,000 acre Armendaris Ranch in central New Mexico and to concentrate its efforts on obtaining resources for the development of that lake front and agricultural property.

The first step of the proposed transaction involves the sale of 825,000 shares of Oppenheimer to Wespac for $825,000. Payment for these shares will be in the form of a note maturing on May 31, secured by certain properties owned by Wespac.

In the second step, upon USREA and Wespac providing an additional $1.175 million of secured notes and obtaining a new $10 million line of credit for Oppenheimer and upon the approval of Oppenheimer shareholders, approximately 3.5 million additional shares will be issued to USREA and Wespac. In that transaction, the purchasers will also receive options to acquire approximately 5.9 million shares at an exercise price of $1.00 per share.

The initial transaction is expected to be completed by April 13. The second step is expected to be completed before June 15.

William R. Ball, chairman of Oppenheimer stated, ''This transaction is the culminating step in the restructuring effort which has dramatically reduced corporate debt, operating costs, and liabilities.

''Having USREA as our largest stockholder will strengthen the position of the company to pursue its long-term objective of developing the Armendaris Ranch. With the financial backing experience and expertise of USREA in developing real estate, we believe that Oppenheimer can obtain the time and funds necessary to advance those development efforts so that our stockholders can maximize the value of their interests in Oppenheimer.''

DALLAS (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Southmark Corp. (NYSE:QSM) announced

Monday the filing of its amended Plan of Reorganization, following extensive discussions with its Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors.

In making the announcement, Arthur G. Weiss, chairman of the board, commented, ''Since filing Capter 11 last July, our objective has been to avoid lengthy and expensive litigation and to provide prompt distributions from the estate. This plan should enable us to achieve our goal of obtaining plan confirmation by July of this year, just one year after entering bankruptcy.''

Lewis Kruger of Stroock & Stroock & Lavan, counsel to the Creditors' Committee, said that the committee will withdraw its pending motion to terminate Southmark's exclusive right to file a plan, under which the committee had proposed an alternative plan that contemplated complete liquidation of Southmark.

The revised plan still provides for approval of Southmark's previous agreement with federal thrift regulators with respect to the recapitalization of Southmark's San Jacinto Savings Association and the settlement of claims that might have been asserted by the thrift or its regulators.

Southmark anticipates that pursuant to the plan senior creditors will receive up to $75 million in cash shortly after confirmation. Senior claimants will also receive secured notes and preferred and common stock of reorganized Southmark. The plan calls for the payment of the notes and retirement of the preferred stock with the proceeds from the liquidation of Southmark's assets.

That liquidation, and the future management of the company, will be supervised by a new board of directors to be elected by the creditors.

Holders of subordinated debt will receive consideration including preferred and common stock of the reorganized company. Senior and subordinated creditors will share in proceeds that may be received by Southmark from certain litigation resulting from Southmark's failure. Southmark's current common and preferred shareholders will receive a portion of the common stock of the reorganized company.

Southmark Corp., headquartered in Dallas, is a real estate and financial services company operating under Chapter 11 of the United States Bankruptcy Code.

BOSTON (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Stratus Computer Inc. Monday introduced a series of mainframe-class online systems, plus a more powerful, new generation of its midrange and high-end XA2000 Continuous Processing Systems. The new products, thirteen in all, reaffirm Stratus' position as the provider of the broadest range of fault tolerant systems -- computers specifically designed for critical online business applications.

Stratus' product line now extends from the industry's lowest-cost fault-tolerant system, the XA2000 Model 30 (starting at $37,000), to the new mainframe-class Model 2860 (starting at $9.1 million). The Model 30 was introduced last October.

Introduced Monday were:

- Four mainframe-class systems -- the XA2000 Model 2260, 2460, 2660, and 2860 -- which can handle massive critical online processing jobs, for a fraction of the cost of traditional mainframes.

- Seven high-end systems -- the XA2000 Models 200, 210, 220, 230, 240, and 260 -- which offer up to 2.4 times the performance of Stratus' previous high-end systems, the Models 110 through 160. The new Model 200 offers a low-cost entry into high-end performance and capacity.

- Two midrange systems -- the XA2000 Models 75 and 80 -- which offer more powerful processing and higher memory, disk and communications capacity for distributed environments at a fraction of the previous cost.

''The market is hungry for systems that can handle huge online applications and meet the business requirement for continuous uptime,'' said William E. Foster, Stratus president and chief executive officer. ''We have met that demand by dramatically improving the performance of our systems and by extending our hardware-based fault-tolerant technology into the mainframe class.

''Today we're telling the market that we can handle any job, no matter how big. Critical online processing has always been our focus, and now Stratus offers real advantages over other vendors for the highest levels of online business computing. Since 1980 we've continually evolved with technology to deliver more power at a competitive price, and we'll continue to do it throughout the nineties,'' added Foster.

All of the new systems are fully compatible with previous generations of Stratus XA2000 Systems. They provide the same features which differentiate Stratus from other vendors, namely: the industry's highest levels of continuous applications availability (i.e., around-the-clock system uptime); symmetric multiprocessing; and industry-standard communications and online databases.

The new midrange and high-end systems support both FTX (Stratus' UNIX System V-compatible operating system) and VOS (Stratus' proprietary operating system). The new series of mainframe-class systems supports VOS.

Selected performance ratings, based on an audited customer benchmark, for the top-end of each new class of XA2000 systems are: 883.5 transactions per second (TPS) for the Model 2860; 138 TPS for the Model 260; and 18.9 TPS for the Model 80.

Starting prices for the new systems range from $94,000 for the midrange Model 75 to $9,100,000 for the mainframe-class Model 2860. System availability on the VOS operating system and the Pick operating environment begins immediately, and in June with the FTX (UNIX System V) operating system.

Based in Marlboro, Mass., Stratus Computer Inc. supplies the XA2000 family of continuously available computer systems for online transaction processing and communications control. The company offers the most technologically advanced architecture for online, distributed, and networked applications, and has set a new standard for computer reliability. One of the fastest-growing companies in the industry, Stratus reported revenues of $341.3 million for fiscal year 1989, up 29 percent from $265.3 million in 1988.

DAYTON, OH (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - For users seeking the power of 386-based personal computers at the cost of older 286 technology, NCR Corp. Monday introduced the NCR ELPC386sx, a product that sets a new standard for price/performance in entry level 386SX systems.

The NCR ELPC386sx--designed in a small desktop configuration -- also runs 32-bit software written specifically for the 386-based personal computer, opening the door for 286 users who can now take advantage of the more sophisticated software originally written for more expensive 386-based systems.

Running at 16MHz, the new NCR ELP386sx processes information 25 percent faster than 286-based systems. For the user, this means increased productivity through enhanced performance of current and future applications.

The entry level system will be marketed to business environments where both price/performance and the use of 386-based technology are top criteria, Mohan added.

The NCR ELPC386sx is based on AT bus architecture and uses the 32/16-bit Intel 386SX microprocessor. The computer's 386SX microprocessor provides 32-bit internal operation and 16-bit external operation, processing data at 32 bits per CPU cycle while supporting 16-bit memory expansion and an 8/16 bit AT-type expansion bus. This reduces the processing time required for applications while maintaining compatibitlity with the broadest range of industry standard hardware and software.

NCR Corp., with headquarters in Dayton, develops manufactures, markets and services business information processing systems for worldwide markets.

WHITE PLAINS, NY (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - IBM Monday announced new models of its System/88-a fault-tolerant on-line transaction processing (OLTP) computers, offering customers in industries such as financial services and telecommunications up to twice the processing power of current models.

A local bank, for example, could now handle up to twice as many customer transactions at automated teller machines. The new mid-range and high-end processors also offer full compatibility with current System/88 software. Customers can run existing applications such as supermarket scanning or ''911'' emergency response systems without change. On-line transaction processing systems are typically used where customers need immediate answers. Examples include customers on the phone asking for a stock quote, at an airline counter seeking seat confirmation, or in a store waiting for charge-card authorization.

Powerful Motorola 68030 microprocessors drive nine of the eleven high-end models announced today. Performance of up to two times that of current models can be expected, depending on how the system is used. New mid-range models use the Motorola 68020 micro-processor, with performance gains of up to 1.5 times that of current models.

System/88 fault tolerance provides extra system reliability through the use of built-in duplicate hardware. No special programming by customer application developers is needed to take advantage of this capability.

New models announced today offer performance gains and full software compatibility for both the mid-range and high-end.

HOUSTON (APRIL 2) BUSINESS WIRE - Mojave Pipeline Co. will immediately begin the construction phase of its interstate pipeline into California, company officials said today.

The $214 million project will have an initial capacity of 400 million cubic feet of natural gas per day into the enhanced oil recovery market area of central California.

Mojave has firm transportation commitments for 77 percent of its initial capacity and additional contracts are expected in the immediate future. Only 90 million cubic feet per day of capacity in its initial project remain available for interested transportation customers.

Mojave will now complete the design of the pipeline and compressor facilities, and commence right-of-way acquisition. Purchase orders for 150,000 tons of pipe have already been issued. Construction is scheduled to start in January, 1991, after grant of the remaining environmental clearances. Start-up is scheduled for early 1992.

The Mojave pipeline project, first proposed in April 1985, is a joint partnership of Enron Corp. of Houston and El Paso Natural Gas Co., a unit of Burlington Resources.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission issued Mojave's initial certificate May 8, 1989, but Mojave sought rehearing of some features of that order. Mojave then entered into settlement negotiations with Kern River Transmission Co. and Southern California Gas Co. which culminated in a definitive agreement which required modification of the earlier FERC application. Orders approving the joint project were issued by the FERC to both Mojave and Kern River Jan. 24, 1990.

Kern River and Mojave will build seperate pipelines into California with the lines merging into one pipeline near Barstow and continue as a single line to Kern County. The combined pipeline will reduce construction costs lessen environmental impacts and provide economies of scale for its customers.

Mike Holland, president and CEO of Mojave Pipeline Operating Co., said ''Although the FERC has been asked to clarify some minor imperfections in its Jan. 24 order, the basic certificate is sound.''

He added that Mojave officials feel court challenges by the California Public Utilities Commission will ''ultimately be decided in our (Mojave's) favor.''

The CPUC has said Mojave fails to meet its standards for new pipeline capacity to California. However, as an interstate pipeline, Mojave will be under the jurisdiction of the FERC rather than the CPUC.

Holland noted that Mojave has ''firm, long-term commitments from Texaco, U.S. Borax, Meridian Oil, Mobil and others.

''It's a strong customer group and we are confident our pipeline will be full at start-up,'' he said.

The Mojave pipeline project consists of 385 miles of 30-inch and 42-inch pipelines extending from Topock, Arizona to the heavy oil fields into Kern County, Calif. A single 16,000-horsepower compressor station will be built at Topock to boost natural gas received from the El Paso and Transwestern pipeline company systems.

Transwestern is a subsidiary of Enron Corp. The Mojave project will be built and operated by Mojave Pipeline Operating Company which has similar responsibilites for the Kern River portion of the joint project.

This system processes and distributes logistics information for almost 6 million items of supply -- items ranging from missiles and space vehicles to washers and screws.

DLSC distributes this logistics information through a variety of paper and electronic media, including more than 400 product catalogs that will now be produced using the Xyvision system. The information is used by a variety of customers worldwide, including the U.S. military services, all Department of Defense (DoD) agencies, and NATO.

Xyvision's networked system configuration for DLSC will include one Xyvision 65 graphics server, three Xyvision 55 server-workstations, and 20 Xyview III high-resolution WYSIWYG workstations. The system will support a variety of input options for text, logistics data and technical illustrations, including a direct, on-line interface to DLSC's mainframe computer.

In addition to providing DLSC with publishing software geared to the production of high-volume technical documentation, Xyvision will also supply its Advanced CALS Compliance Package, which combines software and training to allow defense contractors to submit documents in compliance with U.S. Defense Department military specifications.

CALS (Computer-aided Acquisition and Logistic Support) is intended, in part, to replace paper document transfers with digital document exchange between contractors and defense agencies.

Xyvision Inc. develops and manufactures professional systems for technical corporate and commercial publishing environments as well as color design-through-production graphics applications.

Xyvision systems are used to design and proudce a wide range of materials, including books, journals, magazines, catalogs, financial and legal reports, software documentation, aerospace documentation, packaging graphics and related printed collateral.

TOKYO (APRIL 2) - Japan's newest bank, Mitsui Taiyo Kobe Bank Ltd., celebrated its inauguration on Monday in a ceremony held at its new head office in Tokyo's downtown Kudan district.

Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto, Mitsui Taiyo Kobe's chairman, Yasuo Matsushita, and president, Kenichi Suematsu, cut a red-and-white tape at the entrance hall of the headquarters building.

Mr. Hashimoto expressed hope in a speech that the new bank would "play a leading role in the management of the people's funds and business corporations' equity finance."

The new bank has 611 branches nationwide with total assets of 39.65 trillion yen (252.5 billion dollars), against Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank's 41.20 trillion yen (262.4 billion dollars).

But the new bank exceeds Dai-Ichi Kangyo in the number of branches by 200 and employees by 4,000, bank officials said.

The new bank, which resulted from a merger of the Mitsui and Taiyo Kobe banks, took effect as of Sunday following an agreement reached last August.

TOKYO (APRIL 2) - Dai-Ichi Mutual Life Insurance Ltd. said Monday it is planning to sell 200 billion yen (1.25 billion dollars) worth of its present stock holdings in fiscal 1990 but will remain a net buyer of Japanese stocks in the current fiscal year.

The statement temporarily restored a little confidence to the highly nervous stockmarket, where share prices plunged again in the morning partly in reaction to a report in the financial daily Nihon Keizai Shimbun Monday that Japan's major insurance companies are planning to sell large blocks of shares to reduce their ratio of stock holdings to total assets.

Prices recovered part of their losses in afternoon trading before falling again after Masao Tsuji, investment senior vice president of Japan's second biggest life insurer, unveiled Dai-Ichi's investment plans to Japanese reporters at a press conference at the Bank of Japan.

Mr. Tsuji said that Dai-Ichi is ''planning to sell 200 billion yen worth of its stock holdings during fiscal 1990 and will soon negotiate with stock issuers on the liquidation plan.''

But it plans no such selling in the coming two or three months, he said.

Stressing the importance of selective stocks buying, Mr. Tsuji said higher prices of every stock could no longer be expected.

He said Dai-Ichi plans to sell its stocks by taking into consideration the the volume of their take-up by pension funds. They will include stocks with comparatively small merits, he said.

Mr. Tsuji, however, said Dai-Ichi will remain as a net buyer of Japanese stocks in fiscal 1990 as it plans to invest another 500 billion to 700 billion yen (3.1 billion to 4.4 billion dollrs) in them in the current fiscal year ending March 1991.

JAKARTA (APRIL 2) - Indonesia will repay at least 120 million dollars it owed to China from loans taken before bilateral relations were frozen in 1967, Foreign Minister Ali Alatas said here Monday.

A technical meeting in Beijing last week to prepare for the normalisation of of ties between the two countries concluded with both sides agreeing on the formula to calculate the debts and repayment, Mr. Alatas told journalists.

The meeting was aimed at clearing the last hurdle to the resumption of ties frozen by Indonesia in 1967 when it accused China of complicity in an abortive communist coup, a charge Beijing persistently denied.

Indonesia received massive Chinese financial and military aid in the early 1960s when it was ruled under the left-leaning Sukarno, its first president who was replaced by General Suharto in 1967.

The two sides had yet to agree on the total amount of debt, including interest payments, which Indonesia should pay because Beijing's records showed six unpaid loans while Jakarta could only identify five, Mr. Alatas said.

Mr. Alatas said Beijing had agreed to let Indonesia determine on the fate of the three unverified loans, adding: "We estimate the total debt at around 120 million dollars."

The World Bank had previously estimated Indonesia's total debt to China at 65.3 million dollars as of the end of 1988.

Mr. Alatas said the three verified loans were for 30.45 million Swiss francs, 43.73 million Swiss francs and 4.14 million pounds sterling.

Under the agreed repayment formula, all interest payments due before 1970 would be added to the principals and repayments will be in 30 installments Mr. Alatas said without giving further details.

The minister said the next stage would be for him to go to Beijing to meet with his Chinese counterpart Qian Qichen to formally set the date for the resumption of ties. He did not give a date for his Beijing trip but officials said it was not likely before the end of April.

Negotiations for normalising ties began in February last year when President Suharto met with Mr. Qian in Tokyo while attending the funeral of Emperor Hirohito.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) - The United States regained its position as the biggest exporter in the world in 1989, three years after losing the title to West Germany, the International Monetary Fund (IMF) has reported here.

In 1989 the United States exported goods worth 364 billion dollars compared with West Germany (341.4 billion dollars) and Japan (273.9 billion), the report said on Sunday.

But while West Germany and Japan achived trade supluses in 1989, the United States had a deficit of 128.9 billion dollars compared with 137.1 billion dollars in 1988).

The United States was the biggest importing nation in the world, buying goods worth 492.9 billion dollars compared with 459.5 billion dollars in 1988.

Calculating on a different basis, the Commerce Department has said that the trade deficit was 109 billion dollars in 1989.

The IMF said that West Germany held top place for trade surplus, with 71.4 billion dollars in 1989, ahead of Japan with 63.9 billion dollars.

Of the six biggest industrial countries, the United States came first on the the annual percentage increase of exports between 1988 and 1989 with 12.5 per cent, ahead of West Germany with 5.6 per cent.

The 22 industrialised countries analysed by the IMF, in general, imported more than they exported.

BEIRUT (APRIL 2) - Rival Christian factions traded fire under a cloud of black smoke early Monday as fires raged on after a night of ferocious artillery duels in and around the Lebanese capital.

Both sides reported sporadic shooting in the northern suburbs despite the intervention of church mediators who managed to halt the overnight shelling by the army of General Michel Aoun and the Lebanese Forces (LF) militia.

An enormous mushroom cloud of black smoke billowed over the army-controlled northern area of Jal el-Dib, where fuel reservoirs were in flames.

The shelling shook several residential areas in and around Christian east Beirut as well as the northern Kesrouan mountains, setting fires in the Beirut port area where the LF has its headquarters.

No casualty toll could be obtained as telephone connections with hospitals in the battle-stricken Christian sector were down.

At least 846 people have been killed and more than 2,000 wounded since the battle for control of Christian areas erupted January 31.

Fighting has intensified in the past three days without any major change in positions on the ground amid a bid by Maronite Christian Patriarch Nasrallah Sfeir to gather Maronite leaders for talks on a political settlement.

Both sides have accused one another of starting the latest round of fighting to reinforce positions ahead of possible negotiations.

The patriarch last week held a first meeting of Maronites, including LF leader Samir Geagea, but failed to convene a second, larger conference Sunday.

The local press said the meeting could be held within the next two days, but expressed fears of more fighting ahead of the talks.

Luxembourg (APRIL 2) - The 12-member European Community and Argentina Monday signed a five-year economic cooperation pact aimed at expanding trade and consolidating democracy in the Latin American country.

The agreement is the first in the history of the E.C. to contain a clause on democracy.

''The strengthening of democracy and the regional integration are the most important principles of the agreement and in the common interest of both partners,'' article one of the agreement said.

Under the accord, the E.C. and Argentina grant each other ''most favoured nation status'' trade preferences.

The pact envisages cooperation in the fields of industry, research and technology. But it does not foresee any financial assistance to Argentina.

Argentina in 1971 became the first Latin American nation with which the E.C. signed a trade agreement. However, Buenos Aires in 1980 failed to extend the pact.

The new accord came after E.C. member Britain and Argentina at a meeting in Madrid last October agreed to end their dispute over the Falklands islands, which led to a war in 1982.

CAIRO (APRIL 2) - President Hissene Habre of Chad will ask Egyptian President Hosny Mubarak to act as mediator in the conflict between Chad and Libya, Mena news agency reported Monday.

The Cairo news agency quoted Chadian Ambassador to Cairo Koshe Abdel Kadir Aoudum as saying the request would be conveyed to Mubarak by a Chadian envoy next week.

Aoudum said since Egypt had good ties with both nations he hoped that Mubarak's mediation efforts would be successful. Mubarak is currently chairman of the Organization of African Unity (Oau).

Aoudum said there was cause for concern in view of a lack in process in peace negotiations between Chad and Libya and frequent violations of the ceasefire from Sudanese territory.

The course of the border in the Auozou Strip remained a major stumbling bloc in efforts to settle the dispute, he said. Libya also insited on the release of prisoners-of-war as a precondition for new negotiations, he added.

He pointed out that a tentative peace agreement between the two neighbours struck last September, however, envisaged that the conflict be formally settled within one year.

BEIJING (APRIL 2) - China and the U.S. aerospace giant McDonnell Douglas are to build 10 more MD-82 airliners in Shanghai, including five for sale in the United States, a Shanghai daily received here Monday said.

The twin-engine planes, put together in Shanghai from American parts, are to roll off the assembly line from October 1991 to December 1992, the official Wen Hui Bao newspaper said.

Five will remain in China, while the remainder will be exported to the United States, it said.

Options have been taken out for a further 10 aircraft under a contract signed in December and approved by the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade, it said.

McDonnell Douglas is to turn out the last of 25 MD-82 jets from its Shanghai joint-venture plant in August 1991, fulfilling a 1985 contract to help build aircraft for the Civil Aviation Administration of China (CAAC).

It is also competing with the Boeing Corporation to build 150 commercial aircraft in co-operation with China's aircraft industry during the 1990s. The winner of that deal is to be announced sometime this year.

KUALA LUMPUR (APRIL 2) - Malaysia's Tourist Development Corporation (TDC) and a state government agency are to sell their stake in a resort they jointly own with France's Club Mediterranee, officials said Monday.

TDC deputy director-general Kamaruddin Ahmad said the federal government agency would sell its 40 percent stake in Holiday Villages of Malaysia Sdn. Bhd. which runs Club Mediterranee Cherating in eastern Pahang state.

Long Ahmad Zainal Abidin Tahir, the managing director of the Pahang State Development Corporation which owns 30 percent of Holiday Villages, said a sales and purchase agreement would be signed within the month.

Club Mediterannee, the French resort operator, owns the remaining 30 per cent of Holiday Villages which was incorporated in 1976 with a paid-up capital of 13 million dollars (4.8 million U.S.).

The English-language daily New Straits Times Monday quoted officials as saying that the TDC and the Pahang state government were asking for 15 million dollars (5.6 million dollars) for their combined stake.

A joint-venture company set up by Club Meditteranee and a local partner was the sole bidder for the stake, the newspaper added.

The move is believed to be in line with the Malaysian government's privatisation policy and also to allow TDC to concentrate on tourism promotion.

BELGRADE (APRIL 2) - Yugoslavia's inflation rate in March is expected to be between zero and five percent, well below the 8.4 percent in February, Deputy Prime Minister Zivko Pregl said Monday.

The prices office had received details of more falls in prices than rises during the month, the Tanjug news agency quoted Mr. Pregl as saying. Cars, furniture and consumer goods prices have been falling recently.

Yugoslavia had a 1,225 percent inflation rate last year, and showed a rate of 17.3 percent in January.

The fall is the result of anti-inflation measures introduced by the government, including a liberalization of imports and a tightening of credit.

SOFIA (APRIL 2) - Bulgaria will no longer automatically extend the labor contracts of workers from Cuba, Vietnam, Ethiopia and Nicaragua expiring this year, the Communist Party daily Rabotnichesko Delo said on Monday.

It said that, due to the anticipated increase in unemployment following the introduction of market-related principles in the economy, the government will have to negotiate with the unions before extending such foreign workers' contracts.

Also on Monday, the weekly Pogled accused "the 22,000 Vietnamese workers in Bulgaria of being the main organizers of Bulgarian traffic in foreign currencies and consumer goods."

Quoting the Bulgarian Militia, the article said that Vietnamese were responsible for half of such cases. In 1988-89, 300 Vietnamese were taken to court -- half of them for economic crimes, nine for murder or attempted murder, 25 for robbery, and 124 for illegal dealing in consumer articles and foreign currencies, the paper said.

It added that, according to Militia statistics, over the same two-year period, 42 Vietnamese were expelled while 1,000 others, fired for non-observance of labor discipline, still live in Bulgaria.

The newspaper accused the Vietnamese of exporting medicines from Bulgaria, selling them for foreign currency, and of importing watches, electronic calculators, batteries, tape recorders and jeans from Hong Kong, Singapore and Taiwan.

In addition, Vietnamese women are "cheap" prostitutes in Sofia, it said.

ROME (APRIL 2) - The Italian cost of living rose by 0.4 percent in March from February, making an annual rate of 6.1 percent in March against 6.2 percent in February and 6.4 in January, the Central Statistics Institute said Monday.

Lower annual inflation rates were noted in March in transport and communications (5.5 percent), health costs (4.5 percent), and entertainment and culture (3.7 percent). But prices in the electricity and energy sector were up by 12.4 percent on an annual basis, housing, 7.7, clothing 6.3, and food 5.8 percent.

MOSCOW (APRIL 2) - Soviet parliament passed Monday a bill for tougher action on activities aimed at causing ethnic unrest or violating the integrity of Soviet territory, it was reported Monday.

Tass news agency said the bill was aimed at organizations rather than citizens for whom legislation already exists.

It will make illegal any activity by ''associations'' aimed at causing ethnic or racial unrest, using violence for ethnic, racial or religious reasons or ''forcibly violating the integrity of the Ussr, constituent and autonomous republics, autonomous regions and territories'', the report said.

Decisions to ban such activities will be made by courts who will have the power to disband organizations and order the confiscation of their property.

The bill was passed by both chambers of the Supreme Soviet at separate sittings.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) - Fueled by unsually warm weather around the nation, the U.S. construction industry enjoyed a 2.6 percent boost in construction expenditure in February, the Commerce Department reported Monday.

At the same time, the department revised its figure for the January increase in construction spending from the previously reported 1.8 percent to 2.5 per cent. In January, the United States recorded its highest average temperatures for the month since records began.

The January and February boom followed a 0.3 percent decline in construction spending for December, the coldest December in 96 years.

For February, housing construction spending was up 1.7 percent at an annualized rate of 198.5 billion dollars, following a 2.9 percent gain in January.

Commercial building expenditure rose 5.5 percent, to 106.4 billion dollars, after rocketing 6.1 per cent in January.

Public works construction spending jumped 2.1 percent, to 93.8 billion dollars, in February after recording a two percent decline in January.

Overall construction spending in February was running 4.8 percent higher than a year earlier, said the government report.

NICOSIA (APRIL 2) - The Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) formally admitted Afghanistan and Laos Monday and sidestepped a controversial debate on Soviet Jewish emigration.

Delegates and MPs from 98 countries backed a Cypriot proposal to add the question of Mediterranean peace and security to two other points on the agenda at their 83rd conference, which opened here earlier in the day.

The other two items are the battle against drug trafficking and the impact of new techology on employment and social justice.

The IPU council announced earlier Monday that it had approved the admission of Afghanistan and Laos, bringing Union membership to 113.

The Afghan delegation here exploded with joy at the announcement. Shah-Ali Akbar Shahristani, vice-president of the Afghan parliament, thanked the IPU for acknowledging "the democratic developments" that are taking place in Afghanistan.

He spoke of "great progress" in his country in the past two years, as nine groups and parties share the 435 seats in the Afghan parliament.

Pakistan, for years at odds with the Soviet-backed government in Kabul, expressed reservations at Afghanistan's admission.

Delegates meeting in plenary session later chose Mediterranean security as their third agenda item, despite efforts by Arab nations to win approval for debate on the emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel.

The Arab world has repeatedly denounced the massive influx of Soviet emigres and has become alarmed at reports that many of them could be settled among Palestinians on the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

After a series of last-minute maneuvers, the balance in favor of the Cypriot proposal was tipped with help from delegates from Europe and the United States.

The conference here will include six days of formal debate but delegates stressed that corridor discussions and informal encounters will be just as important.

IPU resolutions carry no legal weight, although the organization says a number of governmental measures taken world-wide have resulted from action by the Union.

The conference, chaired by Cypriot House Speaker Vassos Lyssarides, is scheduled to conclude on Saturday.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) - The United States said Monday that Israel's policy of establishing Jewish settlements in the occupied territories of the West Bank and Gaza Strip was disturbing.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said, "It's disturbing that an Israeli leadership which was unable to move forward on peace seems ready to move forward on new settlements."

She recalled that last month Secretary of State James Baker had said, in testimony to Congress, "The creation of additional settlements are not condusive to the peace process, and in fact we see them as an obstacle to peace."

Miss Tutwiler's comments followed a statement Sunday by Yossie Ahimeir, the head of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's political staff, that the Israeli Government planned to accelerate a program of establishing Jewish settlements in the occupied territories.

The program was agreed to by the Likud and Labor parties when they were partners in a coalition government.

Mr. Ahimeir promised the speedy establishment of eight such settlements.

This agreement between the country's two biggest parties was reached in December 1988.

Since then, Labor has pulled out of the coalition and the Likud Party is currently heading a minority caretaker government.

HOUSTON (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Compaq Computer Corporation (NYSE:CPQ) today introduced the COMPAQ 32-Bit DualSpeed Token Ring Controller, the most powerful server-based network interface controller available for Token Ring networks.

When used in conjunction with the COMPAQ SYSTEMPRO or COMPAQ DESKPRO 486/25 the 32-Bit DualSpeed Token Ring Controller takes advantage of the increased performance of EISA, allowing communications data to be transferred up to 32 percent faster than the IBM Token-Ring Network 16/4 Adapter/A. This high performance is especially important in demanding server environments such as bridging between multiple sub-networks and client-server computing.

The 32-Bit DualSpeed Token Ring Controller features optimized drivers for superior performance across a range of popular network operating systems, including Novell NetWare 386, Novell NetWare 2.1X and LAN Manager. With the 32-Bit DualSpeed Token Ring Controller, users can run thousands of networking applications faster and without modification.

The 32-Bit DualSpeed Token Ring Controller supports direct connections to shielded and unshielded twisted-pair cabling at both 16- and 4-megabits per second media transfer rates. In particular, the capability to run unshielded cabling at 16 megabits per second allows users to take advantage of the fastest standard Token Ring speed using the most cost-effective cabling.

Adhering to IEEE 802.5 Token Ring standards, the 32-Bit DualSpeed Token Ring Controller can interoperate with PCs and Token Ring controllers from Compaq and other leading vendors. This preserves the customers' investment in existing Token Ring environments, yet allows them to take advantage of Compaq's reputation for high-performance, well-engineered and reliable products.

Installation of the 32-Bit DualSpeed Token Ring Controller is simplified when used with the COMPAQ SYSTEMPRO or COMPAQ DESKPRO 486/25. COMPAQ EISA-based products incorporate a software-assisted configuration utility that eliminates the need for setting jumpers and switches.

Compaq Computer Corporation is a world leader in the manufacture of PC systems, and desktop, portable and laptop personal computers. COMPAQ products are sold in 62 countries through a network of more than 3,000 Authorized COMPAQ Computer Dealers.

MINNEAPOLIS (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - First Bank System, Inc. (NYSE: FBS), today announced that they would provide consumer protection service that extends manufacturers' warranties and insures against loss, theft and breakage when a covered purchase is made with a personal check.

Similar to services available from selected major credit cards, First Bank and Central Bank in Colorado may be the only banks in their service territories offering extended warranties and buyer protection for its checking customers at this time.

Set to begin April 16, 1990, the service will be offered at no cost to all existing and new First Bank and Central Bank personal checking account customers. Under this program, most new items valued up to $50,000 will have the manufacturer's U.S. warranty extended for up to one year.

The buyer's protection part of the service covers new items against loss, theft, damage or fire during the first 90 days following purchase. The services excludes travelers cheques, tickets, cash or its equivalents, animals, living plants and consumable items as well as structures and motorized vehicles. There will be a $2,500 limit for claims involving furs jewelry and artwork.

First Bank and Central Bank customers will be automatically covered when they purchase a new item by check. Customers should retain manufacturers' warranty cards, receipts and copies of the cancelled check, but they will not have to pre-register purchases. Documentation will be necessary in the event of a claim.

"Adding this service benefits nearly 500,000 First Bank and Central Bank customer accounts," said Sanford A. Belden, president, Community Banking. "Additionally, it reinforces our commitment to expand core consumer deposits through innovative products and services."

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Allegheny International, Inc. (AI) (NYSE: AG) today announced that preliminary results show that a majority of creditors in all classes and the majority of its shareholders in all classes have voted in favor of its stock plan of reorganization for emergence from chapter 11 protection.

AI received the necessary two-thirds majority in all creditor classes, including Chemetron, except the senior secured bank class and the senior unsecured class. AI did not receive the required two-thirds majority in those two classes as a result of negative votes cast by Japonica Partners and its affiliates. Japonica, a New York City-based investment group that seeks to acquire AI, in recent weeks has been purchasing AI senior secured and unsecured claims.

In light of Japonica's action, AI announced that it shortly will file suit in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court, Western District of Pennsylvania to disallow the votes of Japonica and its affiliates. AI said its plan would have received the necessary two-thirds majority in all creditor classes were it not for the votes of Japonica and its affiliates. AI added that it questions the motives of Japonica and its affiliates for voting against the plan.

Though more than two-thirds of common equity holders approved the plan, AI did not receive the two-thirds majority in either the $11.25 convertible preferred stock or the $2.19 cumulative preference stock classes. AI reported that it received 69 percent of its shareholders' votes taken as a whole.

To be approved by a class, AI's plan needs, with respect to creditor claims, two-thirds of the dollar amount voted and 50 percent of the number of votes cast in each class. With respect to shareholders, the plan needs a two-thirds majority of the shares voted in each class.

AI Chairman, Chief Executive Officer and President Oliver S. Travers said that "AI is pressing forward to have its plan of reorganization confirmed."

The AI plan is valued, for distribution purposes, at $687 million. The bankruptcy court is scheduled to begin confirmation hearings on the plan April 19.

UTRECT, NETHERLANDS (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - AMEV Holdings, Inc. today issued the following press release:

Report from the Executive Board AMEV's profit for 1989 shows a considerable increase over that for 1988, at Dfl 354.8 million as against Dfl 276.2 million a rise of 28.5 percent.

Exchange rate fluctuations have had a small positive influence on the development of profit; excluding this influence the increase would be 26.7 percent.

Profit per share has gone up by 16.3 percent to Dfl 5.78 (1988: Dfl 4.97, adjusted). The fact that profit per share has risen less than total profit in percentage terms is due to share issues, to VSB Groep N.V. in 1989 and the optional dividend for 1988.

It is proposed to set the dividend at Dfl 2.65 (1988: Dfl 2.55) per ordinary share of Dfl 2.50 nominal value. An interim dividend of Dfl 0.80 per share has already been paid (1988: Dfl 0.75), so the final dividend will be Dfl 1.85 (1988: Dfl 1.80). As in other years, part of the final dividend will be made available in the form of an optional dividend: shareholders will be given the opportunity to take up new shares charged to the share premium reserve, in the proportion to take up new shares charged to the share premium reserve, in the proportion of one new share for each sixty existing shares, i.e. 1-2/3 percent or Dfl 0.0417 nominal. In addition a part of the final dividend will in any case be paid in cash, the amount of which will be announced on May 2, 1990 along with the notification of the annual general meeting of shareholders scheduled for May 21, 1990.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Visa U.S.A. said it has contracted with Digital Radio Networks Inc. (DRN) to provide a new high- speed, low-cost method of authorizing credit card transactions via radio waves.

Visa said it is making the new authorization service available to its member financial institutions as an option for processing credit card transactions following a successful nine-month pilot test with a cross section of merchants in California, Georgia, Florida and Texas.

The services will allow merchants to receive approval of card transactions within seconds through terminals connected to the VisaNet authorization system by DRN's radio-based network service.

"We see this as a fast, affordable alternative to dial-up or leased telephone line authorization networks," said Jeffrey C. Connelly, Visa vice president. "It gives Visa member financial institutions yet another tool to better serve their merchant customers."

"Visa's pioneering approach to incorporating new technology into its processing systems sets a standard for the industry. Visa was the first card company to recognize the potential of our system and the first to sign a master service contract with us," said Lawrence F. Barnett, vice chairman and chief executive officer of Digital Radio Networks Inc.

"Visa's flexible authorization terminal applications and processing capabilities, combined with the speed of the radio, raised the level of service at hotels, restaurants and other retail merchants which participated in the pilot program," he added.

During the tests, involving 100 merchants, authorization response times ranged from 5 to 7 seconds, compared with 15 to 25 seconds for traditional dial technology. Participating financial institutions included Bay Bank and Trust, First Florida, Mellon Bank and Sovran Bank of Maryland.

Digital Radio Networks Inc., a nationally licensed network headquartered in Vienna, Va., has operations in more than 60 cities throughout the United States.

Visa is the world's largest consumer payments program with more than 220 million Visa cards issued, including over 120 million in the United States.

NEW YORK (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Planned Parenthood Federation of America (PPFA) today announced a campaign urging Americans to write and call AT&T (NYSE: T) Chairman Robert E. Allen to express outrage at the decision to withdraw support from PPFA's teen pregnancy prevention program because of the organization's stand on abortion.

PPFA will run full-page newspaper ads in the nation's largest newspapers this week and will send direct mail letters to 600,000 supporters informing them of AT&T's action and asking them to "voice their opposition to this act of corporate cowardice," said PPFA President Faye Wattleton.

Wattleton said, "AT&T, a major communications enterprise, was founded on the principle of freedom of expression and exchange of information. But this decision represents a capitulation to those groups who go to extreme lengths to repress, undermine, even abolish the free flow of information and diverse views if it is in their interests to do so."

The organization is asking that supporters donate their AT&T stock or proxies so that Planned Parenthood can have a greater influence over the corporation's policies. And PPFA is canceling its contract with AT&T for a new telephone system, which was to cost $350,000.

Planned Parenthood Federation of America is the nation's oldest and largest voluntary reproduction health organization. Founded in 1916 by Margaret Sanger, Planned Parenthood is dedicated to the principle that every individual has the fundamental right to choose when or whether to have children. Planned Parenthood's 26,000 volunteers and staff nationwide provide medical, educational, and counseling services to meet the family planning needs of nearly 4 million Americans each year. LA JOLLA, CA (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Triton Group Ltd. (NYSE: TGL) today reported that it sustained a loss of $17,238,000, or $1.59 per share, for the fiscal year ended January 31, 1990, compared to a loss from continuing operations of $24,000, or $.08 per share, in the prior fiscal year. Results for the prior fiscal year also included income from discontinued operations of $25,387,000, or $2.34 per share, and an extraordinary credit of $34,226,000, or $3.15 per share, from utilization of the company's tax loss carryforward.

For the fourth fiscal quarter, Triton sustained a loss of $7,895,000, or $.77 per share, compared to income from continuing operations of $318,000, or $.03 per share, in the fourth quarter of the prior year.

Revenues for the full fiscal year were $223 million, up from $151 million in the prior year. Revenues for the fourth quarter increased to $103 million from $42 million in the fourth quarter of the prior year. The revenue increases in each period were primarily attributable to including the sales of Liquor Barn, which was acquired by Triton in October 1989.

The company said its loss in the fourth quarter was primarily due to budgeted losses, after deduction of acquisition interest and amortization, at its two newest partner companies, Western Sizzlin and Liquor Barn. Also contributing to the loss were interest and corporate costs in excess of investment income and adjustments to reduce the carrying value of certain corporate investments to current market values. Results for the full year were affected by these same factors, and by the decision in the third quarter to write off $5.7 million relating to preferred stock received in the 1988 sale of Simplicity Pattern Co.

Triton Group is a diversified holding company. Its operating businesses are Liquor Barn Inc., the nation's largest retailer of wine and spirits; National Airmotive Corp., which distributes and overhauls turbine engines for aviation, marine and industrial applications; Western Metal Lath, which produces metal lath and studs and other construction industry products; and Western Sizzlin, Inc., the nation's second largest chain of franchised family steak restaurants.

Triton's controlling shareholder, Intermark, Inc. (AMEX: IMI) is an operating/holding company whose business is to own control of and add value to well-established, mid-sized American growth companies operating in broadly diverse industries. On March 2, 1990, Triton and Intermark announced that they had executed an Agreement and Plan of Merger and Reorganization calling for the combination of the two companies. In the transaction, structured as a tax-free reorganization, stockholders of Triton will receive 1.4 shares of Intermark Common Stock for each share held of Triton Common Stock. Shareholder meetings of the two companies, convened to vote on the proposed merger, will be held as soon as applicable regulatory requirements are met.

NEW YORK (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Nicholas-Applegate Growth Equity Fund Inc. announced that at the fund's annual meeting of stockholders held today its stockholders approved a single proposal that authorized the board of directors to (a) amend the fund's charter to provide for the fund's conversion to an open-end fund under certain circumstances, (b) sell, pursuant to a transferable rights offering, common stock of the fund at a price below the then current net asset value of such stock, and (c) execute an amended investment advisory agreement between the fund and Nicholas-Applegate Capital Management excluding the impact of sales and repurchases of fund shares from the calculation of the investment adviser's performance.

The board of directors has determined that it is in the best interest of the fund and its stockholders to proceed with the rights offering and the other matters approved by the stockholders.

The record date for determining stockholders entitled to be issued one right for each share of common stock held by each stockholder will be April 12. Stockholders, and others who acquire rights, will be entitled to subscribe for one share of the fund's common stock for each four rights held. It is expected that the rights will be issued to stockholders on or about April 19, and that the subscription period will expire on May 21.

The subscription price for shares of common stock issuable upon exercise of the rights will be the lower of (i) $10 or (ii) 95 percent of a price determined with reference to the average of the closing prices of the common stock of the fund on the New York Stock Exchange for the five trading days ended May 22, and the closing price on May 22.

The rights will be transferable and will be listed on the New York Stock Exchange. State Street Bank and Trust Co. will act as subscription agent in connection with the rights offering. State Street will use reasonable efforts to sell rights not exercised by the holders and any unclaimed rights.

The amendment to the fund's charter, provides for conversion by the fund to an open-end investment company (subject to necessary regulatory filings), without further board or stockholder action, if in 1990 or any calendar year thereafter through 1994 the fund's shares have traded on the principal securities exchange where listed at an average discount from net asset value of more than 5 percent (as determined by the board of directors based on the average discount as of the end of the last trading day in each week during such year).

STAMFORD, CT (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Paul A. Allaire has been elected chief executive officer of Xerox Corporation (NYSE: XRX), effective Aug. 1 David T. Kearns, the company's chairman and chief executive officer, announced Monday.

Allaire, 51, has been president of Xerox and head of its Business Products and Systems organization since 1986.

"I am delighted with Paul's election by our board," Kearns said. "He is a seasoned executive who has been working closely with me since 1983 when he was appointed chief staff officer. Paul has been with Xerox since 1966 and has come up through the ranks. He has been intimately involved with me in restructuring the corporation during the '80s and setting our strategic direction for the '90s."

Allaire has held a variety of positions in financial planning and general management. In 1975, he was named chief staff officer and executive director for Rank Xerox in London. He was named managing director of Rank Xerox in 1980 and returned to the United States in 1983 as senior vice president and chief staff officer. He was elected president in August 1986.

Kearns said the appointment of Allaire "is the culmination of a management succession plan that we implemented with the board of directors beginning in 1983 when Paul returned to corporate headquarters after managing Rank Xerox in London."

Kearns, who will continue as Xerox chairman and chairman of the executive committee, said Xerox has a long-standing practice which calls for members of senior management to reduce their day-to-day involvement in the operation of the company at 60 years of age. Kearns will be 60 on Aug. 11.

Melvin Howard, vice chairman of Xerox and head of Xerox Financial Services Inc., has decided to take early retirement, effective May 1. He is 55. Howard will not stand for reelection to the Xerox board of directors at the annual meeting of shareholders on May 17.

"Mel has made many important contributions during his 20 years with Xerox " Kearns said. "He has been the driving force in developing our financial services business, which is now a $5 billion business for Xerox, and which has contributed significant profits to the company over the years."

Stuart B. Ross, senior vice president and chief financial officer, has been elected an executive vice president of Xerox and becomes chairman and chief executive officer of Xerox Financial Services, effective May 1.

SECAUCUS, NJ (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Panasonic Communications & Systems Company introduced the world's first commercially available rewritable optical disc recorder, the LQ-4000, that provides producers and other video professionals with large-scale storage of still images and full-motion video. Panasonic is highlighting the LQ-4000 during the National Association of Broadcasters' (NAB) Show.

"The Panasonic LQ-4000 is the industry's first optical device that gives users the flexibility to rewrite on optical video disc media," said Frank Trischetta, general manager of marketing for Panasonic's Office Automation Group. "Panasonic's research and development investment in the optical media industry has resulted in a family of high-performance products, and the fifth-generation LQ-4000 optical disc recorder is evidence of our on-going commitment."

"Previously, images were permanently recorded and stored on optical discs -- there was no other option," said Tim Meyerhoff, product manager of the optical disc department at Panasonic's Office Automation Group. "Now, the Panasonic LQ-4000 rewritable optical disc recorder offers users the versatility and cost savings of writing new full-motion video images, still images or other data on optical disks that previously held other information. Its minimum 10-year life and one million erase-and- write cycles mean that the LQ-4000 has a virtually limitless capacity to rewrite new data."

The Panasonic LQ-4000 has enormous potential in the video industry. Its turnkey configuration, rewritable capabilities and long playing time makes it especially popular for video disc mastering, interactive video training point-of-sale/point-of-information, image storage and retrieval, anD security environments. For image database applications, Panasonic is bundling the LQ-4000 with PC-Album software.

Video producers and other professionals will appreciate the unit's outstanding picture quality and accurate, vivid color reproduction. Using an FM recording system for color signal, the optical disk recorder significantly reduces chroma noise and achieves a chroma S/N ratio of 45 dB. As a result, color smearing is suppressed and color rendition is markedly improved.

Users can take advantage of video output quality by recording in three modes: S-VHS, NTSC composite, and RGB. Images can be stored conveniently rearranged and edited in two modes: normal and high- resolution. In normal mode, the unit handles more than 108,000 still frames or 60 minutes of full-motion video, registering a horizontal resolution of 400 lines. The LQ-4000 can record a total of 72,000 still frames or 40 minutes of continuous video per double-sided disk in the high resolution mode, which features 450 lines of color, producing a visible difference -- even to the untrained observer.

Installation of the LQ-4000 rewritable optical disc recorder is simple using the unit's internal CPU-based on-screen guided setup. The unit comes with a standard RS-232C serial interface, and has the ability to interface with virtually any other external control device.

The LQ-4000's functions can be accessed through the front control panel, the computer or the optional multi-function remote control. The unit also has built-in video transcoders and a built-in processor for standalone delivery systems.

The Panasonic LQ-4000 rewritable optical disc recorder will be available in the fourth quarter from authorized Panasonic distributors.

Rental revenues were $12,402,000 in 1989, up 19 percent from $10,406,000 for the previous year. Total revenues increased by 16 percent in 1989 compared to 1988 after adjustment for gain from other activities in 1988 of $1,855,000. Rental revenues for the three months ended Dec. 31, 1989 were $3,534,000 as compared to rental revenues of $2,559,000 for the same period in 1988, an increase of 38 percent. Total revenues for the fourth quarter of 1989 were $3,706,000, an increase of 27 percent from $2,910,000 in total revenues for the fourth quarter of 1988.

ROSLYN, NY (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Cheyenne Software, Inc. (AMEX: CYE) and GigaTrend, Inc., the leading worldwide manufacturer of DAT (digital audio tape) storage systems for computers, today announced the immediate availability of their jointly developed LAN product called ServerDat(TM).

ServerDat combines GigaTrend's 4mm DAT hardware with Cheyenne's ARCserve+TAPE(TM) software to form the industry's first 4mm DAT server-based value added process (VAP). ServerDat is linked to the network through a direct connection of the 4mm DAT tape drive to the file server or bridge.

ServerDat is a "shared" tape backup device which enables all users on a network to access the device from their workstations. By allowing all workstations access to the device, all network data including local hard disks can be backed up to the ServerDat.

Eli Oxenhorn, chairman and CEO of Cheyenne, explained that the alliance between the two companies emerged because of a natural fit of the two products. Oxenhorn commented, "Cheyenne has aligned itself with a hardware technology leader who is highly responsive to the tape backup market. We're pleased that our companies can gain greater presence in the LAN server arena by joining our two technologies."

Amir Moussavian, GigaTrend's executive vice president and general manager, said, "We're excited about ServerDat because it has the only VAP-based software that doesn't require excessive SPX communication when you are doing a server backup. It just simply goes from disk to tape. This makes the product the most efficient, cost-effective, high capacity, high performance tape server solution on the market."

Pricing of the ServerDat begins at $6,250 for the standard architecture, and $6,350 for MCA (micro channel architecture). ServerDat is in stock and available immediately. The product can be purchased only through GigaTrend/GIGATAPE's worldwide distribution channel.

GigaTrend, together with its West German parent GIGATAPE GmbH and sister companies, has the largest installed base of 4mm tape drives worldwide. The company's DAT products won several technical awards in 1989.

CLEVELAND (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - LTV Steel hourly employees today ratified by a substantial margin a new labor agreement between the company and the United Steelworkers of America union. The agreement was approved by the Federal Bankruptcy Court with jurisdiction over LTV Corporation's (NYSE: QLTV) Chapter 11 proceedings on March 19.

The new agreement restores concessions made in the previous agreement; provides pay increases in the second and third years; and enhances active and retiree insurance benefits. At the same time, it creates a formal, company-wide program that will integrate hourly employees at all locations in LTV Steel's efforts to continuously improve customer satisfaction.

The newly ratified contract will become effective on April 15, 1990, and expires on either August 1, 1993, or on the date a Plan of Reorganization for LTV Corporation is confirmed by the Federal Bankruptcy Court, whichever occurs first.

"We are pleased that our employees have accepted this agreement. While most features are comparable with other recent settlements in the domestic integrated flat rolled steel companies, we believe that the creation of a joint customer satisfaction initiative -- as a formal part of the relationship between the company and the union -- will enable all LTV Steel employees to become personally involved in our special, on-going effort to continuously improve our quality and customer service," said David H. Hoag, LTV Steel president and chief executive officer.

The newly ratified agreement covers approximatley 13,500 active and laid off workers, and 46,000 hourly retirees.

RICHMOND, VA (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - CSX Corp. (NYSE: CSX) today reported earnings of $77 million, 76 cents per share, for the first quarter of 1990 compared with $82 million, 74 cents per share, earned by the company in the same 1989 period.

During the quarter, CSX announced the sale of the stock of CSX Energy Corp., its natural gas liquids processing unit, to Enron Gas Processing, a subsidiary of Enron Corp. This sale resulted in an after- tax gain of $52 million, 53 cents per share, and was reported in discontinued operations. This gain was partially offset in continuing operations by a $53 million pretax expense, $33 million after tax, 34 cents per share, associated with the previously announced organizational restructuring of CSX's container-shipping subsidiary, Sea-Land Service Inc.

Accordingly, earnings from continuing operations for the first quarter declined to $26 million, 24 cents per share, compared with $77 million, or 70 cents per share, during the first quarter of 1989.

Operating revenue from continuing operations for the first quarter of 1990 rose to $1.9 billion, compared with $1.8 billion for the first quarter of 1989. Operating expenses, impacted by rising fuel costs early in the quarter and the cost of Sea-Land's restructuring, increased to $1.8 billion, compared with $1.7 billion during the same period last year. As a result, operating income declined to $115 million, $73 million below the 1989 quarter.

Rail operating income declined to $155 million from $158 million despite increased revenue which rose $23 million to $1.3 billion as compared with the first quarter of 1989. Strong coal, grain and fertilizer traffic more than offset weakness in the automotive and metals sectors, which dropped 24 percent and 7 percent, respectively. Coal tonnage was up 2 percent to 45.2 million tons based on strong utility traffic to overcome low inventory levels resulting from the record cold weather of December 1989 which affected coal production and transportation.

Rail expense increased $26 million to $1.1 billion as a result of higher diesel fuel prices, an expanded locomotive repair program to upgrade the company's fleet and the cost associated with recent flooding experienced in the south.

ATLANTA (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE -Delta Air Lines, Inc. (NYSE: DAL), and Eastern Airlines, Inc., have settled claims relating to normal business and ticketing transactions prior to Eastern's March 9, 1989, bankruptcy filing and will renew their interline ticketing and baggage agreement.

As a result of the settlement, certain charges against earnings taken by Delta in 1989 will be reversed.

During 1989, Delta recorded a $36.7 million operating expense relating to Delta's claims against Eastern. A net amount of $16.8 million in cash, plus interest, will be paid to Delta by Eastern. The remaining $19.9 million reflects the offset of claims by Eastern against Delta and will be recorded in the March, 1990 quarter as a reduction to expense.

Eastern's payment to Delta of the $16.8 million plus interest will be made by a $5 million payment due April 4, 1990, and subsequent monthly payments of $3 million in May, June, July, and August. The remaining balance will be paid in September. Delta will record the payments of principal as reductions to expense as they are received.

The settlement was approved by the bankruptcy court, with the concurrence of the creditor committees, on March 19, and became effective on March 30, absent appeal, of the court's order. Delta is not aware of any appeals.

HOUSTON (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Harold S. Hook, chairman and chief executive officer of American General Corporation (NYSE: AGC), today set the record straight in light of the confusion surrounding Torchmark Corporation's (NYSE: TMK) submission and withdrawal of an acquisition proposal -- all in less than a week.

"American General's management and directors fully understand their responsibility to deal with proposals affecting our shareholders' investment in a timely and prudent manner and to act on an informed basis. And that is precisely how we dealt with the Torchmark proposal," Hook said.

"When we received the Torchmark proposal, we responded -- even within their unrealistic 48-hour deadline on a $6.4 billion proposal -- by scheduling it for consideration at our next regularly scheduled board meeting. We also immediately retained The First Boston Corporation as our financial advisor.

"Today's announcement by Torchmark forces us to conclude that Torchmark did not make its acquisition proposal in good faith to begin with; that the proposal was made and then withdrawn solely to provide an excuse for a proxy fight," Hook said.

American General is an insurance and financial services organization with assets of $32 billion and total equity of $4.5 billion. Headquartered in Houston, the company has subsidiaries that operate in 50 states and Canada.

The company groups its operating subsidiaries into three business segments: Insurance-Home Service; Insurance-Special Markets; and Finance/Real Estate. American General common stock is listed on the New York, Pacific, London, and Swiss stock exchanges.

DALLAS (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Exxon Corp. (NYSE: XON) and ENSERCH Corp. (NYSE: ENS) announced Monday that a second well on Garden Banks Block 388 in the Gulf of Mexico (the third well on the prospect) currently is being drilled below 9,800 feet in the primary objective interval, which appears correlative to the main pay zone in the Garden Banks 388 discovery well.

The discovery well on this prospect, drilled in the first quarter of 1989, encountered about 250 feet of net oil pay in a single sandstone that was confirmed productive by logs, cores and wireline tests.

Oil and gas shows have been recorded in three separate zones in this third well on the prospect. Logs and cores from this well currently are being evaluated.

The Garden Banks wells are operated by Exxon Company U.S.A., a division of Exxon Corp., which is paying for a 58.2 percent working interest. Enserch Exploration Partners Ltd., ENSERCH's oil and gas limited partnership in which it owns more than a 99 percent interest, has a 41.8 percent working interest in the Garden Banks wells.

The partners say that they cannot predict at this time whether these wells and any others that may be drilled in the same formations will result in commercial levels of reserves that can be produced on a profitable basis.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Chairman and President Glenn W. Bailey Monday reported that, contrary to an erroneous press report indicating Bairnco Corporation (NYSE: BZ) had omitted its first-quarter dividend, Bairnco did in fact pay on March 30, 1990 a regular dividend of 25 cents per share of common stock.

Bailey said the first-quarter dividend was declared and reported by the company on Feb. 23, 1990. A news release issued on that date also stated that Bairnco intended to reduce future dividends because of operating difficulties and the board's concern over the near-term economic environment. HOUSTON (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - NL Industries Inc. (NYSE: NL) announced that its wholly owned subsidiary, GG Acquisition Corp., will allow its offer to purchase all shares of Georgia Gulf Corp. common stock and associated preferred share purchase rights, at a price of $45 per share and associated right, in cash, to expire as scheduled at 5 p.m. EST on April 2, 1990.

GG Acquisition stated that it would promptly return all tendered shares and rights to tendering stockholders.

NL stated that, consistent with its long held commitment to support a proposal that yielded the greatest obtainable per share value to Georgia Gulf's stockholders, it currently expects to vote in favor of the amended recapitalization plan at the company's April 19 stockholders' meeting.

NL also stated that recent trading prices for Georgia Gulf's stock and the when-issued quotations for the securities to be issued in Georgia Gulf's recapitalization indicate, in NL's view, that the market values Georgia Gulf's recapitalization plan at a price of at least $45 per share.

NL also said that, based upon its review and publicly available information about Georgia Gulf, NL is unwilling to increase its offering price at this time. NL further said that, in light of this, NL does not believe that it is desirable to pay the substantial bank commitment fees that would be necessary for NL to move its financing to completion.

NL also announced that its consent to remove Georgia Gulf's directors will expire on April 6, 1990 and that NL intends to take no action in connection with that consent.

Finally, NL noted that, if the recapitalization plan is not approved by stockholders and implemented promptly, NL may consider making another offer for the company.

NEW YORK (April 2) PR Newswire - In response to General Development Corp.'s (NYSE: GDV) announcement today that it may file a Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition, United Capital Corp. (AMEX: ICU) stated that it had offered to meet with General Development Corp.'s lenders and discuss a transaction in which United Capital Corp. would lend its credit and/or collateral to the company to avoid General Development's financial collapse.

United Capital indicated that if it participated in a transaction with General Development Corp. which resolved the current predicament, it would want to have equal representation on the company's board, have A.F. Petrocelli share the chief executive officer position with Charles Simons and would end its proxy contest.

In response, General Development Corp. requested that United Capital sign a confidentiality agreement before giving information relating to the financing transaction. This agreement required United Capital to end its proxy contest immediately and agree to "standstill" for three years. United Capital rejected the "standstill" provisions of the proposed confidentiality agreement and the obligation to terminate the proxy contest before negotiations commenced. General Development Corp. then terminated the discussions.

United first offered to discuss assisting General Development Corp. in overcoming any short-term liquidity crisis on Mar. 27, 1990. General Development Corp. had no response.

PONTIAC, MI (APRIL 2) UPI - Defense attorney John Lazar tried for a bit of courtroom drama right out of ''Perry Mason,'' but the result was closer to ''Night Court.''

During a hearing Thursday in Oakland County Circuit Court, Lazar was trying to prove that police acted improperly during a search of Christopher Plovie's coat that turned up a bag of cocaine.

Lazar asked Judge Barry Howard to examine his client's coat. The judge did and found another bag of the drug.

Howard had to order a five-minute recess to quiet the giggles and guffaws rippling through the courtroom. Even Plovie smiled, the judge said.

''It's like when you've given the graduation speech to your class, then you look down and your zipper is open,'' Howard said Friday.

Howard ruled the original police search was proper.

Plovie, a Warren resident, pleaded guilty to possessing a controlled substance and being a habitual offender, charges that carry a penalty of up to four years in prison.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - U.S. troop levels in Europe could be cut to as low as 75,000 by the end of the decade, Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, and former Defense Secretary Harold Brown said.

The two men made their comments while briefing reporters on a new study, ''Changing Roles and Shifting Burdens in the Atlantic Alliance,'' written by a bipartisan group of politicians, academians and former military leaders.

The study, sponsored by John Hopkins Foreign Policy Institute and prepared for release Monday, calls for gradual but far-reaching reductions in conventional and nuclear forces in Western Europe in light of changes in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

The study said the United States should abandon plans to upgrade the Lance short-range missile in Europe and initiate negotiations with the Soviets on short-range nuclear weapons as soon as a conventional arms pact is reached.

''I don't think (members of Congress are) going to be supporting the follow-on to Lance because of the strong opposition (from West Germany). ... I think it's unlikely that we will have it,'' said Cohen, the ranking Republican on the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

The administration is seeking funding from Congress to modernize the Lance short-range missile despite opposition from West Germany, where the missiles are based.

The administration has also set a limit, or floor, for the reduction of U.S. troops in Central Europe from the current 305,000 to 195,000.

The study said, ''President Bush's proposal to reduce U.S. and Soviet forces in central Europe to 195,000 each, with the United States retaining the right to station 225,000 troops throughout Europe, should serve as the immediate goal of U.S. policy.

''Such a treaty should be signed during 1990 and implemented by the end of 1992,'' it added. ''In the meantime, the United States should refrain from unilateral reductions.''

The study did not address future U.S. troop cuts in Europe after the Conventional Forces in Europe, or CFE, treaty that is expected to limit each side to 195,000. But it was agreed that more would be withdrawn.

''My own personal view is that something in the 70,000 to 80,000 (range) is feasible for late in the decade, depending on what the other arrangements are, how many German troops there are, how many Soviet troops remain in Eastern Europe,'' said Brown, a Democrat who worked under President Jimmy Carter.

Cohen agreed and said, ''I think we'll be around 75,000 to 100,000, depending. And I think that view is shared by many on (Capitol) Hill.''

The two members of the group also questioned the future viability of a NATO alliance should a reunited Germany drop out of the organization.

Brown pointed to a potential scenario where a reunified Germany might leave NATO's military alliance and France might rejoin it.

''The question is: Would it be organized to defend against the Soviet Union or against Germany?'' Cohen asked.

Brown added, ''If NATO remains and Germany leaves it, it's directed at very different possible threat.''

The study encouraged the continuance of the NATO alliance for the West, but suggested that a single organization encompassing all the nations of Europe and North America ''might be established to monitor the new security regime and to work out its political aspects.''

''The Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe ... is a logical candidate for this role,'' it said.

Besides Brown and Cohen, some other members who helped conduct the study were former U.S. arms control negotiator Paul Nitze, Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., former Carter national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, retired Adm. Worth Bagley and retired Army Gen. Andrew Goodpastor.

HARARE, ZIMBABWE (APRIL 2) UPI - President Robert Mugabe scored a landslide victory in national election results and declared his party had won an overwhelming mandate to carry out policies that include a one-party state in the former white-ruled British colony.

Mugabe, 62, defeated his bitter rival, Edgar Tekere, of the Zimbabwe Unity Movement by a 5-1 ratio in three days of voting, the last election under the constitution that guided former Rhodesia to independence 10 years ago and expires next month.

Mugabe stopped short of saying a one-party state would be created to replace the multi-party system established in the British-designed independence constitution, but he said the results announced Sunday were ''a mandate for our policies, including a one-party state.''

''Our people want unity,'' Mugabe said. ''If we ask our people to vote for a one-party state they would vote for that tomorrow, whatever philosophical notions the British government might have for the multi-party system.''

But he noted that opposition parties were still free to operate. ''If we get to the situation where we feel we should have a one-party state, we shall do so, but they can go on in the meanwhile,'' Mugabe said of the fledgling opposition parties.

Mugabe said he believed the low voter turnout was due in part to ''double counting'' of potential voters and lashed out at coverage of the campaign by the British Broadcasting Corp. as ''discreditable, absolutely dishonorable and disreputable.''

Official figures released Sunday gave Mugabe 2,026,976 votes to just 413,080 for Tekere. In the legislative elections, the ruling Zimbabwe African National Union-Patriotic Front captured 116 of the 119 contested seats.

Tekere's party captured two seats and a third went to the minority opposition party of veteran nationalist leader Ndamaningi Sithole, who is in self-imposed exile in the United States.

Voting for the 120th seat in a newly created assembly was canceled because the name of one candidate was left off the ballot sheets.

Final results showed less than half the country's 4.8 million registered voters turned out despite a one-day extension of the balloting. In the 1985 elections, 99 percent of the electorate voted, giving Mugabe a second five-year term.

At the same time, voters failed to regard Tekere and ZUM as a viable alternative to Mugabe, who has ruled since independence in April 1980.

Tekere had hoped to provide Mugabe with a greater challenge by capitalizing on discontent over the ailing economy, inflation and runaway unemployment that has left 1.5 million of Zimbabwe's 10 million people out of work.

The three-week election campaign was marked by bitter and acrimonious exchanges between Mugabe and Tekere, who was ousted as the ruling party secretary-general in October 1988 after lashing out at high-level corruption.

Mugabe focused his campaign on land reform plans, attempting to attract the support of some 7.5 million peasants. He repeatedly warned 4,200 commercial white farmers they would soon have to part with some of their vast land holdings, covering 40 percent of the country.

Tekere, in a low-profile campaign, called for a multi-party system in a free-market economy and demanded the withdrawal of Zimbabwean troops from neighboring Mozambique, where they are deployed to defend railway links to the Indian Ocean against attacks by right-wing Renamo guerrillas.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (APRIL 2) UPI - Archbishop Desmond Tutu, intervening in a wave of nationwide violence, appealed to President Frederik de Klerk to stop a ''trigger-happy'' police force and save stalled peace talks with the African National Congress.

Tutu and ANC leader Nelson Mandela have scheduled visits for Monday to the black province of Natal, where deadly internecine fighting erupted last week between ANC loyalists and supporters of Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi.

Also, de Klerk was expected to discuss the government's response to the mounting unrest during an address to Parliament Monday.

In an endorsement of the ANC's decision to suspend a historic round of talks set with de Klerk's government for April 11, Tutu said Sunday that Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok's failure to control his forces ''has thrown our country into crisis.''

Mandela, 71, said Sunday he would meet informally with de Klerk ''in the near future'' on the decision Saturday to suspend the talks, but reiterated de Klerk must take ''effective measures to stop police brutality.''

''Just as everyone was looking forward to obstacles to negotiation being removed, Mr. Vlok's men have derailed the process and thrown the country into gloom,'' Tutu said after visiting the township of Sebokeng, where 11 blacks died March 26 in police gunfire.

After canceling a trip to the United States and returning to South Africa from Kenya within hours of the ANC announcement, Tutu said the shooting appeared to have been unprovoked.

He called on de Klerk to appoint an independent inquiry into the incident and raised the possibility that orders by black police to allow the demonstrators to disperse peacefully were reversed by white officers.

The ANC's decision to suspend the talks was the second in as many days, delaying efforts to bring the violence under control and prompting speculation that the movement is divided following 30 years as an underground movement.

On Friday, the ANC canceled a joint peace rally by Mandela and Buthelezi scheduled for Monday in the area of Taylor's Halt that was intended to restore calm in the Edendale Valley west of the Natal provincial capital of Pietermaritzburg.

The weeklong fighting in Edendale has left at least 50 dead, according to police, and state-run radio reported Sunday that more than 10,000 residents of the valley have been displaced.

Inkatha, a Zulu-based political organization, seeks to establish Zulu-led political leadership in Natal.

Mandela made no reference to the Natal fighting in a speech Sunday before an ANC rally of more than 100,000 in the southeastern city of Port Elizabeth but defended the suspension of peace talks with the government.

''The action of the police against peaceful protest in various parts of the country are indirect conflict with the public positions being taken by the govenrment,'' Mandela said.

''The ANC will continue to work for political solutions and as soon as the government takes effective measures to stop police brutality, we will examine the whole question and approach the government for another date.''

Mandela later told reporters he would meet de Klerk informally ''in the near future'' but declined to set a date.

De Klerk described the ANC's decision as unwarranted but said he told

Mandela ''my door remained open and he was welcome to meet me.''

The April 11 talks were intended to discuss outstanding ANC preconditions for formal negotiations to begin, including the lifting of a nearly 4-year-old state of emergency. De Klerk has refused to end the emergency, citing the upsurge of unrest.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Transit and local officials in Buffalo, New York, are hopeful they will find a way to fund the city's public transportation system and get it running again by Monday morning. The cash-strapped Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority was forced to close down Sunday after running out of money. If the talks do NOT produce an agreement, 135-thousand commuters will have to find alternate ways of getting to work and school.

Police in Boulder, Colorado, say at least one person died Sunday when a small plane crashed in a residential neighborhood. Police say they believe the victim was the pilot of the aircraft... thought to be a twin-engine plane. One man on the ground suffered a broken leg. The plane hit a vacant house and exploded... taking out power lines, cars and several other buildings.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis says the republic canNOT be expected to annul its declaration of independence, but he adds the Parliament will meet Monday to consider Moscow's demands. Moscow's resolve was evident Sunday as four heavily armored personnel carriers rolled past the parliament building. President Gorbachev has said Lithuania must annul the declaration as a condition for talks.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Four large liquid fuel storage tanks exploded in suburban Sydney, Australia, Sunday, forcing the evacuation of thousands of area residents. A fire control officer says a huge tidal wave of fire sent fireballs 600 feet in the air. There were NO injuries and authorities do NOT know the cause of the blast.

48 victims of the fatal arson fire at the Happy Land social club in New York arrived in their native Honduras Sunday. Hundreds of grieving relatives were at the airport to receive their loved ones. More than 90 collapsed. In New York, police took steps to prevent a repeat of the blaze that claimed 87 lives by closing down 23 illegal social clubs. A total of 346 illicit clubs have been ordered to vacate.

A chief economic adviser to Nicaraguan President-elect Violeta Chamorro says the new leader will wait 100 days before reducing the country's 70-thousand-strong armed forces. Chamorro's government has plans to cut the Sandanista Popular Front by more than 40 percent in an effort to boost the battered economy. Chamorro is to take office April 25th.

WARSAW, POLAND (APRIL 2) UPI - President Wojciech Jaruzelski, former leader of the dissolved Communist Party, attended a Roman Catholic mass in memory of millions of Poles who died at Nazi and Soviet hands in World War II.

Several thousand Poles, including Solidarity Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, also attended the service, which opened a ''month of remembrance'' for 6 million countrymen killed by Nazi Germany and more than 1 million who died in Soviet labor camps.

Jaruzelski's participation in the service Sunday reflected the revolutionary changes that have occurred in Poland since the formation of the non-communist government last August. As president, Jaruzelski was obligated to attend.

In communist Poland, April also was devoted to remembering the dead, but the focus was almost exclusively on the Nazis without mention of the Soviet role.

Wearing a military uniform, Jaruzelski stood at attention and saluted the consecration of the host - the focus of the Catholic mass - and a military squad presented their arms.

The military band also played religious songs, even though the army is still controlled by the former communist elite of generals. The military leaders recently supported the idea of a non-political character for the army after the Communist Party was disbanded and changed its name to the Social Democratic Party.

''Like a resurrected Christ, a Christian and Catholic Poland is being revived,'' Bishop Zbigniew Kraszewski told the crowd.

Col. Florian Klewiado, chief chaplain of the Polish army, read the names of the Nazi concentration camps - Auschwitz, Majdanek, Dachau and Treblinka - where millions were exterminated. ''These camps witnessed the annihilation of mankind,'' he said.

More than 1 million Poles deported from Poland by the Red Army during World War II died in the Soviet camps.

Klewiado said they died ''in the name of the mad (communist) ideology,'' and he lashed out at the Stalinist system that ''made cruelty its law.''

In another development, Bishop Wladyslaw Miziolek said a mass at noon in Warsaw's St. Alexander's church attended by about 500 people who prayed for a ''free Lithuania.''

''The Lithuanian nation like any other nation has the right to freedom,'' he said. ''We wish Lithuania to be free.''

But the bishops also sought to understand the tough stance Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has taken on Lithuania, saying ''it is not easy for the Soviet Union to give freedom to the republics.''

TEGUCIGALPA, HONDURAS (APRIL 2) UPI - Two U.S. airmen critically wounded in a rebel sniper attack were removed from the danger list and will be returned to the United States as soon as possible, officials said.

The two airmen were among the eight U.S. Air Force soldiers wounded Saturday when members of a leftist rebel group opened fire on a bus returning 28 Air Force personnel from a vacation in northern Honduras.

''The danger of them dying has passed,'' said Dr. Anibal Funez, director of the Escuela Hospital in Tegucigalpa, where airmen Jerry Mallard and Dean A. Dark were operated on Saturday.

Dark, who was hit by a bullet in the head and another that penetrated his left arm and lodged close to a main artery, had been listed as comatose Saturday night. Mallard was shot once in the chest and once in the abdomen.

''The wounded are coming along well, we hope there are no complications,'' Funez said Sunday.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Terrence Kneebone said ''as soon as it is feasible we are going to take them back to the United States.''

Kneebone said four of the wounded soldiers were taken to Panama from the U.S. military base at Palmerola, where they had been transported Saturday.

The U.S. Southern Command in Panama issued a statement describing the attack.

''A bus carrying 28 airmen returning from a morale support activity trip from Tela beach, Honduras, received automatic sniper fire. The incident occurred 6 miles north of the capital,'' the Southern Command said.

The Green Cross, a Honduran relief organization, disclosed the names of the eight wounded soldiers, which were confirmed Sunday by the U.S. Southern Command.

They are: Airman First Class Jerry D. Mallard, Senior Airman Dean A. Dark, Senior Airman Brian W. Miller, Airman First Class Todd M. Groeschel, Senior Airman Brian R. Domsch, Airman First Class Patrick J. Kelly, Sgt. Todd H. Fewell and Sgt. Kevin A. Flint.

Radio America in Honduras broadcast a statement Saturday in which leftist rebels of the Morazanist National Liberation Front claimed responsibility for the attack.

''With this action by the commandos of the patriotic Morazanistas against the occupying troops, we remind our people and the peoples of the world that we are continuing ... the battle against those that stain the native soil,'' the rebel statement said.

The Honduran armed forces condemned the attack and promised a thorough investigation ''to detect ... the perpetrators of this criminal act.''

Kneebone said the 28 servicemen from a group participating in the ''Ahuas Tara 90'' joint exercises with the Honduran armed forces were en route to Jamstran, 74 miles west of Tegucigalpa, to conduct engineering work.

He said security would be stepped up but that the military exercises will continue.

The Morazanista Front has claimed responsibility for other attacks against U.S. targets, including an attack last April 11 on a U.S. and Honduran troop convoy in a northern province that wounded several soldiers.

On Feb. 1, 1989, a convoy carrying more than 30 U.S. soldiers was attacked in a northern province but no one was wounded. Later that month, an explosion ripped through the back of a bus carrying U.S. soldiers, wounding three.

Since 1983, about 1,200 U.S. Army and other military personnel have been stationed in Honduras at Palmerola, which is also known as Soto Cano.

SYDNEY, Australia (APRIL 2) UPI - Firefighters Monday tamed an inferno that began when four large tanks holding liquid fuel exploded, sending fireballs hundreds of yards high, forcing thousands of people from their homes and closing the nearby international airport.

Police said it was believed a faulty pump was to blame for the explosions Sunday, which shattered windows and doors and tossed gas-hauling trucks on their sides. There were no reported injuries.

''The fire investigators have indicated that a small storage tank at the base of one of the big tanks exploded, which they believe was the result of a faulty pump,'' Sgt. Ken Newman said. ''This ignited the bigger tank and the fire rolled through the plant.''

Fire chiefs said the blaze at the Boral Gas plant near the airport in Sydney's southern suburbs sent fireballs 600 yards overhead and was the most violent in the city's history.

Police described the evacuation of thousands of residents within a 2-mile radius of the fire as the biggest emergency operation in Sydney in 20 years.

The familes returned to their homes 6 a.m. Monday after being assured by police there was no contamination in the area.

The four tanks contained a total of 31,700 gallons of fuel, a fire officer said Monday.

''One 40,000-litre (10,560-gallon) tank was hurled 300 yards into Cooks River, which curls past Sydney Airport,'' Fire Chief Ross Brogan said. ''It gouged a hole about 3 feet deep in the dirt.

''Metal walkways throughout the plant are twisted like licorice,'' Brogan said. ''We had to shield our faces from the intense heat when we were a mile away from the fire.

''God knows how scores of people weren't killed in that explosion.''

The nearby airport, wherer thousands of gallons of aviation fuel is stored was closed immediately after the explosion and reopened Monday morning.

Three young men were arrested on looting charges after they were discovered scavenging in a deserted factory, a police spokesman said.

New South Wales state Premier Nick Greiner ordered an immediate inquiry into the blaze.

Liquid petroleum gas - which includes such fuels as propane and butane - is used in cooking stoves and automobiles in Australia. The primary consumers in the area are taxi drivers.

(APRIL 2) - The NHL season ended quietly Sunday night, a lull between a wild, decisive weekend and two months of Stanley Cup playoff suspense.

Eight games were played with little left at stake after the weekend featured Boston's clinching the regular-season title and Adams Division; Washington and the Islanders capturing the final two Patrick Division and NHL playoff spots; and Buffalo, New Jersey and St. Louis wrapping up home-ice advantage.

Fittingly, though, Boston sealed its last available honor to cap its 100-point season: the Jennings Trophy for allowing the fewest goals. Perhaps more than the actual award, the wresting of anything out of a Montreal stranglehold is reward for the Bruins.

Montreal's goaltending tandem of Patrick Roy and Brian Hayward had won the previous three Jennings Trophies. The Bruins, with Rejean Lemelin and Andy Moog in net, yielded 232 goals this season, two fewer than Montreal.

''It's a tribute to the whole team,'' said Bruins Coach Mike Milbury, a finalist for Coach of the Year in his rookie year. ''Winning the Jennings is a great accomplishment. We tried to pay attention to detail all year. The defensemen all had a great year, from (NHL MVP candidate) Ray Bourque to (little-known) Jim Wiemer.''

Lemelin was in goal Sunday, when the New Jersey Devils tied the Bruins 3-3 to deny the Boston Garden crowd a finale victory.

''We've been on a roll for a while, the same way we were in the '87-88 season,'' said New Jersey defenseman Bruce Driver, who scored the tying goal with 26 seconds left in regulation.

''We just played the best team in the NHL and we were right there with them,'' said Driver. ''So I don't think there's any reason why we can't go all the way.''

The Devils had a five-game winning streak stopped, but their six-game unbeaten streak (5-0-1) enabled them to finish at 37-34-9, 17 points better than last season.

At 46-25-9, the Bruins posted their best record since 1983-84.

-- AROUND THE NHL --

Edmonton beat Winnipeg 4-2, Detroit and Philadelphia tied 3-3, Montreal and Hartford tied 1-1, Buffalo bombed Quebec 5-2, Washington edged the New York Rangers 3-2, Calgary clouted Los Angeles 8-4 and Chicago defeated Minnesota 4-1.

OILERS 4, JETS 2

At Winnipeg, Manitoba, Craig Simpson and Glenn Anderson scored power-play goals 38 seconds apart during Edmonton's three-goal, second-period rally to help the Oilers beat their upcoming playoff opponent and win the season series against the Jets 5-3. Their Smythe Division semifinal starts Wednesday in Edmonton, where the third-place Jets couldn't beat the runner-up Oilers in four regular-season games.

FLYERS 3, RED WINGS 3

At Philadelphia, Steve Yzerman scored his 67th goal of the season to lift Detroit in the battle of eliminated teams. Detroit will have the third pick in June's entry draft and the Flyers, who missed the NHL playoffs for the first time in 18 years, will have the fourth selection.

WHALERS 1, CANADIENS 1

At Hartford, Conn., Ron Francis scored with 11 seconds remaining in regulation and the goaltender pulled to let the Whalers tie Montreal. Adams Division third-place finisher Montreal placed lower than second for only the second time in the last 18 years and will open the postseason at Buffalo. Hartford will travel to Boston in the first postseason for former Whaler Rick Ley as coach.

SABRES 5, NORDIQUES 2

At Buffalo, N.Y., Pierre Turgeon and Dave Andreychuk each scored his 40th goal against Quebec, which finished the season with the second-most losses in NHL history. The Nordiques absorbed their 61st defeat of the season, six short of the all-time record set by the 1974-75 Washington Capitals. Quebec finished the season 12-61-7. The Nordiques allowed 407 goals, the third-highest total in league history. The Sabres finished second in the Adams Division at 45-27-8.

CAPITALS 3, RANGERS 2

At New York, Dino Ciccarelli scored a pair of goals to help Washington spoil the Rangers' Patrick Division championship celebration. The Rangers, who clinched a regular-season pennant for the first time in 48 years on the road last Tuesday, lost the last three games of the season. The Rangers will open the playoffs at home against the Islanders Thursday night.

FLAMES 8, KINGS 4

At Calgary, Alberta, Sergei Makarov scored a pair of goals and added one assist against Los Angeles, the Flames' first-round playoff opponents. The defending Stanley Cup champions finished 42-23-15 to finish second overall in the league standings. The Flames and Kings will open at Calgary Wednesday night.

BLACKHAWKS 4, NORTH STARS 1

At Chicago, Adam Creighton scored his 34th goal early in the third period and Norris champion Chicago outshot its first-round opponent, Minnesota, 37-23 in the fight-filled preview. Both coaches rested their key players, looking ahead to the postseason. Minnesota goalie Jon Casey and Blackhawks center Denis Savard, defensemen Doug Wilson and Keith Brown were scratched.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (APRIL 2) UPI - Greyhound Chairman Fred Currey said the nationwide bus line will not negotiate to halt a five-week walkout until strike-related violence ends, vowing the company ''will not be intimidated by terrorism.''

The driver of a Southeast Trailways bus, carrying passengers for Greyhound was in critical but stable condition Monday in a Nashville hospital after being hit by sniper fire in northern Tennessee Saturday night.

The bus shooting incident was the third since Friday and the 26th since the bitter and often violent strike began March 2. Buses in Pennsylvania and Oklahoma were shot at Friday, and a Chicago bus maintenance facility received a bomb threat.

''We will not be intimidated by terrorism,'' Currey said at a news conference Sunday at the Nashville Greyhound terminal, adding the company refused to return to the bargaining table until the strike-related violence stops.

Asked if he believed strikers were responsible for the Tennessee shooting, Currey said, ''You can draw your conclusions.'' Union officials ''say they deplore the violence but do nothing about it,'' he said.

Although company and union officials had been scheduled to resume contract negotiations Monday in Tucson, Ariz., Greyhound Executive Vice President P. Anthony Lannie sent word to both the union and the federal Mediation and Conciliation Service Friday that he would not attend the talks.

Lannie, citing the Oklahoma sniping incident and the bomb threat in Chicago, said: ''We cannot resume negotiations while the violence continues. Accordingly, we will not be in Tucson next Monday for bargaining.''

But in an letter to Edward M. Strait, president of Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions, Lannie had said the Greyhound bargaining team would meet with union negotiators in Tucson on April 9 if there were no new reports of violence.

The Tennessee shooting attack apparently closed that prospect.

Strait repeated the union's condemnation of violence and suggested that some of the incidents have been perpetrated by ''unsafe and ill-trained replacement drivers against all people on the picket lines.''

The wounded driver, David E. Bryant, 58 of Cincinatti, was headed from Nashville to Detroit on Interstate 65 when a passing pickup truck shot at his bus about 11 p.m. Saturday, police said. None of Bryant's 48 passengers was injured.

Bryant underwent six hours of surgery Sunday as doctors tried to save his badly damaged arm.

The Greyhound chairman said he had gone to Vanderbilt University Hospital in Nashville to visit Bryant, but was unable to see him.

Bryant apparently was struck by two bullets, wounding his left arm, the left side of his torso, and the upper right leg, hospital spokesman Wayne Wood said. He said it is not yet certain whether the surgery will save Bryant's arm. The bullet that struck the arm was large, Wood said, cutting off blood supply for a time, causing nerve damage and breaking bones.

Passengers on the bus told investigators the shots were fired from a blue pickup truck, said police officer Carlton Watson of Cross Plains, a town near where incident took place.

The Tennessee Bureau of Investigation said Sunday it had no suspects in the shooting of the Southeast Trailways bus.

The threat against the bus maintenance facility in Chicago forced the evacuation of about 50 workers, but no bomb was found, federal agents said.

In Oklahoma, shotgun pellets hit the front of a bus carrying 26 passengers from New York on Interstate 44 Friday. But no one was hurt in the incident which occurred near Tulsa, officials said.

A bus in traveling between Philadelphia and Harrisburg, Pa. was shot at, but apparently not hit.

The company has offered a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any bus snipers.

The strike began after a breakdown in negotiations on a proposed three-year contract for about 9,000 Greyhound union employees, including some 6,300 drivers.

Company officials have said Greyhound plans to have 3,200 full-time drivers and to operate its full regularly scheduled service by Easter. Greyhound said it has hired 1,700 replacement drivers and that 400 union drivers have crossed the picket lines. It is currently providing about 50 percent of its service.

BEIJING (APRIL 2) UPI - Police sealed most of Tiananmen Square until nightfall and fire trucks with water cannons stood by as authorities braced for signs of a revival of last year's crushed pro-democracy movement.

''This just proves how terrified the leadership is,'' a Chinese official said.

The extraordinary security precautions Sunday came days after the government issued a document warning Beijing citizens to avoid Tiananmen Square from April 1 to June 4, a two-month span encompassing a series of anniversaries marking the rise and bloody dismantling of last spring's protest movement.

The square was the site of student-led protests by hundreds of thousands of people.

Government fears of renewed unrest during the first anniversary of the protests and their bloody suppression have been heightened by recent fax messages and letters sent to Beijing offices by overseas dissidents who fled China after last June.

The faxes urged Beijing residents to ''take walks'' through Tiananmen Square beginning April 1 to protest the killing of hundreds, perhaps thousands, when the army opened fire on demonstrators last June 3-4.

Most of the square was closed to pedestrians until sunset, including the central Martyrs' Memorial and the spot north of the monument where student protesters constructed a 40-foot ''Goddess of Democracy'' statue last May.

The sensitive area was occupied from morning until late afternoon by uniformed marching bands and groups of young children wearing yellow caps and the red scarves of the Communist Party's Young Pioneers.

The children, shown standing in formation on state television's evening news broadcast, were taking part in organized activities to promote the forthcoming Asian Games.

The square was under much heavier guard than usual, with uniformed police stationed about every 10 yards around its eastern border. Witnesses at Tiananmen late Saturday saw police armed with AK-47 rifles stationed in front of the monument and in the guardhouses around Mao Tse-tung's mausoleum.

Lookouts with binoculars were posted on surrounding roofs Sunday, and two fire trucks equipped with water cannons were parked on the west and east sides of the square, one in an alley across from the Great Hall of the People, where government leaders meet.

Authorities deterred students of at least two universities from going to Tiananmen by organizing ''field trips'' to the Great Wall, a two-hour drive northwest of Beijing. One factory organized a similar outing for its workers, sources said.

Chinese sources said the government might organize more activities such as Sunday's Asian Games promotion in Tiananmen Square. The next major cause for official concern is Qing Ming, or ''Clear-Bright,'' a major Chinese festival honoring the dead, which falls on Thursday this year.

Families traditionally observe it by visiting ancestral graves, offering flowers and food in tribute. In 1976, the festival was the spark of the so-called ''April 5'' incident, when a spontaneous outpouring of sentiment for the popular Premier Chou En-lai exploded into anti-government riots put down by police.

The protests began with floral offerings placed on the steps of the Martyrs' Monument in Tiananmen Square, which later served as the headquarters of the 1989 student-led democracy movement.

BANGKOK, Thailand (APRIL 2) UPI - Vietnam removed four Cabinet ministers as part of a sweeping government reorganization that merged a dozen ministries and state institutions into three new ministries, the official Vietnam News Agency reported.

The reshuffling, announced late Sunday, came only days after the firing of a senior Communist Party leader who had been calling for rapid political and economic reform.

''The Vietnamese State Council has decided to streamline the Council of Ministers by merging about a dozen existing ministries and equivalent institutions into three new ministries,'' the agency said.

It said the reorganization was announced in a communique issued after a three-day meeting of the council under President Vo Chi Cong.

Analysts in Bangkok said the moves appeared aimed at reducing the burden on the deficit-ridden national budget and making the division of responsibilities among ministries more rational as the government attempts to attract more foreign investment.

''Foreign investors were often confused by the unfamiliar array of overlapping ministries and departments and unsure where they had to go for various approvals,'' one analyst said.

The State Council communique, read over Hanoi radio, said there also would be changes in the organization of military and civilian courts and public prosecutors' offices to bring them into line with a new criminal code that gives additional rights to defendants.

The government shakeup follows a 15-day plenum of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, which fired Tran Xuan Bach, the No. 8 man in the party's ruling politburo.

Bach, 65, was considered a possible contender for the post of party leader at a party congress set for next year when current leader Nguyen Van Linh is expected to step down.

Bach, although known for his connections with the conservative old guard, has in recent months become forceful in his demands for political reforms.

The reorganization announced Sunday removed four ministers from their jobs and the State Council said they would be reassigned.

Merged were the three ministries of External Economic Relations, Home Trade, and Supply into the Ministry of Commerce under former Home Trade Minister Hoang Minh Than.

Two ministries and two departments were merged into the Ministry of Culture, Information, Sports and Tourism headed by Tran Hoan, the former minister of information, the news agency said.

Two more ministries were combined into the Ministry of Education and Training headed by Tran Hong Quan, former minister of secondary vocational higher education and job training.

A series of other ministries and state economic commissions were combined, renamed and given clearer responsibilities.

BEIJING (APRIL 2) UPI - Fierce thunderstorms with strong winds battered southwest Guangxi province, leaving 17 dead and 20 seriously injured, the semi-official China News Service said Monday.

Seven counties in southeast Guangxi were struck by thunderstorms from late Friday to Saturday morning that destroyed 100 houses, damaged telephone lines, and temporarily suspended transportation, the news service said.

Lightning struck an army oil depot in southern Fangcheng country, setting it on fire, the report said.

Hailstorms and high winds ravaged 10 other counties, leaving 17 people dead and 20 severely injured throughout the province, the news service said.

Mountainous Guangxi province, bordering Vietnam, is one of China's least developed regions.

FREEPORT, Pa. (APRIL 2) UPI - Towns along the Allegheny River Monday monitored a 30-mile-long fuel slick from a punctured pipeline, closing intake valves and trying to keep fuel from tainting water supplies for about 1 million people.

River communities in Allegheny and Westmoreland counties banned all non-essential use of water following the weekend fuel spill, the second in the area in a little more than two years, officials said.

Towns north of Pittsburgh closed water inlet valves late Sunday and early Monday as the thick mixture of gasoline and oil flowed down the river, restricting water supplies for about 1 million people in the area.

The slick was expected to reach Pittsburgh early Monday, but water rationing there should not be necessary because of the large storage capacity of the city's water treatment plant, said spokeswoman Donna Sagmeister.

But the treatment plant will be shut down temporarily when the slick moves within a half-mile of the water intake valve, she said, adding that ''we have a three to five-day supply of water stored.''

State and county emergency agencies set up portable tanks to provide drinking and cooking water and urged residents to turn off hot water heaters in towns where water levels reached the crisis stage. Schools and businesses might be ordered to close if water supplies become even more critical, officials said.

Classes were canceled Monday for at least six school districts and numerous private schools along the river, affecting thousands of students, officials said.

The pipeline owner, Buckeye Pipeline Co., reported that the broken pipeline released 98,000 gallons of fuel and that crews had recovered 20 percent, said George Thomas, communications director for Allegheny County. But county emergency management officials were suspicious of the estimate, he said.

''We're going with the idea that it may be as much as 500,000 gallons,'' he said.

''They're advising industry not to take in any water,'' Thomas said. ''It's combustible. It's got 50 percent gasoline.''

Gov. Robert Casey and Lt. Gov. Mark Singel joined federal authorities along the river to assess damage to the environment.

The spill stretched downriver for 30 miles from Freeport and from bank to bank along the river, Thomas said. ''It's coming in globs, sticking together,'' he said.

A landslide, perhaps caused by heavy rains, cracked a 10-inch pipeline containing gasoline and other petroleum products on Friday. The fuel spewed from the line at Freeport, about 30 miles north of Pittsburgh, into an Allegheny tributary and from there into the river.

The slick, drifting south at a rate of about a half-mile an hour, was located at Oakmontrth of Pittsburgh, authorities said Sunday. It was expected to take at least four days for the oil to move through the Pittsburgh area, where the Allegheny joins the Monongahela River to form the Ohio River.

Health officials asked scientists at the University of Pittsburgh to determine how to dissolve the petroleum mixture, which also contained paraffin.

The leak was discovered when workers at a pipeline control room noticed a drop in pressure about 11 p.m. Friday, the company said.

The Coast Guard and pipeline company worked to recover the fuel, setting up more than 1,000 feet of booms at Freeport and Brackenridge.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the company accepted responsibility for the cleanup and was hiring private contractors to help federal emergency teams do the job.

Two years ago, the largest inland oil spill in the history of the United States occurred on Pittsburgh's waterways. On Jan. 2, 1988, a dime-sized piece of weak steel ruptured, leading to the collapse of a 3.8 million-gallon Ashland Oil Inc. storage tank in Florette, Pa., south of Pittsburgh.

An estimated 750,000 gallons of diesel oil poured into the Monongahela and Ohio rivers, threatening water service to millions of people in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio for nearly a week.

In November 1989 Ashland signed a record $4 million agreement with Pennsylvania to settle damage claims from the accident. The company already had paid the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources and 10 other state agencies $660,000 to cover direct clean up costs.

A key recommendation of the Tank Collapse Task Force formed after the Ashland spill led to the state's Storage Tank and Spill Preventionm Act, enacted in August 1989. The law regulates about 36,500 above-ground storage tanks and 115,000 underground tanks. All the tanks must be registered with the DER.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (APRIL 2) UPI - A bus collided with a truck on the outskirts of the central city of Bloemfontein, killing 13 people in the country's second major weekend road accident, state-run radio reported Monday.

Bodies and wreckage were hurtled yards from the crash site, about 13 miles outside the provincial capital of the Orange Free State, the radio report said. Many injured in Sunday night's crash were in critical condition, the radio report said.

Shortly after midnight Saturday, a car slammed into a crowd of pedestrians on the outskirts of the southeastern city of Port Elizabeth, also killing 13 people and injuring 12 others, state-run radio reported.

The driver of the car was attacked and beaten by members of the crowd and rushed to the hospital in serious condition, the radio said.

It said the victims were among a crowd gathering for a rally in Port Elizabeth's black area of Motherwell Sunday for an appearance by African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela.

MANILA, Philippines (APRIL 2) UPI - The Japanese embassy has taken additional security measures to protect its citizens in the Philippines amid threats of attack by communist rebels, a Japanese spokesman said Monday.

President Corazon Aquino, meanwhile, said her government has tried to protect the rights of foreign investors in the Philippines ''to every extent possible.''

The chief of the communist New Peoples Army said in a statement Sunday guerrillas would step up attacks against Americans and for the first time also singled out Japanese aid workers suspected of involvement in Manila's counter-insurgency drive.

A U.S. Embassy spokeswoman said American officials are ''definitely taking the threats seriously.''

''Japanese economic aid is designed to promote economic and social development ... so that the criticisms referred to in that statement have no foundation,'' said Japanese Embassy spokesman Seichi Kondo.

''We have taken appropriate measures to protect ourselves and Japanese citizens in the Philippines.''

Employees of the Japanese Embassy evacuated their offices Thursday, the 21st founding anniversary of the 19,000-member NPA, after a bomb threat was called in. Police searched the building but found no bomb.

Officials at the giant U.S. Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Base last week issued travel restrictions forbidding soldiers from visiting Manila except for official missions or specific exceptions. Eight Americans have been killed in the last two years in slayings blamed on the guerrillas.

Asked if her government can ensure safety of Japanese and U.S. investors, Aquino said, ''To every extent possible, we have endeavored to protect the rights of foreign investors in our country, and we shall continue to do so as we must encourage such investments particularly in areas not sufficiently covered by our nationals.''

Col. Juanito Rimando, armed forces spokesman, told reporters the military is prepared to beef up security for U.S. and Japanese nationals ''if they will make a formal request for such assistance.''

NPA chief Romulo Kintanar said in a statement Sunday he had information Japanese aid was being used for Manila's counter-insurgency campaign and for projects that have deprived farmers of land and polluted the environment.

''We warn the Japanese government to stop this and urge the Japanese people to oppose this act of their government,'' Kintanar said.

The NPA is the armed wing of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines which has been battling the Manila government for 21 years.

In a related development, 10 people, including six guerrillas and four government soldiers, were killed in a gunbattle in the northern Philippines, the military said Monday.

Five soldiers were also wounded in the Saturday morning fighting in Pasuquin, Ilocos Norte, some 260 miles north of Manila, a military report said.

Analysis By: Joan Hanauer

NEW YORK (APRIL 2) UPI - "Twin Peaks" offers a moody, sinister soap opera in which the beauty of the Rocky Mountains provides sharp contrast to the ugly goings-on in a small northwestern Pacific town. It's an on-going murder mystery in which everybody has a secret.

The first installment of the much-touted ABC series airs Sunday, April 8, 9-11 p.m. Eastern time, as a two-hour movie. The action continues when the show goes into its regular time period on Thursday, April 12, 9-10 p.m. Eastern time.

"Twin Peaks" has aroused more then normal interest because it was created by David Lynch, whose theatrical film credits include "Eraserhead," "The Elephant Man" and "Blue Velvet," and Mark Frost, writer, story editor and executive story editor on "Hill Street Blues."

ABC takes a gamble by scheduling this obviously expensive and unorthodox series opposite "Cheers" and "Grand" on NBC. In recent history, the network has owned Thursday night. ABC is betting on a dramatic, off-beat alternative to the sitcom - the format that ate television.

The show is not without humor, but it tends to be quirky. The stars are Kyle MacLachlan as FBI Agent Dale Cooper and Michael Ontkean as Sheriff Harry S. Truman, which ought to be quirky enough for anybody. On his small police force is Andy, a cop who exasperates his boss by crying at every crime scene.

The story begins when Peter Martell goes fishing in a stream near the sawmill and finds the plastic-wrapped body of a dead girl. The cops are called. Watching the goings-on are Pete's wife, Catherine (Piper Laurie) and Joan Chen, who plays Jocelyn Packard, a rich man's widow who owns the mill.

The scene shifts to the Palmer home, where Sarah Palmer goes to wake her daughter, only to find her missing. Where she is, of course, is the morgue. The dead girl is homecoming queen Laura Palmer.

The investigation widens when a second girl, who has been raped and tortured, wanders across a railroad trestle in her slip, ropes dangling from her wrists, dazed but alive. FBI agent Cooper drives onto the scene, bemused by all the pine trees and the fact that there's so much, well, nature in Twin Peaks.

Here's a guy who must do a plastic Christmas because he doesn't even recognize a Douglas fir when he sees one - or, actually, forests of them. Sometimes he seems more interested in investigating the outdoors than the crime.

Cooper has reason to suspect that Laura may be another victim of a serial killer. Among the local suspects is Bobby Briggs, Laura's football-playing boyfriend, who also has been playing around with a waitress from a local cafe whose trucker husband would not like it.

Laura also was seeing somebody else - a sensitive biker named James. He may feel terrible about Laura's death, but he's able to console himself with her best friend, Donna.

Laura had other secrets as well. She was seeing a psychiatrist, played by Russ Tamblyn, something the doctor says her parents did not know. She also rented a safe deposit box, where investigators find $10,000 in cash and indications of how she got it.

If the above makes the show sound like "Growing Pains" gone wrong, it isn't all that adolescent-oriented. There are plenty of adult shenanigans - the kids aren't the only ones with complicated lives. There's trouble between Jocelyn Packard and Catherine Martell over how the sawmill should be run.

Leland Parker, Laura's father, works with a wheeler-dealer who is trying to sell a bunch of Swedes a real estate deal involving a local lodge. But the Swedes take off after a sexy nymphette tells them about the murder. She knows it will queer the deal. It's how she gets her jollies. There are various love affairs, some of which involve married folks.

The advance publicity on this show advertises that the investigation into Laura's murder strips the layers of respectability from the people of Twin Peaks and reveals the dark secrets of the town.

That sure sounds like soap opera - a form in which everybody is always getting into trouble within a maze of complications. In "Twin Peaks," there's murder to liven matters up even more.

The series gets off to an intriguing start with the two-hour movie and if you tune in for the first regular series episode you very well may get hooked.

One problem will be finding anyone to like in "Twin Peaks." Most of the inhabitants range anywhere from devious to depraved. FBI agent Cooper seems to like his work a little too much - he's always dictating into a tape recorder to someone named Diane - and there is something slightly mad in his gaze.

Sheriff Harry S. Truman appears the best bet for a hero, but in this kind of show, who knows what lies under his particular rock. At least he's reasonably understanding about the cop who cries when faced with anything bad - which in "Twin Peaks" means a lot of the time.

(APRIL 2) UPI - You don't need a degree from Harvard to understand the analysis Chuck Person gave for Indiana's loss to the Cleveland Cavaliers.

''We just got our butts kicked,'' Person said Sunday after the Cavs trounced the Pacers 121-91 at the Richfield Coliseum.

The decision, which sanpped Indiana's five-game winning streak, pulled the Cavaliers to within two games of the Pacers, who hold the seventh spot in the Eastern Conference playoff order. Atlanta holds a half-game lead over Cleveland for the eighth and final playoff spot.

Cleveland led 62-49 at halftime, and slowly pulled away in the third quarter. The Cavs outscored Indiana 11-4 at the end of the quarter to lead 95-76.

The Cavaliers outrebounded the Pacers 33-13 in the first half and ended the game with a 53-39 advantage.

''The biggest thing was the hustle and rebounding and we were clearly getting out-hustled and getting annihilated on the boards,'' said Indiana Coach Dick Versace. ''I thought our shot selection in the first half was completely broken down.''

The Cavaliers, who have won nine of their last 12 games, were led Larry Nance. He scored 24 points and 13 rebounds. Nance now has 11,010 points in his career. Craig Ehlo and Brad Daugherty each added 17 points for Cleveland.

Person led Indiana with 17 points, while Reggie Miller and Rik Smits each contributed 16.

(APRIL 2) UPI - The Poindexter case goes to the jury... potential problems for commuters in Buffalo today... firefighters in Australia gain the upper hand on a huge blaze... and Japanese stocks take another nose dive. Those stories and more, next from U-P-I.

The jury in the Iran-Contra trial of John Poindexter is scheduled to get down to the business of deciding Poindexter's innocence or guilt today.

U-S District Judge Harold Greene is slated to instruct the seven woman, five man panel this morning.

The panel must consider whether Poindexter is guilty of trying to impede a congressional investigation into the Iran-Contra scandal.

Prosecutor Dan Webb summed up his case against Poindexter Friday, saying the retired rear admiral tried to ''rewrite history'' by misleading Congress.

Poindexter's lawyers argue that he was essentially a ''company man'' who dutifully carried out administration policy with the good graces of his superiors.

The defense team also did its best to distance Poindexter from his underling at the White House, Oliver North. The defense team painted North as the mover-and-shaker in the Iran-Contra scandal.

Australian police have O-K'd the return of residents to the area surrounding a gas plant where four large tanks holding liquid fuel exploded yesterday.

Authorities had evacuated thousands of people within a two-mile radius of the Boral Gas plant south of Sydney after a series of explosions that sent fireballs 600 yards high.

Police say they believe the blasts were caused by a faulty pump in a small storage tank at the facility. The explosion set off a chain reaction which resulted in what observers say was the most violent fire in Sydney's history.

The inferno caused the nearby international airport to close until this morning.

Firefighters say the heat from the blaze was so intense that they were forced to shield their faces as far as one mile away from it.

There were NO injuries reported from the fire fueled by nearly 32-thousand gallons of liquid petroleum gas.

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (APRIL 2) UPI - More than 100 high school students demanding the resignation of President Felix Houphouet-Boigny were arrested Monday after tough economic austerity measures took effect, witnesses said.

Soldiers blocked off the streets around the Lycee Moderne de Plateau High School in central Abidjan before moving to arrest the protesting students. The schools were opening for the first time since being closed March 3 following a series of violent anti-government demonstrations.

Abidjan University, which also has been closed since last month, is scheduled to reopen Tuesday but political analysts said they thought few of its 21,000 students had returned to the capital to resume their studies.

The arrest of the protesting high school students came as the austerity measures, including salary cuts of up to 40 percent for public sector employees and a 10 percent tax increase for the private sector, began to take effect.

The measures have led to six weeks of the most violent demonstrations since the Ivory Coast became independent from France in 1960, according to political observers.

The demonstrations during the past two months have put into question the government's ability to impose price cuts aimed at moderating the effect of the wage reductions.

The government acknowledged Monday that some businesses were refusing to accept reductions in the price of rice and other goods, which have been cut by up to 20 percent. The price reductions will severely reduce income from trade, the largest sector of the economy outside agriculture.

Houphouet-Boigny, who is 85 and has ruled the country since independence, has used increasingly heavy-handed measures to suppress opposition to the austerity plan, which is aimed at filling a $390 million budget deficit largely caused by a drop in coffee and cocoa prices, the Ivory Coast's major exports.

Since the austerity program was announced earlier this year, trade union leaders have been arrested, demonstrators beaten and a Catholic priest attacked by police in actions not normally associated with Houphouet-Boigny's rule.

The demonstrations have seriously undermined his authority and that of the one-party system he instituted at the time of independence. Houphouet-Boigny has consistently refused demands to introduce a multi-party system.

The president has also refused to designate a successor, saying only that he will do so when the time is right.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Japan opened its new fiscal year today with the second-largest decline ever on the Tokyo stock market.

The Tokyo market, on a downward slide most of last month, lost six-point-six percent of its value, fueling speculation that Japan's economic boom could be nearing an end.

The Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues went into a freefall, losing one-thousand 978-point-38 yen today... closing at the year's low of 28-thousand two point oh-seven. The index of all listed major shares plunged 158 point 15 points, to two-thousand 69 point 33.

The decline was blamed on a falling Japanese yen, rising interest rates and a report that insurance companies were selling off stocks. The Finance Ministry said it investigated the report and found it to be groundless. Insurance companies are the chief institutional investors in the Tokyo stock market.

The losses are second only to the ''Black Monday'' collapse of October 20th, 1987... when the Tokyo market suffered a loss of three-thousand 836 point 48 yen.

The Bank of Japan says the dollar rose above the 160-yen level for the first time in 39 months before moving slightly lower to close at 159-pointpoint-30 yen from Friday's close.

Zimbabwe voters overwhelmingly supported President Robert Mugabe's bid to return to office for a third consecutive term.

Mugabe points to his 5-1 margin of victory over his opponent as an indication that Zimbabwe voters are prepared to accept a one-party system.

Mugabe says he will NOT restrict the activities of opposition parties. He did, however, hold out the possibility that his administration would dissolve opposition groups if such a need arose.

Final results show that half of the country's four-point-eight-Million voters turned out despite three days in which to cast ballots. This compares to 1985 when 99 percent of the electorate turned out to vote.

Zimbabwe, formerly known as Rhodesia, gained independence ten years ago. Britain helped set up the present multi-party format that exists in Zimbabwe.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Overnight negotiations in Buffalo, New York, have failed to get the cash-starved transit system operating again in time for the morning rush hour.

Buses and rapid-transit trains have been idle in New York's second-largest city since yesterday morning. The Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority shut down for lack of money.

Erie County legislators went home early this morning after failing to agree on a deal for a source of revenue. But several people involved in the negotiations, including County Executive Dennis Gorski and transportation authority Chairman Robert Gioia, stayed behind to continue talking.

Officials had said earlier that chances were good for a settlement before the start of the work-week. But now they say those chances have disappeared.

135-thousand communters normally rely on public transit in Buffalo.

The shutdown affects bus service in Erie and Niagara counties and service on Buffalo's six-point-four mile light rail rapid transit line.

There has been little talk of raising the basic one-dollar fare on the system. The fare was last raised in 1987, by 20 cents.

The Buffalo Teachers Federation, the union representing the city's public school teachers, said it will go to court today to get the transit system back in operation.

Union president Philip Rumore says the B-T-F would seek a federal show-cause order to end the shutdown... on the basis the bus system is critical in the city's court-ordered school desegregation program.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Nobel Peace Prize winner Desmond Tutu plans to try today to stop waves of inter-racial violence in South Africa.

The Church of England archbishop appealed to President Frederik de Klerk to stop a ''trigger-happy'' police force and save stalled peace talks with the African National Congress.

Tutu and A-N-C leader Nelson Mandela plan to make visits today to the black province of Natal... where fighting erupted last week between A-N-C loyalists and supporters of Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi. Inkatha seeks to establish Zulu-led political leadership in Natal.

During an address to Parliament today, de Klerk is expected to discuss the government's response to the mounting unrest.

Tutu endorsed the A-N-C's decision to delay historic talks with de Klerk's government. Tutu said the government's failure to prevent police brutality against demonstrators has thrown South Africa into crisis. Mandela said yesterday he will meet informally with de Klerk ''in the near future.''

Voters in Ann Arbor, Michigan, will vote today on whether to increase the fine for smoking marijuana.

The referendum comes one day after the annual ''Hash Bash'' at Ann Arbor's University of Michigan. Between three-thousand and five-thousand people puffed away... calling for legalization of marijuana. A similar ''Hash Bash'' is scheduled today at Wayne State University in Detroit.

The fine for smoking pot in Ann Arbor is five-dollars for a first-time offense. Voters will decide whether to increase the fine to 25 dollars.

Police say by last night, they had ticketed 60 people, including 41 for marijuana consumption or possession.

MUSKEGO, WI (APRIL 2) UPI - Vandals cut fan belts on 90 school buses, delaying bus routes in four school districts, an official of National School Bus Service Inc. said Monday.

Jim Tidball, manager of the company's Muskego branch, said the damage was discovered early Monday.

''We've had approximately 90 buses cut, the fan belts cut,'' he said.

He said the damage delayed bus routes for the Franklin, Whitnall, Greenfield and Muskego school districts, affecting several thousand students.

''It's delayed us about two hours. We'll fix what we can and try to get buses from other locations,'' he said.

Tidball estimated the damage would cost ''$20 to $30 per belt plus labor for each bus.'' He said all but eight buses parked at the site were damaged.

CHICAGO (APRIL 2) UPI - A 37-year-old man who gave up a kidney to save his mother's life seven years ago died of cancer less than 24 hours before she could return the favor by donating bone marrow for a transplant Monday.

Ernestine Mitchell, 57, was already in the University of Chicago Hospitals preparing to donate bone marrow to her dying son, Hilliary, 37, when the news of his death came.

Hilliary Mitchell died late Sunday night - just hours before he was to participate in the history-making surgery.

Doctors had said it would have been the first time an organ recipient would have returned the favor to the donor.

''He died as a result of an infection,'' Hospital spokesman John Easton said Monday. ''He had a fairly overwhelming infection. He was a real risk for infection because his immune system was weakened by his disease. The chemotherapy designed to fight his disease and prepare him for the bone marrow transplant left his immune system further weakened.''

Mitchell had begun chemotherapy Friday before the transplant, which was scheduled for Monday. The unemployed truck driver contracted leukemia two years ago.

''The tables are turning,'' Hilliary Mitchell said in interview last month. ''You never know when you are saving someone's life one day that the next day they may be turn around and save your life.''

Mrs. Mitchell was looking forward to the surgery. ''It's an opportunity a mother rarely gets,'' she said earlier, ''to give life to her child a second time.''

Mrs. Mitchell also said she hoped to use her experience as a means of stirring interest among potential donors for other operations.

''So many people are not aware how important it is to be a donor,'' she said. She added, ''This might make them think twice.''

Dr. Robert Geller, bone cancer specialist at the hospital, said he believed the operation would have marked the first time two patients had swapped donor tissue in transplant operations.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange, on a downward slide most of last month, suffered their second-largest one-day decline Monday, losing 6.6 percent of their value amid speculation that Japan's economic boom could be coming to an end.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which plummeted 1,045.71 points Friday, lost 1,978.38 points, or 6.6 percent, to 28,002.07 its lowest level since November 7, 1988.

Monday's plunge was second only to the record 3,836.48 point loss in the aftermath of the global crash of October, 1987.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Index of all listed major shares plunged 158.15 points to 2,069.33.

Declines ravaged advances by a 90 to 1 margin as 928 issues declined in price and only 10 issues advanced, with 19 issues unchanged.

Trading was slow as as only an estimated 450 million shares changed hands, down from 548 million shares Friday.

Analysts blamed the plunge on a falling Japanese yen, rising interest rates and a report that insurance companies, major investors in the market have moved to sell stocks.

The U.S. dollar climbed 2.30 yen to close at 159.95 yen, the highest since December 31, 1986, on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange.

The fall was triggered by a report in the Nihon Keizai Shimbun, Japan's top business newspaper, that major insurance companies will sell shares to decrease their stock positions and cut losses.

The Finance Ministry, attempting to stop the market plunge, said it investigated the newspaper report and found it to be groundless.

Index-linked selling accelerated the downward slide, analysts noted.

''The newspaper report had the biggest impact on the market,'' a trader at Daiwa Securities Co. said, adding that the yen's volatility has been partially digested by the market.

''With the market so weak, bad news like this could lead to panic selling '' the trader said.

Nippon Steel paced the actives followed by Hitachi Ltd., NEC, Kawasaki Steel and NKK.

Large-capital steels such as Sumitomo Metal and Kobe Steel were generally lower.

Constructions, nonferrous metals, electric powers also declined along with electricals, shipbuildings and autos.

There were a few individual gainers.

Elsewhere in Asia, stock prices lost 2.1 percent on their value of the Hong Kong Stock Exchange in sympathy with the steep decline in Tokyo and a higher-than-expected hike in the local prime rate.

The key Hang Seng Index, which eased 2.2.54 points Friday, tumbled 63.28 points to 2,937.70. Financials lost 34.06 points, utilities fell 69.88, industrials fell 51.73 and properties plunged 141.94 points.

Turnover amounted to 1.20 billion shares, down from the 1.44 billion shares traded Friday.

Analysts said the plunge on the Tokyo market sent investors scurrying for cover.

Declines were recorded across the board with all blue-chip and most secondary issues losing ground.

A higher-than-expected hike in the prime lending rate to 11 percent from 10 percent also affected investor sentiment.

Prices lost 1.9 percent of their value in light trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange, as local investors reacted to the tumble in Tokyo.

The blue-chip Straits Times Industrial Index, which slipped 4.88 points Friday, fell 31.89 points to 1,549.19.

The narrower All Singapore Index, which eased 1.47 points Friday, dropped 9.13 points to 422.66.

Turnover amounted to around 81.6 million shares, compared with 49.3 million shares changing hands Friday.

Analysts said the fall on the Japanese market alarmed local investors who stepped to the sidelines to await further developments.

Dealers said a round of encouraging corporate results announced last week was virtually ignored amid the barrage of sales.

''It's a follow-the-leader scenario,'' one analyst said. ''Right now, investors are frightened and are awaiting some signals to restore confidence.''

Development Bank of Singapore paced the declining issues followed by Singapore Airlines (foreign shares), Overseas Chinese Banking Corp. (foreign shares) and Fraser and Neave (ordinary shares).

Among the few scattered gainers were Central Properties, ICS and Causeway Investment.

In Australia, prices nosedived 1.9 percent on the Sydney Sharemarket, driven by the plunging Tokyo market.

The blue-chip All Ordinaries Index, which fell 11.3 points Friday, tumbled 28.7 points or 1.9 percent to 1,507.1, its lowest level since July 1989.

Turnover amounted to 57.2 million shares, down from the 106.2 million shares traded Friday.

Analysts said investors are worried the increasingly unstable Japanese markets may drag the Sydney market lower.

Solid losses were recored across the board.

In the banking sector, Westpac Bank lost 8 cents to $5.02 and NAB Bank fell 12 cents to $6.24.

Among the blue-chips, News Corp. lost 40 cents to $10.50, Brambles fell 5 cents to $12.80, Coles Myer fell 20 cents to $7.60 and BTR Nylex lost 8 cents to $5.52.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Prospects are bleak for a resumption of public transit service for this morning's rush hour in Buffalo. The Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority stopped service yesterday, citing a lack of cash. Negotiators had expressed hope of getting the system back on track today.

But those hopes all but disappeared when NO resolution was reached on the issue at talks early this morning.

Jury selection is scheduled to begin today in New York for the trial of two of seven white youths charged in last August's slaying of a black teen-ager in Brooklyn. Prosecutors and defense attorneys are set to pick two panels to determine the guilt or innocence of accused triggerman Joseph Fama and Keith Mondello. Heavy security measures are planned. Yusuf Hawkin's brutal death last summer sparked heightened racial tensions.

A lawyer for ousted Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega says former U-S Attorney General Ramsey Clark may testify on Noriega's behalf today during a federal court hearing in Miami. Clark's possible appearance is tied to a defense motion to dismiss charges against Noriega because of the severe violence that preceded his arrest in January. Clark heads a group that contends that U-S estimates of damage from the invasion of Panama are understated.

The Tokyo stock market slipped once again today, suffering its second-steepest one-day drop. The Nikkei Average of selected issues plummeted six-point-six percent to its lowest level of the year. Analysts blame the month-long decline on the weakening yen, rising interest rates and a report that insurance companies are dumping stocks.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Pittsburgh city officials say they doN'T expect to have to ration water as a 30-mile-long fuel slick moves down the Allegheny River toward the city. Towns along the Allegheny are monitoring the slick and closing their water inlet valves, trying to protect water supplies as the gooey mess approaches. A punctured pipeline caused the spill, which officials say should take four days to pass through the Pittsburgh area.

California death row inmate Robert Alton Harris remains in a special cell at San Quentin Prison, awaiting word from the Supreme Court whether it will let his execution take place as scheduled tomorrow. A federal judge granted an indefinite stay Friday, based on defense claims that Harris was denied competent psychiatric evaluation at his 1978 trial.

The war of nerves between Lithuania and Moscow continues, although the stakes appear to be increasing. JERUSALEM (APRIL 2) UPI - The Hungarian airline Malev has resumed flying Soviet Jewish immigrants to Israel, two weeks after a ban imposed because of reported threats of attacks, authorities said Monday.

Malev planes arrived carrying Soviet immigrants Friday and Sunday, Israeli officials said.

Hungary's government announced Thursday it would resume its regular tri-weekly flights to Israel but said it would no longer operate special charter flights for Israeli-bound Soviet Jews.

Malev had suspended both regular and chartered flights to Israel in late March after the terrorist group Islamic Jihad threatened to attack airlines transporting Soviet Jews to Israel.

Malev's director-general, Lajos Jahoda, was fired in the wake of criticism by the United States and other nations over the flight cancellations.

Israeli officials maintain the Arab world is waging a misinformation campaign against the latest wave of immigrants, claiming that Israel intends to settle Soviet Jews in the disputed territories occupied by Israel after the 1967 Six Day War.

On Sunday, Palestinian lawyers said Soviet immigration represented a threat to ''Palestinian national existence'' and the hope to create a Palestinian homeland in the territories.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said last week the Israeli government had no policy of settling new immigrants in the Israeli-occupied territories, but said the government also would not prohibit the newcomers from living where they wanted.

In 1989, nearly 13,000 Soviet Jews arrived in Israel and fewer than 1 percent settled in the occupied West Bank or Gaza Strip, government figures show.

Israeli officials estimate as many as 100,000 Soviet Jews will arrive in 1990.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Thunderstorms and heavy rain rumbled across the South Monday, while dense fog enveloped much of the East Coast and Midwestern states like Wisconsin and Michigan were hit with a messy mix of rain and snow.

The National Weather Service said a severe thunderstorm watch was posted in southern Georgia, while portions of Mississippi, Alabama and North Carolina were bombarded by heavy rain.

New England wrestled with a weak high-pressure system that brought more rain and overcast skies to much of the soggy region. But parts of New England improved, experiencing only a drizzle.

Dense morning fog blanketed large swaths of the mid-Atlantic region from southern New Jersey and western Pennsylvania south to Richmond, cutting visibility to near zero in many areas.

Drizzle and occasional thunderstorms were reported across Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey, where morning low temperatures ranged from the upper 30s to low 40s.

In Wisconsin, an unstable cold front brought snow and dropped temperatures to 31 degrees in Eau Claire, while Wausau, just 90 miles to the east, got rain and temperatures of 37 degrees.

Michigan was chilled by rain, drizzle, fog and snow, with up to 5 inches of the latter expected in northern portions of the Lower Peninsula. A cold front swept across Ohio, bringing scattered showers and a promise of wet snow by Monday night.

Very heavy rains pelted West Texas from Odessa to Sonora. Thunderstorms also struck a small area of East Texas over the Trinity River and spots along the Red River on the Texas-Oklahoma border.

Freezing cold was headed for Arkansas. Louisiana was shrouded in clouds, but humid warmer weather was on the way.

Thunderstorms rattled New Mexico northeast of Elephant Butte Lake, while scattered rains dampened other parts of New Mexico.

In the West, parts of Southern California received rain and thunderstorms Sunday evening. Forecasters said fair weather was headed for the central and northern parts of the state.

But just north in Oregon, drizzle moved in after a day of sunshine.

In Washington, fair weather headed for the large inland region, but fog and drizzle plagued the shore.

Analysis By: Ken Franckling

(APRIL 2) UPI - Abdullah Ibrahim and Sathima Bea Benjamin yearn for the day they can return home to a South Africa where apartheid is no longer a fact of daily life.

The jazz musicians, who are husband and wife, have been in self-imposed exile for most of the past three decades. They are citizens of the world whose music is very much rooted in their homeland.

"One longs for the mountains and the sea. The country is rich and beautiful and the people are so terrific. I don't know how the people have kept their incredible tenderness, courage, and compassion," Benjamin says from New York, where the couple lives with their two children, Tsakwe and Sidi.

Ibrahim, a pianist, writes and plays with his septet Ekaya (the word for "home" in several African languages). His distinctive music bubbles with African, gospel, and modern influences he has absorbed.

Benjamin is a singer/songwriter with a keen sense of rhythm and melody. Rather than float above the accompaniment as many vocalists do, her clear voice weaves in and out of the instrumentation, completing a fine musical tapestry.

After the bloody anti-apartheid riots in Soweto in 1976, the couple decided to become what Benjamin calls "cultural workers for the struggle," reaching people through music. "I'm a fighter for the freedom of the spirit," she says.

Their most recent recordings, Benjamin's "Love Light" and Ibrahim's "African River" and "Mindif," all on the ENJA label, are filled with tributes to the people of South Africa, the land, the culture, the struggles.

"The intention is not to make music to show off your prowess or technical ability, every song is actually a mandate ... a challenge to capture the spirit of an individual or a situation," Ibrahim says. "With blood, sweat, and tears, we accept the challenge."

In the ancient African tradition, he says, music, like prayer, is designed to heal the spirit. "In the contemporary urban connotation, these things don't function that way any more," Ibrahim says. "We are seen to be entertainers. But we inject those healing properties within the music. We think it is important, especially for the younger generation. Every experience has a spiritual impact on people."

Ibrahim, who is black, was known as Dollar Brand before he converted to Islam in the late 1960s. His given name was Adolphus. The nickname "Dollar" came from childhood, because he ran around with dollars in his pockets to buy the latest jazz recordings from visiting American sailors.

Benjamin started singing as a teenager. Her ancestry is a mix of South American Indian, Spanish, African, and English. She was classified as "colored" under South Africa's apartheid system. She became a teacher but moonlighted as a singer. "Living under apartheid, you learn to tell yourself that you can be anything," Benjamin says, "but it is not true."

Both were born and raised in Cape Town. They met in 1959 at a local show at which Ibrahim accompanied Benjamin on a Duke Ellington tune, "I've Got It Bad (and That Ain't Good)." Ellington and his music soon had a profound influence on their lives and music.

As the political situation worsened, the couple left South Africa in 1961 and settled in Switzerland. One night in Zurich in 1963, Benjamin met Ellington, whose band was on tour. She invited him to stop by a local club where Ibrahim was playing with his trio.

Ellington liked what he heard, flew the couple to Paris and recorded each of them over the next three days. The session resulted in Ibrahim's first American LP: "Duke Ellington Presents the Dollar Brand Trio."

In 1965, Ellington brought them to America to perform at the Newport Jazz Festival. Ibrahim appeared with his trio; Benjamin sang with the Ellington orchestra.

There are Ellington touches throughout the music of Benjamin and Ibrahim. Both pay tribute to him in their songs. "It is almost impossible to escape Ellington. His influence is so far-reaching. There is so much we learn from him in terms of composition, arranging, the use of colors, the use of words," Ibrahim says.

Analysis By: Robert Shepard

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - House Republicans are saying the honeymoon is over and they are once again being mistreated by the Democratic majority, led by Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash. To hear the Republicans tell it, things have gotten almost as bad as during the dark days when Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, ruled the House.

Until he was forced to resign last June because of ethics charges, Wright used the overwhelming Democratic majority to push through his ambitious legislatiave agenda, and when Republicans tried to stand in the way they generally were brushed aside.

When Foley, a much more accommodating leader, was elevated to the speakership he promised better treatment for GOP, and hopes were expressed on both sides of the aisle that bitter partisan squabbling was a thing of the past.

Recently, however, Republicans have been saying they are not being treated fairly and hint of renewed guerrilla warfare against the Democrats. In one incident, Republicans accused the Democrats of trying to delay the Supreme Court's ruling on the new flag burning law until after the November elections. Democrats said it was just a misunderstanding.

And then last week, the GOP was outraged by the way the child-care bill was brought to the floor for a vote. The Republicans said they were cut out of the negotiations on drafting the bill and then were not allowed to offer any amendments on the floor.

Throughout the day, Republicans blasted the rule the Democrats crafted to control debate on the bill. House Republican leader Robert Michel, of Illinois, charged the Democrats with "craven fear of free debate."

"If Mr. Gorbachev did something like this in the Soviet Union, we would be decrying his dictatorial ways. But we have no glastnost in this House. ... The majority has turned this House into a den of inequity," Michel said in an emotional speech.

It took about half a day for the House to dispose of the $27 billion child-care bill, but Michel thought it merited more consideration. "I long for the old days," Michel said. "When I first came here, we used to take an issue like this and beat up on it for a couple weeks. We stayed around here and did our work."

"Is it a clash of ideas? Sure, it is, and wills and views and expressions. ... What is wrong with having them all discussed ... and eventually coming to some consensus?"

Democrats defended themselves by saying the child-care issue has been kicked around for more than a year and the options and arguments were well known. While it was true that no "Republican amendment" was allowed, it was well known that the amendment offered by conservative Democratic Rep. Charles Stenholm of Texas represented the Republican view and had solid backing from the GOP side.

But the Democrats were heavy-handed, owing in part to the fact that they could not get their own act together until the last minute. There were serious divisions on the Democratic side over the provisions of the child-care bill and plans to schedule a floor vote repeatedly slipped as more negotiations were required. All the while, the Republicans were warning that when the Democrats came up with a final version of the bill the GOP should have a few days to look at it. Instead, they had about one day.

Probably these recent squabbles were to be expected no matter who is speaker. Hopefully, they will not lead to all-out war in the House. But it is a fact of life that the majority party rules and Republicans are not ever going to be happy in the minority role.

MOSCOW (APRIL 2) UPI - Lithuania's parliament convened Monday under mounting pressure to give in to Mikhail Gorbachev's demand to rescind the republic's declaration of independence or face grave consequences.

The 141-member Supreme Soviet, Lithuania's parliament, began deliberating Gorbachev's demand at 3 p.m. in a session expected to last into the evening. The parliament building is in the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius.

Sunday, the Soviet army brought armored reinforcements to Vilnius, unloading the armored carriers at the railhead, according to Swedish and Danish television.

The military also sent four armored vehicles cruising through the center of Vilnius and past parliament Sunday while the parliament's presidium, or executive arm, met inside, Swedish and Danish television said.

Last weekend, the Soviet army sent an armored column of more than 100 vehicles, including some tanks, roaring past Parliament in a show of strength.

Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis, who was given a virtual ultimatum Saturday to annul the unilateral declaration of independence of March 11 or remain isolated, indicated the pressure was growing for Lithuania to back down.

In twin appeals to the Lithuanian Parliament and the Lithuanian people, Gorbachev urged the lawmakers to rescind the declaration of independence as a condition for talks with Moscow. Failure to retract the declaration would bring ''grave consequences,'' he warned.

Speaking Sunday on Lithuanian television, Landsbergis said the Lithuanian Parliament would consider Gorbachev's appeal Monday and Tuesday in what promises to be a dramatic session with the tiny republic suddenly driven into a corner.

''It cannot be now demanded that we annul everything we bore in our hearts '' said Landsbergis, who founded Lithuania's Sajudis independence movement two years ago and then became the republic's president in March.

Gorbachev, in his appeal to the Lithuanian people, laid out what he said was acceptable for negotiating with Moscow.

''I am addressing you at a difficult time for our country,'' Gorbachev said. ''The March 11 decisions of the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet have brought us to a difficult point.''

''If the voice of reason is not heeded now, developments can have grave consequences for all of us,'' he said. ''We must be united in striving to prevent this.

''I have appealed to the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet, proposing that it immediately annul the illegal acts it has adopted,'' he said. ''This will open a possibility for discussing the entire range of problems on the solely acceptable basis - within the framework of the U.S.S.R. Constitution.''

Gorbachev reiterated that the independence act was ruled illegal March 15 by a resolution of the Congress of People's Deputies, the Soviet Union's supreme legislative organ.

Other resolutions and acts adopted by the Lithuanian Parliament have said the laws of the Soviet Union have no force on Lithuanian territory.

''I would like to state once again that this path is ruinous and will lead only to a dead end,'' Gorbachev said.

The appeal was carried by the official Tass news agency and designated ''urgent'' and then read to the entire nation on the TV evening news show, ''Vremya.''

The statements represented the first definitive outline of Gorbachev's basis for a dialogue with the Lithuanians about their desire to leave the Soviet Union to which they were annexed in 1940, along with Estonia and Latvia, in a secret pact between Soviet dictator Josef Stalin and German despot Adolf Hitler.

Since the declaration by Lithuania's Supreme Soviet, Gorbachev has refused to negotiate with Lithuania, saying Moscow negotiates only with foreign states.

HONG KONG (APRIL 2) UPI - More than half Hong Kong's multinational corporations are considering shifting their regional headquarters from the troubled British colony and Singapore heads the list of alternatives, a survey said Monday.

Some 62 percent of the 50 firms polled by Business International said they would decide whether to relocate within two or three years. More than 32 percent said chronic staff shortages and turnovers were major operating problems and would affect their decison.

Hong Kong reverts to China in 1997, at the expiration of Britain's 99-year lease on the prosperous colony.

Beijing's military crackdown on mainland pro-democracy demonstrators in June stoked an already burgeoning confidence crisis among Hong Kong's 5.8 million residents.

About 1,000 people - mostly middle-class professionals - leave Hong Kong each week and companies have had to offer higher salaries and better benefits to attract the dwindling supply of skilled workers.

''What this survey shows is that June 4th has been a catalyst,'' said William Henderson, senior vice president at Business International. ''Those companies that were not considering moving before June are now closely watching their competitors and seriously comtemplating moving their headquarters.''

More than 53 percent of corporations polled said they were considering alternative sights for their regional headquarters. More than half of those said if they did move they would probably switch to Singapore.

Henderson said many firms were also considering scaling down their Hong Kong office and working with separate divisions throughout the region instead of one Asian headquarters.

''Most of these companies (in the survey) are manufacturing or high-tech firms,'' said Mark Michelson, director of Client Services at Business International. ''Almost all of them are Fortune 100 corporations.''

About 30 percent of the firms said they were being squezed by rocketing rents in the colony and Michelson said bargain rates for prime office space was one reason firms would migrate to Singapore.

''We've been told by one company that moved from Hong Kong to Singapore that it was able to recoup almost all the money it spent on the move in one year,'' Michelson said.

Henderson said prime office space in Singapore was less than half the cost of such space in Hong Kong.

Business International's survey echoes the findings of two other recent studies.

A poll, by Asian Business magazine, said nearly half of the executives it questioned were more pessimistic about Hong Kong's economy than they were six months ago.

Some 75 percent of the respondents said a controversial British plan to grant up to 225,000 Hong Kong people full British citzenship ahead of 1997 would fail to stop the tens of thousands of people emigrating from the colony.

Political and Economic Risk Consultancy said in a report that uncertanties over Beijing's intentions for post-1997 Hong Kong would drive both many of the colony's companies and skilled workers to Singapore.

BUFFALO, NY (APRIL 2) UPI - County officials worked out a tentative pact Monday to restore bus and train service but the transit authority declined to vote on the plan, leaving the transit system in New York's second-largest city closed a second day for lack of cash.

Some 135,000 commuters, including 11,000 high school students, had to make other arrangements to get to work Monday. Traffic was reported to be heavier than usual, but police said there were no serious problems.

Despite an all-night meeting, the commissioners of the Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority failed to act on a tentative agreement that would have restored bus and train service to the Buffalo area.

The plan, devised by Erie County legislators, would have steered county tax money to the beleaguered transit system, which was forced to shut down Sunday. The agreement called for the authority to get money through various means, including a percentage of the county sales tax and a real estate transfer tax.

Authority commissioners, however, said the four-year deal would not provide enough funding and would force the NFTA to make a 20 percent cut in bus and rapid transit service, increase the basic $1 fare by 10 cents and force the lay off of about 125 workers.

Erie County Legislator Steven Pigeon urged the commissioners to approve the agreement, which he admitted was ''half a loaf.''

''The simple logic is when the patient is dying on the table and you have to amputate a leg to save the patient, you amputate a leg and let the patient live,'' Pigeon said.

The commissioners decided to recess to see if additional funding could be obtained.

The closing of the transit system, threatened three times in the past six months by the NFTA before Erie County came forward with about $8 million in emergency funding, was finalized at an 11th-hour meeting of the authority's board of commissioners Saturday night.

The board rejected a plan under which it would have borrowed $1 million from a self-insurance fund, and the county would have forwarded $2.1 million in emergency funding.

The course for the shutdown actually was set late last week when the Erie County Legislature, unable to get the necessary votes, failed to act on a utility tax proposal that would have provided a dedicated source of funding for the NFTA.

Regular transit riders scurried for alternate means for travel and some, like Tequita Craig, a nurse's aide at Millard Fillmore Hospital, went out and fixed an old car so she could get to and from work.

''My sister-in-law has this old junky piece of car and said we could use it if we could find out what's wrong with it,'' Craig said. ''We dished out $70 for a new battery.''

Others used pedal-power as a means of getting around.

''I guess the idea of using bicycles to get around may have a lot of impetus now that the buses and trains stopped running,'' said Anne Strasburger, spokeswoman for the bikers group Bicyclists Intent on Kinder Environment.

The Buffalo Teachers Federation, the union representing the city's public school teachers, said it will seek a show cause order to get the transit system back in operation.

Union president Philip Rumore said the BTF would seek a federal order to end the shutdown on the basis the bus system is critical in the city's court-ordered school desegregation program.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Transit and municipal officials in Buffalo have failed to come up with a solution to re-start the city's stalled public transportation system. The Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority shut down the system yesterday. Officials had hoped to have trains and buses running for this morning's rush hour.

More than 11-thousand employees at the seven Kaiser Permanente hospitals in Southern California have walked off their jobs. The action follows Friday's rejection by workers of a proposed three-year pact that would have lifted wages five-to-six percent the first year and three-to-five percent in each of the next two years.

The Tokyo stock market continued its downward spiral today, posting its second-worst decline ever. The slide was prompted by investors trying to dump stocks and cut losses for the start of Japan's fiscal year. The poor showing in Japan comes as the U-S dollar regains its footing against the yen.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - The Supreme Court refused Monday to enter a dispute between automakers and crash victims and their families who say manufacturers should be held liable for failing to equip vehicles with airbags.

The justices, without comment, rejected appeals from five families who have sought liability damages from automakers under state laws in California, Massachusetts, New Mexico and Florida.

At issue was whether federal vehicle safety regulations - which give automakers a choice between installing safety belts or airbags - trump state laws that allow liability claims against manufacturers for defective design.

In each of the cases, the injured victims or the families of deceased victims sued automakers based on claims that the vehicles were defectively designed because they failed to install airbags.

General Motors Corp., American Honda Motor Co. and Nissan Motor Corp. were named as defendants in the suits.

The automakers argued the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act of 1966 pre-empts common law passive restraint claims against manufacturers who comply with minimum standards of the regulations but do not install the airbags.

Crash victims and their families have not fared well in attempts to recover damages over the absence of airbags in passenger vehicles.

The federal government opposes mandatory installation of the devices and filed a friend-of-the-court brief in the cases, arguing against high court review.

The federal circuits have ruled consistently in favor of automakers, and the Supreme Court declined last term to hear a similar appeal regarding airbags from a Minnesota crash victim.

In Massachusetts, the parents of Patricia Wood filed suit against General Motors after she was rendered a quadriplegic from a 1981 crash in a 1976 Blazer.

In New Mexico, Pauline Kitts filed suit against General Motors for the wrongful death of her husband, Willard, who was killed in a new 1982 Pontiac J2000.

In Florida, Emma Taylor filed suit against General Motors for the death of Charles Taylor, who was killed while driving a 1980 Chevrolet, and the family of Paula Evans sued Honda following her death from a crash involving her 1977 Accord.

In California, Paula Meier sued Nissan Motor Corp. for the death of James Meier, who died in a 1986 crash involving his 1982 Nissan Stanza.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - The Supreme Court let stand Monday a Maryland court ruling that a formal court hearing is not required to revoke the license of a day care facility charged with child abuse.

The court refused to hear a case brought by Deborah Cassilly, owner and operator of the Baltimore area Bo Peep Day Nursery, seeking review of Maryland court rulings.

At issue was whether administrative hearings conducted by Maryland officials were adaquate to protect the woman's rights or whether the matter should have gone before a judge.

The Harford County Health Department in July 1987 suspended the license of the nursery following allegations of child abuse and the license was eventually permanently revoked.

Cassilly fought the revocation through the health department hearing process and sought an order to compel the children to be examined by a health professional chosen by her.

The request was denied and the license revoked.

Cassilly appealed the case to county courts and the state's highest court, the Court of Appeals of Maryland, eventually held Cassilly's constitutional rights were not violated.

Seeking Supreme Court review, Cassilly said the ''Maryland Court of Appeals has upheld revocation of (her) day care license - and the consequent loss of her reputation, her business and her livelihood - where the hearing examiner's decision was founded upon out-of-hearing statements that were not recorded, that in many cases were made only after extensive questioning of the child, and that in most cases were made to parents who had been recently alerted by the state ... that Bo Peep Nursery was under investigation, or were made to professionals alerted by parents or other professionals regarding the possibility of sexual abuse.''

(APRIL 2) UPI - South African state radio says 143 people were killed last night when a bus collided with a truck outside the provincial capital of the Orange Free State. The bloody crash left a number of people critically injured. The accident is the second major weekend road accident in South Africa. 13 people were killed Sunday morning when a car slammed into a crowd of pedestrians near Port Elizabeth.

U-S District Judge Harold Greene is scheduled today to instruct the jury deciding the fate of John Poindexter. The 12-person panel is set to begin deliberations today on the five felony Iran-Contra-based counts against the former senior Reagan White House aid. Poindexter's lawyers did NOT have him take the stand during the trial.

A Purdue University researcher says that by feeding hens a drug used to reduce cholesterol in humans, he has caused the hens to lay eggs that have less artery-clogging fats. Professor Robert Elkin says his findings have little practical value since the drug he used is expensive and the cholesterol reduction too small to affect human health.

The semi-official China News Service says fierce thunderstorms packing strong winds have left 17 people dead and another 20 seriously injured. The severe weather occurred during the weekend in one of China's least developed areas, which borders Vietnam.

NEW YORK (APRIL 2) UPI - The U.S. economy continued to slow down in March but at a steadier pace than in the past 10 months, the National Association of Purchasing Management reported Monday.

The Purchasing Managers' Index stood at 48.8 percent last month, a better reading than theh 48.3 percent in February. The Index was back to its June 1989 level.

A reading below 50 generally indicates the manufacturing segment of the economy is experiencing a decline in growth. A reading above 50 usually indicates that the manufacturing portion of the economy is expanding.

''The rise in the Purchasing Managers' Index in March is a continuation of the gradual increase every month since November 1989, with the exception of January 1990, and may be signaling a leveling-off in the 11-month decline in the economy,'' said Robert J. Bretz, chairman of the group of purchasing executives and director of materials management at Pitney Bowes Inc.

The Index last dropped below a reading of 50 in May 1989, when it stood at 49.8 percent.

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND (APRIL 2) UPI - The European Community presented the Uruguay Round trade liberalization talks Monday with the first comprehensive proposed text for protection of intellectual property such as patents and copyright.

Delegates from the developing countries complained the text was discriminatory because it would create too many obstacles to access by the Third World to modern technology. The charge was denied by EC patents expert Peter Mogens-Carl who told reporters the proposal was the minimum the community could accept.

Other participants including the United States were to present their own texts on protection of intellectual property rights, said officials of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the forum for the Uruguay Round. The 100-nation negotiations were launched at a 1986 meeting at Punta del Este, Uruguay, are are scheduled to be concluded in December this year.

There are serious problems on farm and industrial trade between the United States, EC and Japan, however, as well as between the affluent North and the poor South.

Western countries insist on strict protection of intellectual property to prevent the manufacture of stolen or counterfeit products such as pharmaceuticals.

"But we now have little more than half a year left to negotiate complex legal matters that have been debated for years in other organizations," one GATT official said.

The EC draft agreement in the trademark, patent and copyright sector was unlikely to be adopted as a basic negotiating document because other participants are expected to present their own texts, the official said.

Basically reflecting demands of industrial nation lobbies, the EC text would among other things provide a minimum ten years protection on technical goods such as semiconductors and 50 years protection for copyrights. GATT member countries would agree under the EC proposal to institute criminal proceedings in cases of serious infringements.

DETROIT (APRIL 2) UPI - It's time again to pay homage to the millions of motorists who must press their cars into another season of service. And with the average car now costing $15,700, it may not be a bad idea to read on.

While the first step in any spring spruce-up is to make a complete check of the mechanicals, getting your car's body in shape is just as important, especially after a season of salt served up by your local highway department.

Even if your car is new, the warming weather means it's time to brush off the salt and winter grime.

First head for a professional car wash or one of those self-spray stalls. They have the right equipment to properly pressure-clean a car's underbody where salt and dirt accumulate to eventually cause rust.

A professional car wash also uses about 30 gallons of water, vs. over 140 gallons used during a typical garden hose wash, says the International Car Wash Association, of Lombard, Ill. A hose is also less effective in this case.

Those interested in a complete professional cleaning may want to check their car into one of those "auto detailing" shops that have sprung up across the country. There, for $100 to $150, one gets a complete cleaning and polishing that includes the engine, interior, and trunk.

One such shop is First Place Auto Detailing, in Holbrook, N.Y. Owners Paul and Rose Mary Fardella entered the "auto spa" business 18 months ago, and have since moved from a small two-garage to a new facility that holds a dozen cars.

The Fardellas "detail" five or six cars a day at their Long Island shop that is open six days a week, 12 hours a day. The bulk of their business comes from used car dealers and owners of antique and exotic cars. But 30 percent of their clients are those who bring their family cars in on a regular basis.

"We do a lot of station wagons, and a lot of cars of older people who can't take care of them anymore," said Paul Fardella. "We also get owners who can never get a shine out of their cars, like mid-1980s General Motors cars with metallic paints."

The Fardellas' routine, which lasts three to five hours, may be helpful to do-it-yourselfers, although one should note that commercial cleaners often outperform those sold at auto parts stores.

It starts with a quick rinse to gauge the condition of the finish. A fine polishing compound is then applied to remove a thin layer of dulled paint before applying a glaze that contains oils to replenish the paint pigment.

"We then thoroughly degrease and wash the engine, wheels and tires, and pressure wash all wheel openings," Fardella said. "All the door and trunk jambs are degreased, even behind the hinges."

The car is again rinsed to remove all grit, and washed with a soft soap like Palmolive applied with a wash mitt. Long, length-wise motions are preferred over circular ones that can cause swirl marks.

"We then towel-dry the car and blow out all the crevices and window moldings with compressed air because those places trap dirt and cause rust " Fardella said, adding that "Japanese cars hold water everywhere."

The interior is Rose Mary's department. The carpets and seats are thoroughly vacuumed before a sudsy interior cleaner is worked into every fold. One trick of the trade, she said, is to use a diluted motor degreaser to clean smokey interiors or get stubborn stains out.

"We then vacuum the interior again to get all the suds out, and cover the seats with plastic so we don't get wet," she said. "We apply a silicone dressing to the dashboard, and use a toothbrush or small screwdriver in a rag to clean all controls and vents."

Next a liquid is sprayed on the carpet that eats up bacteria. "This gets rid of the smell instead of covering it up." By now the car is getting waxed. Choosing between a paste or liquid formula is not as critical as choosing a good brand, said Paul.

Like the compound and glaze, Fardella uses an electric polisher to apply the wax. Spending $100 for a good orbital polisher is a sound investment for those who own more than one car, he said. They give superior shines without leaving marks if used correctly and often enough.

"About 95 percent of our cars are done with an orbital polisher," Fardella said. "We do most black or darker cars by hand because those colors show every little mark from the machine."

The final step is to remove the excess wax from the grillework or nameplate with a fine toothbrush - and then inspect the vehicle once again. New cars with clear finishes over their colors may just need a wax, not a cleaner-wax that removes a thin film of oxidized paint. But Fardella warns that while clear finishes are more durable, they are tricky to maintain by the average person - and a lot harder to restore once neglected. "That's why I'm in business," he said.

Analysis By: Jack Lesar

(APRIL 2) UPI - If it is possible to achieve overkill in automated communications, Software Ventures has done it with the long-awaited new release of Microphone II.

Microphone II is the best-selling communications package for Macintosh computers, and the new Version 3.0 is brimming with additional features and gadgetry including a text editor, extensive printer-output controls and expanded scripting ability.

But the new program mingles design ingenuity with bothersome, though minor, bugs. Microphone II frequently refused to open after communications sessions during which other communications programs (MacTerm and White Knight) were used - even when the other programs were no longer in memory. Microphone II could be opened only after the computer was restarted.

It sometimes refused to start even when no other communications program had accessed the modem before the attempt was made to open MicroPhone. Other times, Microphone - operating off line under MultiFinder on a Macintosh IIcx - quit without warning. But the program has some attractive features.

Microphone offers superior control over printer output. You can set margins and select printer fonts and type-sizes while on line. Microphone offers 17 fonts and type-sizes from nine points to 24 points for on-line printer output.

And MicroEditor, a text-editing desk accessory available from the Apple menu when the Microphone is active, is an excellent idea and valuable tool though a tad glitch-prone.

I found it difficult to select text for cutting and pasting in MicroEditor. It often took several tries. Positioning the cursor sometimes also was difficult, perhaps because of MicroEditor's nine-point screen font.

While I was writing a brief item in MicroEditor the accessory died, and took the computer with it, leaving the screen hopelessly locked. The only recourse was to shut down using the main power switch, trashing the work done, and power up again.

But even with the occasional glitches, MicroEditor is infinitely more friendly - and faster - than the arcane on-line editors of many networks. MicroEditor can handle files of up to 32K and will be especially valuable to users who can't run MultiFinder - and consequently cannont access their word processors while on line.

Microphone II also features a buffered keyboard for editing short messages and a message box that allows users to create, read and edit files of up to 30K while a script is running. Enhanced scripting features allow users to create scripts to automate any or all elements of communications with other remote computers.

The package includes Dialoger, which is a HyperCard stack that allows users to lay out dialog boxes complete with pop-up menus, scrolling lists, color graphics and icons. Once created, the dialog boxes can be integrated into a MicroPhone II script.

MicroPhone II offers XMODEM, YMODEM, YMODEM-G, ZMODEM and Kermit file transfer protocols, and also supports HyperCard external commands (XCMDs) and functions (XFCNs). One of the XCMDs included is the QuickB file-transfer protocol for the CompuServe Information Service.

The program provides customized scripts for CompuServe, Genie, MCI Mail, Delphi, Bix, EasyLink, Dow Jones and The Well networks. Just enter your account number, password, and access phone number. The script does the rest. The problem is each network is accessed through a different settings file in the MicroPhone folder. That creates a good deal of clutter.

The scripting feature can be used to allow access to multiple services and remote computers though a single settings file, and it can be accomplished relatively simply. But the documentation, which focuses on the one service-one settings file philosophy, provides inadequate guidance. I learned how to do it from the technicians at Software Ventures' technical support line whom I found both courteous and quite knowledgeable.

Ultimately, Microphone II's greatest strength, its raft of features, is its greatest flaw. There is just too much: four disks, three manuals and a host of esoteric features like separate character sets for British, French, French Canadian, German, Italian, Norwegian-Danish, Spanish, Swedish, and Swiss. It seems too cumbersome and too cluttered, not to mention too buggy and too expensive.

Microphone II retails for $295. White Knight by Freesoft, priced at $139, does almost everything the new version of Microphone II does, with the exception of foreign character sets, the on-line text editor and the fancy printer support. And when it gets down to basics, White Knight does it better.

DETROIT (APRIL 2) UPI - Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca is urging nearly 100 top company managers to buy Chrysler stock in order to give them more of a direct personal stake in the automaker's fortunes.

Chrysler spokesman Tom Houston said Monday the executives were being asked to spend up to a ''certain percentage'' of their salary on shares in the No. 3 automaker. He declined to name that percentage.

Automotive News, a trade publication, called the program unprecedented in the auto industry.

''The theory essentially is that, as a matter of company policy, you like to have top people in the company have an even more vested interest in the performance of the company and its future,'' Houston said.

He said the program was ''generated by the idea that a guy who owns a piece of the business is likely to work harder at it than someone who doesn't own a piece of the business.''

While the move follows a significant drop in the value of Chrysler stock -

37 percent from its 52-week high according to Automotive News - Houston insisted the two developments are not connected.

Last July, in another accountability move, 2,000 top executives were asked to put up to 10 percent of their salary into escrow as part of a 15-month, $1 billion cost-cutting program. Participants will receive half, none or double the amount escrowed, depending on how well Chrysler does in meeting the cost-slashing goal.

In a proxy statement filed last April, Chrysler said its directors and officers owned .23 percent of the common shares outstanding at that time.

Houston said that group includes some 25 vice presidents also involved in the stock purchase initiative.

He said he did not know whether the stock ownership figure was high or low by industry standards.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - The Supreme Court took up again Monday the issue of multimillion-dollar jury verdicts in a case that could lead to limits on damages intended to punish wrongdoers.

At issue is whether punitive damages, meant to punish and deter a wrongdoer, violate the due process clause of the Constitution.

The issue is one that has vexed the legal system since the 1970s and has led to calls for reform from a variety of sectors faced with ever higher jury awards, such as companies found guilty in defective product suits.

In recent years, the court has granted review in three cases dealing with the issue, but has been unable to settle it.

Last year, the court said such jury awards were not prohibited by the Eighth Amendment provision against excessive fines. It left open, however, the possibility that excessive fines could violate another section of the Constitution - the due process clause of the 14th Amendment.

The case before the court, which will be heard in the fall, stems from an insurance fraud scheme in Roosevelt City, Ala., a small rural community.

City employees bought life and health insurance in group policies from Lemmie Ruffin, an employee of Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Co. Pacific Mutual does not issue group health policies for municipalities, so Ruffin secured health insurance through Union Fidelity.

But health insurance paycheck deductions of Roosevelt City employees never went to any insurance company because, according to a court brief, ''Ruffin pocketed the money.''

The scheme finally unravelled when Cleopatra Haslip was hospitalized for kidney treatment and discovered she had no health insurance and bills of more than $3,800, more than half her annual take home pay. She was sued and became the target of collection agencies.

Haslip and other city employees who had similar problems sued Pacific Mutual in May 1982, seeking damages on a variety of grounds.

A jury eventually found Pacific Mutual liable for the acts of its employee Ruffin, and awarded city employees more than $1 million in damages.

Seeking high court review, Pacific Mutual said that as shown by the award in this case, ''Juries and reviewing trial and appellate courts have free and untrammelled discretion regarding whether and how much to punish.''

Lawyers for the city workers argued against review and noted that it is unclear which, if any, portion of the verdict was for punitive damages. They said the amounts ''in excess of out-of-pocket losses may well represent compensation for mental anguish,'' rather than punitive damages.

In other action, the court:

-Refused to enter a dispute between automakers and crash victims who say manufacturers should be held liable for failing to equip vehicles with airbags. The justices rejected appeals from five families who have sought damages in California, Massachusetts, New Mexico and Florida.

-Let stand a Maryland court ruling that a formal court hearing is not required to revoke the license of a day care facility charged with child abuse.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Officials in Buffalo, New York, say the money crisis that idled buses and trains may be over. In return, taxes probably will be going up. Erie County legislators worked out a tentative agreement this morning to restore transit service to New York state's second-largest city. The agreement was reached too late to help 135-thousand people reach their destinations this morning.

The early returns are in from voting by the unionized pilots at Eastern Airlines. Returns indicate that the pilots have approved an agreement calling for 25-percent cuts in pay from the bankrupt airline. The Eastern agreement also calls for reductions in the company's payments to the pilots' pension plan and medical benefits, and an increase in the pilots' monthly flying time. The agreement runs until July 1st.

There are reports that about 12 people have been killed in a prison riot in Britain. But the Home Office WON'T comment. Officials have said more than 50 inmates and guards were hurt in skirmishes at the prison in Manchester. Authorities are still trying to regain control over the Victorian-era prison where inmates rioted in protest of jailhouse conditions. A guard at the Strangeways Prison says it looks ''like a bomb site.''

TOKYO (APRIL 2) UPI - Japan's overall plant and equipment investment will remain strong in fiscal 1990 with planned outlays increasing 9.0 percent over a year ago to $144 billion, the Long-Term Credit Bank reported Monday.

The company said the report was based on an annual survey conducted in late February on 1,371 corporations, mainly its customers. It said the survey showed that planned investment by the manufacturing sector grew 11.9 percent to a total of $47.1 billion, a double-digit increase for the third consecutive year, following a 24.1 percent rise in 1989 and 26.9 percent in 1988.

The automobile industry is the leader of investment expansion in the manufacturing sector, thanks to the favorable expansion of domestic demand, the company said. It said the automobile industry increased capital investment, primarily production investment, 35.8 percent over last year to $8.2 billion.

The planned outlays by the electric machinery sector increased 2.6 percent to $10.1 billion while those by 88 major general machinery makers totaled $10.1 billion, up 2.6 percent, the company said. It said investment by 17 major oil refiners will increase 19.9 percent to $2.2 billion.

NEW YORK (APRIL 2) UPI - Eleventh-hour pretrial motions Monday delayed the opening of the case against two of seven white youths charged in the slaying of a black teenager last summer that inflamed racial tensions throughout the city.

Motions for suppression of evidence in state Supreme Court in Brooklyn took up most of the morning, and threatened to put off until Tuesday the beginning of the long process to seat two juries in the trial.

Security was tight for the long-delayed trial for the Aug. 23 slaying of Yusuf Hawkins, 16, who was shot when he went into Brooklyn's predominantly white Bensonhurst district to look at a used car.

The highly publicized case, which triggered protest marches and demonstrations, has seen a series of setbacks for the prosecution, including the defection of a key witness.

Accused triggerman Joseph Fama, 19, and Keith Mondello, 20, described by prosecutors as the ringleader of a group of as many as 30 whites who took part in the attack, both face murder, riot, assault and other charges.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys were to begin selecting two juries to hear the case. Separate panels must hear the case because Mondello made statements to police identifying Fama as the one who pulled the trigger.

Extra security precautions - including metal detectors outside the courtroom and extra court officers - were ordered because of the tensions sparked by the high-profile case, authorities said.

Jury selection was expected to last as long as two weeks and the trial before Justice Thaddeus Owens could run for eight weeks. Five other youths who are charged in the slaying will be tried later.

The prosecution will be supervised by Brooklyn District Attorney Charles Hynes, who as state special prosecutor tried the highly publicized Howard Beach racial slaying case in 1988.

The slaying of Hawkins, who with three black friends had gone to the predominantly white Bensonhurst neighborhood in Brooklyn to look at a used car, sparked a series of rancorous protest marches through the area.

Neighborhood residents lined the streets, waving watermelons and taunting black demonstrators with racial epithets.

Hawkins was gunned down after he and his friends were surrounded by the whites - armed with baseball bats and at least one gun - who apparently thought the black teens were part of a group of blacks and Hispanics with whom they had argued earlier.

Prosecutors believe the whites were angry at Gina Feliciano, an 18-year-old who lived nearby and was having a birthday party that night, because they felt she had brought the blacks and Hispanics into the neighborhood.

Defense attorneys deny the incident was racially motivated and, while they acknowledge their clients were present, insist they are not guilty of murder.

Both Fama and Mondello are charged with two counts of second-degree murder one count each of riot and assault, three counts of unlawful imprisonment four counts each of menacing, aggravated harassment and discrimination.

Fama is charged with two counts of weapons possession for allegedly possessing the gun used to kill Hawkins and Mondello is charged with one count of weapons possession for allegedly having a bat during the attack.

The prosecution case, which was begun under former Brooklyn District Attorney Elizabeth Holtzman and was inherited by Hynes, has suffered several setbacks, including the loss of their key witness, John Vento.

Vento, 21, had admitted taking part in the attack and agreed to testify against his friends, but disappeared around Christmas and reneged on his deal with prosecutors. After he surrendered and refused to testify, he also was charged with murder.

Feliciano, who identified many of the participants in the attack, recently began treatment at Phoenix House for drug addiction. Her credibility had already been questioned because she had told conflicting stories about the attack.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Several-thousand pupils who ride school buses in four districts in Wisconsin may be late for school today. Vandals cut fan belts on 90 school buses parked in the yard of the National School Bus Service company in Muskego. Employees discovered the damage when they arrived this morning. One employee says they will fix what they can and try to get buses from other locations.

Coast Guard officials say they believe a fishing boat reported missing off Martha's Vineyard with a father and son aboard sank a week ago. The final message sent from the boat was dismissed as a hoax when it was heard. The Coast Guard called off its three-day search for the Sol E Mar last night after a review of file tapes indicated that the vessel radioed it was sinking seven days earlier.

A 72-year-old retired teacher is in jail in Brazil, Indiana... charged with murder in connection with the beating death of his 68-year-old brother. Police say while they investigated the slaying, a brother-in-law died of a heart attack in another family fight. Police say the first fight erupted when one of the brothers turned a light on or off while the other was asleep.

Recent cloudbursts brought back a problem eased by South Florida's 20-month-long drought. Veterinarians say the drought temporarily thinned the ranks of a poisonous toad that can kill dogs and cats. But the rains have caused a resurgence in the number of pets poisoned by bofo toads. In humans, the poison can cause minor irritation or illness.

PHILADELPHIA (APRIL 2) UPI - A former armored car guard who fled his post with bags containing $651,000 and eluded police for two years pleaded guilty Monday to federal charges of interstate theft.

Edward Leigh Hunt Jr., 26, of Wilmington, Del., entered his plea before U.S. District Judge Louis Bechtle.

Hunt admitted stealing $651,000 from a Brooks Armored car that was making a delivery in downtown Philadelphia on Jan. 26, 1988.

Prosecutors alleged that Hunt, who had been a guard for the firm for three months, grabbed bags of cash from the back of the truck and fled while two other guards were making a money delivery.

All that was found were Hunt's badge and gun.

Hunt agreed to repay the money and submit to a debriefing and polygraph test a'out his use of the stolen cash, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Frederick G. Herold.

''He claims he gambled it (the money) away, and we want to investigate and verify that,'' Herold said.

Hunt, the son of a prominent Delaware corporate attorney, was not seen or heard from after the crime until this January, when he sent a letter to the Wilmington News Journal in Delaware.

The letter, which the FBI verified as being from Hunt, was postmarked from the Los Angeles area.

Hunt said in the letter he had been living in southern California for the past two years and had gambled away all the proceeds from the robbery.

The University of Delaware graduate also said in the letter that he would surrender to authorities on the second anniversary of the robbery.

On Jan. 26, as promised, Hunt gave himself up to FBI agents in Los Angeles.

Hunt has been held without bail in Philadelphia since his arrest, and Bechtle ordered he remain in prison until his July 17 sentencing. He faces up to 10 years in prison on the charge.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - The Treasury Department said Monday agreement has been reached to provide a short-term $400 million bridge loan for Venezuela as part of a multilateral arrangement.

The United States will contribute $100 million of the loan total as a sign of the government's continued support for economic reforms in Venezuela, the Treasury said.

The Venezuelan economic reform effort is being implemented with the support of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

''This support comes at a time when Venezuela and the commercial banks have recently reached agreement in principle on a medium-term finance and debt reduction package,'' a Treasury statement said.

''We welcome this agreement, which should provide new money as well as the potential for significant debt and debt service reduction in support of Venezuela's strong economic program,'' the statement said.

The Treasury said the bridge loan will be repaid with future disbursements from the IMF and the World Bank.

NAGOYA, Japan (APRIL 2) UPI - Japan's top automaker Toyota Motor Corp. says its car manufacturing project in Turkey has made headway as its application now is being reviewed by the Turkish government.

The Nagoya-based company said Sunday the $250 million project calls for production of 1,600 cc model passenger cars jointly with Haci Omer Sabanci Hold A.S. of Istanbul and Japanese trading company Mitsui and Co.

The application has been submitted by the three partners to the Turkish government for approval, the company said.

''It is expected that the project will have a positive impact on the Turkish economy, both in terms of job creation and by stimulating further growth in Turkey's auto parts industry through technological cooperation '' the company said.

The joint company, to be inaugurated in the middle of 1990, will be owned 50 percent by Sabanci, 40 percent by Toyota and 10 percent by Mitsui.

Haci Omer Sabanci controls a group of 91 companies whose businesses cover diverse areas such as textiles, cement, tires, household appliances, banking and insurance, Toyota said. The group's sales totaled about $3.3 billion in 1988.

KATMANDU, NEPAL (APRIL 2) UPI - Police prevented about 75,000 pro-democracy demonstrators from entering the capital Monday and at least three people died when police fired on protesters west of Katmandu.

In response to burgeoning demands for greater political freedom, King Birendra reshuffled his Cabinet Sunday but the move did little to quell popular discontent.

Hospital and witnesses said three demonstrators were killed and six others wounded when police opened fire late Monday in the town of Kirtipur, 3 miles west of the capital. Hospitals said most of the wounded had chest injuries.

Another protest was reported in Patan, a satellite town about a mile south of Katmandu where police fired on demonstrators late last week, killing two people and wounding 12 others.

The Patan demonstration Monday began after nearly 300 engineers observed a moment of silence in memory of the victims of the pro-democracy movement.

Some of the engineers raised slogans saying, ''Long live the multi-party system'' and ''We want democracy,'' and Patan residents dug deep pits at three entry points of the city to prevent police vehicles from entering the town.

There were no reports of casualties in Patan Monday.

An estimated 75,000 people staged a pro-democracy march near Katmadu but no incidents were reported. Many of the demonstrators, including children and women, were armed with knives, sickles and other weapons and shouted ''We want democracy'' and ''We will retaliate murder with murder.''

They were stopped by police from crossing a bridge connecting Patan with Katmandu.

Residents in the capital switched off their lights for 30 minutes and the city was plunged into darkness in a protest move called by the opposition. In the darkness, the city residents burnt effigies and marched in groups shouting anti-government slogans.

The protests were the latest in a wave of unrest since political parties banned by the absolute monarchy for two decades launched a democracy movement on Feb. 18. Since then, thousands have been arrested and at least 19 shot and killed by police in the Himalayan nation of 19 million.

Supporters of the movement have responded to the underground opposition's call for work stoppages.

A strike by engineers, loaders and support staff at Katmandu International Airport on Monday delayed international and domestic flights for at least two hours.

A Dragon Air flight from Hong Kong had to wait two hours before cargo could be loaded while a Thai International flight from Bangkok landed and passengers had to wait for 30 minutes inside the aircraft before they could disembark.

Nine hospitals in the three cities of Katmandu Valley went on the second day of a strike Monday as medical professionals, including doctors, pressed their demands for the release of nine colleagues seized during the current movement for the restoration of multi-party democracy.

Business and traffic in the valley was also slowed by a general strike called for by the banned Nepali Congress party and seven leftist parties spearheading the democracy movement.

In another show of protest, Kedar Man Byathith, a member of a largely ceremonial but prestigious body of advisers, resigned from his post, saying: ''I condemn the medieval suppression tactics of the government and resign in support of the movement.''

Nepal also faced continuing shortages of fuel and a stranglehold on its imports and exports from an Indian trade boycott which remained unresolved possibly due to India's reluctance to sign a deal with the embattled Nepalese government.

Although King Birendra holds near absolute power in Nepal, protesters have thus far not expressed anger at him, focusing instead on the government he installed.

(APRIL 2) UPI - A tentative deal worked out today to restore bus and train service to Buffalo, New York, came too late for some 135-thousand morning rush-hour commuters. Buffalo's Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority shut down yesterday because of a cash crunch. County officials approved a tentative pact to restore service, but the transit authority declined to vote on the plan, leaving the transit system closed a second day for lack of cash. Traffic was heavier than usual this morning, but police reported NO serious problems.

Pennsylvania officials say water shortages caused by a 30-mile-long fuel spill on the Allegheny River will continue for at least a few more days. Federal officials estimate 200-thousand gallons of fuel flowed from a cracked pipeline Friday night and that nearly half of it spilled into the river. About 11-thousand people in three river towns are doing without running water today.

Swedish and Danish news reports say the Soviet Union sent more troops into Lithuania's capital yesterday, hours before the parliament of the rebellious Baltic republic convened to discuss an ultimatum from Mikhail Gorbachev. The 141-member Supreme Soviet is debating Gorbachev's demand that Lithuania halt its drive for independence. The session is expected to last late into the evening. Soviet armored vehicles cruised through the center of Vilnius yesterday as the parliament leaders met to debate the crisis.

Talks between Kaiser and the Service Employees International Union broke off Saturday night after union members rejected a tentative contract. The proposed contract had been endorsed by union leaders and some six-thousand union members did NOT vote.

DENVER (APRIL 2) UPI - Amdura Corp. announced Monday it is going to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

Amdura executives said they were unsuccessful in their efforts to obtain additional credit from their bank group.

''After a thorough review of our current and future cash requirements and because there were no alternatives, the company concluded that the Chapter 11 filing was necessary at this time to preserve Amdura's assets and provide for our continuing operations,'' President Wayne Waldera said in a news release.

Amdura said its hardlines distribution subsidiaries, including CoastAmerica Corp. and the Amdura National Distribution Co., also would file for Chapter 11 protection.

But Amdura said its manufacturing subsidiaries, the Crosby Group Inc. and the Harris Waste Management Group Inc., will be excluded from the bankruptcy filing. The company decided last October to sell those two subsidiaries to reduce its bank debt, and a definitive agreement to sell Crosby was announced March 7. A definitive agreement to sell Harris has not yet been reached, Amdura said.

Amdura is an independent hardware distributor. It formerly was known as Amhoist and was based in St. Paul, Minn., where it made cranes.

ST. PAUL, MI (APRIL 2) UPI - A shoplifting suspect picked the wrong building to use as a hiding place.

The man fled the downtown Dayton's store Sunday afternoon wearing an extra pair of pants for which he hadn't paid, police said. Two security guards gave chase and, about four blocks away, the man ducked into a building and hid in the bathroom.

Turns out it was the police station.

''He had kind of an astounded look on his face,'' a patrolman said after the arrest.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 2) UPI - A woman digging in her garden uncovered something unexpected: a case of dynamite.

Residents of the Bernal Heights neighborhood were evacuated Sunday while a bomb squad removed the explosive stick by stick, police said.

The case was discovered under a slab of concrete and contained 60 to 100 sticks of ''very unstable'' dynamite estimated to be about 20 years old, officers said.

''It is enough to blow up about two city blocks,'' a police officer said.

It was not known why the dynamite was buried or who buried it, police said.

There was no estimate on the number of people evacuated while the explosive was removed. Members of a bomb squad poured diesel fuel on the dynamite to render it inert and the sticks were removed one at a time and taken to a disposal site.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (APRIL 2) UPI - A powerful remote-controlled car bomb exploded early Monday, killing five soldiers and a civilian and wounding 26, among them a boy on his way to school, a military spokesman said.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the 6:30 a.m. attack in Santa Tecla, 6 miles west of San Salvador, aimed at a troop of police cadets carrying out drill exercises in the street.

The explosion, which the armed forces blamed on rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, comes two days before scheduled U.N.-mediated peace talks are set to begin in Geneva between the government and the rebels.

''This action proves that the terrorists are not to be believed, because they talk about peace and on the other hand make war,'' an armed forces spokesman said.

The remote-controlled bomb was planted in a pickup truck parked outside a spare parts store, the spokesman said. The device was activated when the police cadets passed by, killing five of them and seriously wounding 25.

A civilian, Ernesto Antonio Erazo, also died in the explosion and a boy walking to school was hurt.

Most of the wounded cadets were taken to a military hospital where they were reported in serious condition. Doctors said they feared others could die as a result of their injuries.

Carmen Erazo, the mother of the dead civilian, said her son was on his way to buy bread when the bomb went off.

''It's not right what happened. He was a good boy, and careful not to harm anybody,'' she told United Press International.

The military spokesman said the bomb was the first this year. The rebels announced an end to car-bomb attacks at the beginning of 1989, saying they caused too many civilian victims.

Last Oct. 30, a day before rebels suspended peace talks with the government, two vehicles packed with explosives were directed against military headquarters in the capital, killing a civilian and damaging surrounding buildings.

CHICAGO (APRIL 2) UPI - A young woman, believed to be pregnant, and three of her young children were killed Monday in a fire that roared through their first floor apartment, authorities said.

Detective Phil Boyle said the woman was apparently killed when she tried to put out the fire.

Fire Marshal Michael Cucci said the fire appeared accidental.

''We can't come up a source of ignition,'' Cucci said.

The victims were identified as Lisette Rodriguez, 28, and her children, Jonathon, 6, Iris, 1, and Delilah, 5.

A distraught niece of the woman, Maria DeJesus, 18, said at the scene of the fire that her aunt was pregnant.

A neighbor, Nora Chavez, 40, said she awoke around 4:30 a.m. and saw ''flames coming out windows.''

''I saw them all running around crying,'' she said. ''The smoke was pretty bad too. And I was afraid too that my house was going to catch on fire.''

MIAMI (APRIL 2) UPI - Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark testified

Monday that he had heard death toll estimates of Panamanian citizens in the thousands and seen evidence of mass graves during a visit to Panama following the U.S. invasion to capture strongman Manuel Antonio Noriega.

Ramsey testified before U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler at the request of Noriega's attorneys, who claim that drug-trafficking charges against Noriega should be dropped because the violence committed in the attack was not justified for the arrest of one man.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Pat Sullivan argued that the charges should stand because Noriega's personal rights were not violated. Hoeveler took the arguments under advisement and recessed the hearing. There was no indication on when he would rule.

Clark, who testified for about an hour, said he went to Panama Jan. 4 to 7 at the request of Panamanians and Americans who could not locate missing loved ones following the December invasion.

Clark said that during the trip, he heard varying estimates of death tolls ranging from 4,000 to 7,000 Panamanian citizens, but acknowledged that none of the estimates was documented.

''The most common number of deaths I would hear was 4,000. They were estimates,'' Clark said during the hearing, which Noriega attended in his four-star general uniform. ''The highest that I heard was 7,000. I had estimates of 4,000 from a bishop.''

The estimates came from hospitals, Red Cross and human rights officials and U.S. and Panamanian citizens, said Clark, 62, who is practicing law in Texas.

Clark described touring the Garden of Peace cemetery and finding signs of mass burials. Clark said one 120-foot-by-18-foot section that was newly dugged was used, according to Panamanian citizens, by U.S. soldiers to dump bodies.

''We were told of trucks comming in, the Americans, and bringing body bags '' Clark said. The bags reportedly contained two or three bodies each.

The U.S. government has officially acknowledged that the number of people killed in the invasion included 314 members of the Panamanian Defense Forces, 202 Panamanian civilians, 23 U.S. military men and three U.S. citizens.

But Clark, who was attorney general from 1965 to January 1969, said reports indicated the number of civilian casualties was much more.

''One hospital morgue has processed over 280 dead bodies in the morgue,'' said Clark, who later added that a computer printout indicated that 14,000 homeless were living in a high school converted into a shelter.

Clark stressed that the numbers he cited were undocumented.

''The thing that seemed very clear is that the count will take a long time '' Clark said.

Lead defense attorney Frank Rubino bases his dismissal request on a 1957 federal court ruling, called the Toscanino case, that says justices have the power to bar prosecution in any manner necessary to remedy abuses or to preserve respect for the law.

Dropping the charges is warranted ''as a consequence of the illegal and immoral method by which the government of the United States effectuated the defendant's arrest,'' Rubino said in his motion for dismissal.

''This is the first time to my knowledge the U.S. has invaded and leveled a country to arrest one man,'' Rubino told Hoeveler.

Rubino showed a 13 minute montage of television news clips showing the destruction caused by the U.S. invasion, including bloody bodies, flaming buildings and mangled cars.

Noriega, who was brought to the United States Jan. 3 after surrendering to U.S. agents following the invasion, is charged with 15 others in a 12-count federal indictment returned in February 1988.

Noriega is charged with using his official position as the leader of Panama to foster drug trafficking between Colombia and the United States from 1981 to 1986. If convicted, Noriega would face a maximum of 145 years in prison and a $1.1 million fine.

Noriega also is named as a defendant in a three-count indictment, returned in Tampa and unsealed simultaneously with the Miami indictment, that involves smuggling 1.4 million pounds of marijuana into the United States.

PIETERMARITZBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (APRIL 2) UPI - Nelson Mandela pursued peace missions on two fronts during a tour of strife-torn Natal province Monday, arranging a meeting with President Frederik de Klerk and seeking separate talks with rival Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi.

Mandela said he would see de Klerk Thursday about the weekend suspension of peace talks between the African National Congress and the government but a separate meeting with Buthelezi remained uncertain.

De Klerk later confirmed he would meet with Mandela on the ANC's decision to suspend the talks.

Addressing a joint session of parliament, de Klerk also ordered a high profile deployment of army troops across South Africa Monday to back police in a bid to crush the wave of political unrest and internecine strife.

De Klerk said ''ample additional manpower provided by the defense force is already deploying in'' Natal.

At least 53 people have died in the greater Pietermartizburg area since last Tuesday in a flareup of fighting between ANC-linked movements and Buthelezi's Inkatha organization, which claims a membership of more than 1 million in the Indian Ocean province.

Mandela told more than 2,000 people in an ecumencial center in the Edendale Valley, where the clashes have driven some 13,000 people into refugee centers, he wanted to speak with Buthelezi to tell him, ''We must fight apartheid not each other.''

''We know that many of you have lost loved ones, mothers, sisters and fathers,'' Mandela said. ''We know there is no way they can be brought back. We are here to comfort you.''

''They (Inkatha) must know we are keen to make peace,'' he said. ''One day I hope to have the opportunity to speak directly to them to assure them that we are freedom fighters.

Mandela and Buthelezi had agreed Thursday to appear together at a peace rally Monday in Taylor's Halt, an Inkatha stronghold deep in the Edendale Valley. On Friday, Mandela's aides persuaded him to cancel the rally, citing security concerns.

Also Friday, Mandela informed de Klerk that April 11 talks between his government and the ANC had been suspended to protest the deaths of 11 blacks in police gunfire Tuesday in the township of Sebokeng south of Johannesburg.

The twin developments prompted speculation that the ANC is suffering an internal leadership crisis, with the moderate old guard at odds with young radicals opposed to engaging either the government or Inkatha in negotiations.

On his arrival in the Indian Ocean Port city of Durban Monday, Mandela requested the use of an airport telephone and engaged in a conversation that reporters believed was with Gerrit Viljoen, the government's chief negotiator in the peace talks.

Mandela confirmed following the conversation that he would meet de Klerk Thursday to discuss the suspension.

''I'm certainly looking forward to the meeting,'' said Mandela, who was freed from 27 years imprisonment by de Klerk on Feb. 11 as part of a broader racial reform program aimed at launching power-sharing negotiations between the black majority and the white government.

''He has invited me to see him and I have accepted that,'' Mandela said.

LONDON (APRIL 2) UPI - Stock prices closed broadly lower Monday in moderate trading on the London International stock exchange hammered down in part by the sharp decline in Tokyo and a weaker British pound.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 36.0 points overall last week including 15.1 points Friday, fell 26.3 points to 2,221.6. The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 20.6 points to 1,748.1.

Volume amounted to around 515 million shares, compared with 454 million shares traded Friday.

Analysts said the 6.6 percent plunge on the Tokyo Stock Exchange coupled with weekend violence in London over the new British poll tax, sent prices broadly lower across the board.

The widely unpopular poll tax, officially known as the community charge, is a per-capita tax imposed Sunday in England and Wales to replace property taxes.

In earlier trading in Tokyo, stocks suffered their second-largest one-day decline, losing 6.6 percent of their value amid speculation that Japan's economic boom could be coming to an end.

The key Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues tumbled 1,978.38 points, to 28,002.07. The plunge was second only to the record 3,836.48-point loss in the aftermath of the global crash of October 1987.

Meanwhile on the London Foreign Exchange, the British pound slipped to around $1.6300 from $1.6465 Friday, adding to investor worries over the state of the British economy, analysts said.

On the economic front, a gloomy forecast by the Confederation of British Industries, which suggested that company order books were at their lowest level for four years, also contributed to the selling.

In a separate report, the Central Statistical Office reported Britian's retail sales rose a revised 2.2 percent in February from January and were up 2.5 percent from February 1989.

In its original report, the government agency said retail sales were up 2.4 percent in February.

Among the most widely traded stocks, Inchcape fell 30 cents to $4.22 amid what warket watchers described as disappointing profits.

Carlton Communications lost 12 cents to $8.57 continuing its downward move after a profits warning last week.

The apparently growing unpopularity of the government also weighed heavily on privatization issues such as British Telecom, which lost 14 cents to $4.33, and Water Package, which fell 37 cents to $24.25.

Banks were overshadowed by downgrading by County NatWest. Barclays lost 14 cents to $9.26 and Kleinwort Benson fell 12 cents to $5.76.

Among the day's other highlights, London and Edinburgh Trust jumped 67 cents to $3.47 after a $800-million bid from Swedish Insurance giant SPP.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - Abortion opponents said Monday a planned April 28 rally in Washington will be the largest in the capital's history, with the crowd inflated by Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus's veto of tough anti-abortion legislation.

Variously describing Andrus as ''Flipper'' and ''Judas Andrus,'' officials of National Right to Life Committee said his veto of the bill last Friday ''will serve to galvanize the pro-life movement in unprecedented numbers to Washington April 28.''

''Pro-lifers are certainly betrayed by Governor Andrus's action to refuse to save thousands of lives,'' Dr. John Wilkie, president of the group told a news conference.

The Idaho anti-abortion legislation, which would have banned virtually all abortions in the state, was crafted to create a test case directly challenging the 1973 Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court ruling that guaranteed a woman's right to seek an abortion in the first three months of pregnancy.

Andrus, a Democrat and long-time abortion foe, said he vetoed the bill because it was too restrictive.

But Wilkie charged the governor ''bowed to the hollow threats and pressure tactics of pro-abortion extremists who insist abortion be available as a method of birth control.'' Abortion rights groups had threatened to retaliate if the measure became law, vowing to organize a boycott of Idaho and its products, especially Idaho potatoes.

Andrus's veto also raised suggestions the 17-year-old anti-abortion movement is losing its political clout, a perception hotly denied by Wilkie.

The rally comes as the abortion debate is spilling over into previously untouched areas. Earlier this year the American Bar Association passed its first resolution implicitly backing legal abortion.

Also, the AFL-CIO is considering whether organized labor should take a stand on the bitterly divisive issue.

Wilkie predicted the rally will ''bring hundreds of thousands of pro-life Americans to Washington to celebrate life,'' exceeding the estimated 300,000 who joined an April 1989 abortion rights rally and the 285,000 who attended the 1963 March for Jobs and Freedom where Martin Luther King delivered his ''I have a dream'' speech.

He said the demonstrators' message is that ''the pro-life movement is alive and well and dedicated for life to seeking protection for unborn children.''

The rally will cost at least $1 million, Wilkie said, and was suggested by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., a leading abortion opponment in Congress.

''The pro-life movement is the largest movement in America,'' Wilkie said, disputing reports it is running out of steam. National Right to Life officials said they have won 23 of 32 ''clear-cut'' abortion-related votes in 14 state legisaltures around the country.

Organizers of the rally billed it as a ''celebration, not a confrontation'' and said officials from Operation Rescue, a militant faction that invades and blockades clinics where abortions occur, have not been invited to participate.

LUSAKA, ZAMBIA (APRIL 2) UPI - Nine African National Congress members who escaped from a South African prison while awaiting trial on terrorism and murder charges emerged Monday in Lusaka, saying their dash to freedom had been organized by the ANC's military wing.

Rodney Toka, 27, who acted as leader of the group, told reporters the prisoners made their escape on Feb. 18, a day before a court appearance, using a pistol smuggled into Modderbee Prison near the Johannesburg satellite city of Benoni.

He called the escape a ''great victory'' and said it ''showed the enemy that it is not as strong as it claims to be.''

Toka said the changing political climate in South Africa did not make the escape easier.

''Our escape has nothing to do with the so-called conducive climate,'' he said. ''Even if it was three years ago, we were still going to make it.''

Toka said the escape was organized by the ANC's military wing, Umkhonto we Sizwe (Spear of the Nation), which has waged a limited guerrilla war against minority white rule since 1961.

ANC spokesman Tom Sebina said the nine escapees were ''waiting for futher instructions'' and that it was unknown how long they would remain in Lusaka, the headquarters of the exiled ANC leadership.

The nine men were among 12 alleged ANC members charged with terrorism, murder, attempted murder and property damage in a series of 1988 bombings and shootings in Pretoria and the black township of Atteridgeville.

Eight of the escaped prisoners appeared at the news conference. The ninth, identified as Ernest Ramadite, 25, did not.

ATLANTA (APRIL 2) UPI - Police searched Monday for a sniper who opened fire on a group filming an anti-drug commercial at a crime-infested housing project.

''We are confident that people will come forward in a situtation like this '' said homicide Sgt. Ted Hall. ''We are hoping police can find someone who saw the incident.''

About a dozen members of Brothers Against Drugs were shooting a public service announcement at the McDaniel-Glenn housing project Sunday afternoon when the gunman started firing, Hall said.

The sniper continued firing as the group fled in a van.

''At first we thought they were shooting into the air to scare us because they'd been taunting us since we'd been there, saying things like, 'Leave us alone - we're going to sell drugs whether you're here or not,''' said Morris Bankston, president of BAD.

Bullets grazed the hair of another BAD member before hitting Michael Jones in the neck, police said. Jones, 25, was released from Grady Memorial Hospital Monday after treatment.

Bankston said the group arrived at the location around noon and was finishing a public service announcement about the dangers of drugs when the attacker approached.

The commercial was to feature a BAD member who confronts a group of drug abusers and talks about the stupidity of abusing drugs.

Lt. Danny Agan said a youth was taken into custody for questioning, but was not charged with the shooting.

LONDON (APRIL 2) UPI - Dozens of people were arraigned on public disorder and looting charges Monday and the government set up a 100-member police task force to investigate a weekend anti-tax riot in which scores were hurt and hundreds of stores and cars were damaged.

Home Secretary David Waddington told Parliament that about 3,000 ''troublemakers ... bent on violence'' were among the protesters who marched through London Saturday to protest Britain's new poll tax.

Rioting broke out after the end of the peaceful demonstration, attended by 40,000 according to police and 150,000 according to organizers. Mobs rampaged through central London for several hours, battling police, setting fires, breaking windows, looting stores and overturning cars.

The government said 374 police officers were wounded, with 58 requiring hospital treatment, and 86 civilians were hurt. There were 250 reports of damage to property.

The new community poll tax went into effect Sunday in England and Wales, one year after it was imposed in Scotland. The tax requires local city councils to set a flat sum that must be paid by every resident at least 18 years old, with some exceptions. There have been other riots in previous weeks as local councils set tax rates.

Unlike income tax, or the property tax it replaces, the poll tax does not discriminate according to wealth, which has caused bitter complaints that the richest man in England, the duke of Westminster, pays the same amount as one of his servants.

Waddington said all responsible members of Parliament shared his ''sense of outrage'' over the violence and added he was assigning 100 officers to conduct a major criminal investigation of the riot that will include viewing videotapes of the incident to identify leaders.

A separate investigation by the police commissioner will examine the way police responded to the rioting and determine ''what lessons can be learned,'' he said.

''The right of peaceful demonstration is one which I will always defend,'' Waddington said, ''but the scenes in our capital city on Saturday have nothing whatsoever to do with peaceful demonstration.

''There can be no justification whatsoever for the savage and barbaric acts which millions saw on their television screens, not just in Britain but, sadly,around the world.''

Police and court officials said 68 people who had been jailed since the Saturday night riots were arraigned in courts around London Monday. A total of 339 people were arrested during the riots, but most had been released on bail earlier pending future court appearances.

Four other people faced charges after being arrested during Waddington's tour of the looted area in central London Sunday.

Most of those arraigned Monday were charged with public disorder, looting or burglary, a police spokesman said. Some were released after paying fines equivalent to $162, while those charged with serious assaults faced possible jail sentences.

David Murray, of the All-Britain Anti-Poll Tax Federation, which organized Saturday's rally, said: ''We're not intested in trouble. We're not interested in violence. We are launching a mass campaign of civil disobedience.''

Waddington said some opposition Labor Party members of Parliament may have contributed to the rioting by urging people not to pay the poll tax.

''It really doesn't help if honorable members exhort people to break the law,'' he said.

Labor's deputy leader, Roy Hattersley, said his party considered the violence ''intolerable.''

''All democrats will combine in demanding the routing out of the threat to free society perpetrated by individuals and organizations who were responsible for the disgraceful scenes and conduct in the capital,'' Hattersley said.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Today's People:

KID RADIO: Peter Yarrow of Peter, Paul and Mary has a new project, a 24-hour-a-day radio network for children. The Kids Choice Broadcasting Network, a $4 million undertaking for Yarrow and five partners, started Saturday with its first station, WPRD-AM in Orlando, Fla.

"It's taken over my life right now," Yarrow said. "This has been an area of passion in my life ever since the birth of my kids." Yarrow has produced three television specials for children, but calls TV the bane of parents' existence. "Minds become stymied by television," he said. "In radio, their minds make the pictures."

Yarrow has written and recorded theme songs for each of the programs, plus network jingles. "They're as good, for their purpose, I think, as anything I've done, as good as 'Puff,"' he said. The network's advisers include Marlo Thomas, singer Pete Seeger, children's TV host Fred "Mr." Rogers, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., and Robert Coles, author of the Pulitzer Prize-winning "Children of Crisis" series.

MCCARTNEY ON THE ROAD AGAIN: Paul McCartney's schedule keeps getting busier. Last week in Seattle, the former Beatle opened the third leg of his U.S. tour, which will keep him busy through April before he heads to Rio de Janiero for more concerts.

Then he will take a break and perform at a huge benefit show for Music Therapy back home in England before returning to the United States for a Fourth of July concert in Washington, D.C. From there, he goes to New York, Philadelphia, Montreal, Cleveland, and Boston.

"The tour's on a roll and we're knocked out that the fans are giving us yet another chance to play in North America," McCartney said. "I guess it shows you can't keep a good band down."

NIXON SPEAKS: Richard Nixon has been churning out books in the past few years and now he's done an audio version of his latest work. "In the Arena" will be released in hardback next month and the audio version, on which Nixon reads, is coming out simultaneously.

Simon & Schuster says it's the first time an American president has ever recorded an audio memoir. "Since my eighth book, 'In the Arena,' began as a series of tape-recorded dictations, I am delighted to have this opportunity to record this audio abridgement," Nixon says in the introduction.

Among the topics Nixon discusses in the new book: the night before he resigned the presidency in the Watergate scandal, praying with Henry Kissinger, his mixed feelings about his pardon and Mikhail Gorbachev.

BUFFETT CUTS TIES TO SENATOR: Laid-back singer Jimmy Buffett thought Sen. Bob Graham, R-Fla., looked too formal Saturday at a Capitol Hill meeting with 125 young leaders from Florida.

So Buffett, a friend of the senator who calls himself "the non-conformist in Bob Graham's life," pulled out a pair of scissors and snipped off the tie, which was decorated with small Florida emblems. Buffett also spoke seriously, telling the crowd to get involved in their communities and recalling how Graham had first inspired his work to save the Florida manatee.

GLIMPSES: They're back. Annette Funicello and Frankie Avalon, the clean-cut "Beach Blanket Bingo" lovers, will open their first tour on April 13 at Knott's Berry Farm in Buena Park, Calif.

The show will feature them performing separately and together as well as comedy segments and nostalgic film clips.The tour will take them to about 25 cities, including Annette's hometown, Utica, N.Y.

ATLANTIC CITY, NJ (APRIL 2) UPI - Donald Trump's palatial $1 billion Taj Mahal Casino Resort got off to a rip-roaring start Monday as gambling enthusiasts flocked to what has been called the largest casino in the world.

Gamblers streamed in as soon as the doors opened at 10 a.m. By noon, the 120,000-square-foot casino floor place was packed for a session of ''play money'' gambling, in which bettors exchange real money for play money to use at gaming tables.

Although money fed into the property's 3,000 slot machines will remain with the Taj, funds exchanged for the play money used at the table games will be donated to local charities.

During play money gaming, New Jersey's casino commission and Division of Gaming Enforcement review the Taj's operations until they are satisfied casino personnel can handle ''live'' betting.

Trump, wearing his traditional navy suit and red ''power'' tie, wove his way through the casino several times, accepting congratulations, signing autographs and chatting with employees. He said he was ''very excited'' about the opening.

''It's Monday morning and it's raining and I don't think there is an empty slot machine to be had,'' Trump said.

He also got in a dig at arch rival Steve Wynn, who recently opened an opulent casino in Las Vegas, Nev., called the Mirage. Everyone has told him that ''the Mirage is nothing by comparison to the Taj,'' Trump said.

Anthony Parillo, director of the Division of Gaming Enforcement, said by noon there had beem no glitches.

''There is one huge crowd here,'' Parillo said. ''It's putting a strain on the system, but I think they are going to come through it very well.''

The Taj, which features colorful minarets and spires and $14 million worth of chandeliers, sports a casino said to be the largest gaming hall in the world and 12 restaurants. At 42 stories, the Taj is also New Jersey's tallest building.

''I think it's fantastic,'' said Angelina Wescott, who took off from her job to come to the opening. ''It's beautiful. That guy must have spent a fortune on this place.''

The Casino Control Commission voted unanimously last week to grant Trump a license to operate his third Atlantic City casino. The New York developer also owns Trump Plaza and Trump Castle.

Industry analysts have said that Trump will have to rake in more than $1 million a day from gamblers to make the 1,250-room Taj a success. Trump floated $675 million in junk bonds to build the extravagant Boardwalk casino and must come up with $94 million a year to pay debt service.

Taj officials hope to get all regulatory approvals by Thursday, when the official opening is to take place.

Resorts International Inc., Atlantic City's first gaming company, began construction on the Taj in 1983. Planning for the mammoth facility actually began in 1976, but work was halted several times over the years as a result offinancial problems.

Trump won the Taj from entertainer Merv Griffin in November 1988 after the two engaged in a bitter battle for control of Resorts.

They finally agreed to split the gaming company, with Trump getting the Taj and Griffin getting the existing Resorts International Casino Hotel nearby as well as a casino in the Bahamas.

ORLANDO, FL (APRIL 2) UPI - Fumes from a leaking hydraulic system sickened 16 passengers on an American Airlines jet, which was forced to return twice to Orlando International Airport, the airline said Monday.

No one on the first flight was injured but at least 16 people on the second flight were slightly injured by the fumes, which leaked from a left-side hydraulic system Sunday on the McDonnell Douglas Super 80, said American spokesman Ed Stewart in Fort Worth, Texas.

''The mechanics on the ground thought they had corrected the fume problem, but they apparently hadn't,'' Stewart said.

Five passengers were treated and released at Sand Lake Hospital; two were treated and released at Orlando General Hospital, and at least nine others were treated at the scene, Stewart said.

American Flight 487, from Orlando to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, took off about 8:30 a.m. Sunday but returned about 20 minutes later because of the fumes, Stewart said.

''That leak apparently was getting into the air conditioning system, which was apparently creating the fume problem,'' he said.

''That particular plane has several hydraulic systems, so there was never any real danger of the aircraft being in serious trouble, but the fumes were, indeed, a problem,'' Stewart said.

Mechanics tried to repair the problem, but the fumes returned about 5 p.m. as the same plane began taxiing to the runway as Flight 1341, bound, also, for Dallas-Fort Worth, he said.

There were 142 passengers and a crew of six were aboard Flight 1341. None of those injured was a crew member, Stewart said.

About 40 passengers from Flight 1341 were placed on other flights Sunday evening, but the remainder were put up in hotels overnight and flew out Monday morning, Stewart said.

(APRIL 2) UPI - President Bush today urged broadcasters to ''stand for freedom'' by supporting government-sponsored T-V Marti to Cuba in the face of a brewing battle of the airwaves. In a speech to the National Association of Broadcasters convention in Atlanta, Bush declared that ''America must NEVER lose its voice'' for freedom.

MONTREAL (APRIL 2) UPI - Painful political and economic reforms underway in much of Latin America and the Caribbean offer the best bet for putting the region back on its feet, the president of the Inter-American Development Bank said Monday.

Enrique Iglesias, who heads the 33-year-old lending institution, told the opening session of the bank's annual meeting in Montreal that reforms sweeping countries such as Mexico and Venezuela will help improve the region's credibility and encourage the return of capital and private investment from abroad.

Iglesias characterized the 1980s as a ''lost decade,'' in which the region's economy grew by only 1.3 percent a year and external debt reached $434 billion.

At the same time, however, democracy was restored to a number of countries and there have been impressive attempts to stabilize economies, particularly in Bolivia, Chile, Costa Rica and Ecuador as well as in Mexico and Venezuela, Iglesias added.

The IDB's meeting is taking place in an atmosphere of uncertainty, as some of its poorest member countries fear Eastern Europe, where the move to democracy and economic reform is happening at a faster rate, will deprive them of development funds.

However, World Bank President Barber Conable assured IDB members that the institution's increased presence in Eastern Europe would not shortchange Latin America and the Caribbean or the rest of the developing world. ''We have a global responsibility which we will not abdicate,'' Conable said.

However, Conable said Eastern Europe was a ''powerful lure'' to private foreign investors. As a result, Latin America and the Caribbean will have to create an attractive business environment, he added.

Among positive examples in the region, he cited Mexico, where non-oil exports have tripled since 1982, and Chile, whose economy is growing at 8 percent amid lower inflation and a return of private investment.

However, Conable warned economic growth could not be sustained unless countries in the region maintain and improve their infrastructures. The World Bank has estimated the cost of rehabilitating roads and power and sewer systems in the region at $25 billion to $30 billion a year.

There has also been a deterioration in social services in the region, including declining school enrollment and increases in infant mortality rates and deaths from malnutrition, according to Conable.

These conditions will worsen without greater investment in social services he warned, as regional population soars to an expected 525 million by the year 2000.

Joe Clark, the Canadian external affairs minister who was elected chairman of the IDB's Board of Governors Monday, said the IDB faces its greatest challenges in the next decade.

Clark noted the trend toward democracy and more open markets but said the region's external debt and high interest rates left countries little room to maneuver.

Clark's superior, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, citing free-trade negotiations underway between the United States and Mexico, recommended Latin American countries such as Brazil, Venezuela and Argentina work out their own comprehensive trading arrangement.

Although Mulroney strongly endorsed a U.S.-Mexico trade pact - Canada and the United States negotiated a similar agreement in 1988 - the Canadian government has said it has no intention of participating in such an arrangement.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - Disability groups called Monday for an end to a federal ban on funding for fetal tissue transplants, but the administration stood behind its belief that such research would increase abortions.

At a congressional hearing, the American Parkinson Disease Association, the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation and others attacked Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan's November decision extending the funding moratorium on transplants using tissue from aborted fetuses.

''The ban, in essence, abrogates the rights of the living. We urge Congress to take effective action on behalf of all disabled citizens whose welfare has been so wantonly ignored,'' Karen Colvin, a wheelchair-bound representative of the American Paralysis Association told a House Energy and Commerce subcommittee.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., subcommittee chairman, noted preliminary results have shown fetal tissue may help treat Parkinson's disease and childhood diabetes. Other incurable disorders that scientists think may be helped by transplants of fetal tissue include Alzheimer's disease and nerve injuries.

Researchers say fetal tissue works better than adult tissue for transplants because it grows much more quickly and adapts more readily. But abortion opponents contend such research may prompt more women to undergo abortions.

''The administration has shown greater respect for the most radical members of its anti-abortion constituency than for those Americans afflicted with such disabilities and diseases,'' Waxman said. ''The administration has implicitly told these Americans that the cure for their disease is too controversial to study, too political to pursue.''

Assistant Health Secretary James Mason indicated there is little chance the ''indefinite'' moratorium - an extension of a ban imposed in March 1988 by the Reagan administration - will be lifted soon.

Citing recently enacted regulations that forbid the federal funding of abortion or activities that encourage it, Mason said the policy cannot be reversed because the administration believes ''permitting the human fetal research at issue will increase the incidence of abortion.''

But Waxman said he sees little difference between the current practice of transplanting organs obtained from murder or suicide victims and using tissue from aborted fetuses.

''Did you decide the morality of abortion is more important than the morality of preventing disability and death?'' Waxman asked Mason.

Mason offered no specific information when Waxman requested what information the administration used to conclude that more women will undergo abortions if they know fetal tissue might be used in research transplants. The congressman cited studies showing abortions have not increased in Sweden, which is a pioneer in fetal tissue transplants for Parkinson's.

In moving to uphold the ban, the health secretary overruled the unanimous recommendation of a National Institutes of Health advisory panel that the moratorium be lifted.

In its report, the NIH panel recommended a regulatory ''wall'' be erected to separate the abortion process and the banking of fetal tissue for research purposes. Tissue could not be sold for a profit, and women could not donate tissue to a specific relative or other patient.

Dr. Kenneth Ryan of Harvard University, a member of a special committee that advised the panel, said the lack of federal funding - and accompanying regulations - has created a ''moral vacuum'' in which privately funded doctors can do almost anything with fetal tissue.

ATLANTA (APRIL 2) UPI - President Bush urged skeptical broadcasters Monday to ''stand for freedom'' and support government-sponsored TV Marti telecasts to Cuba, despite their concern about becoming innocent casualties of the U.S. propaganda war against Fidel Castro.

In a square-off between political values and commercial interests, Bush defended TV Marti, a congressionally sanctioned bid to beam Western programming and ideals to Cuba, as an ideological weapon using ''the power of free information'' to weaken the hold of communism.

''In the realm of ideas and ideals, there are no borders,'' he told the National Association of Broadcasters. ''No government should fear free speech, whether it's from entertainment programs or accurate, unbiased news about world events.''

Bush received a cool response to his pitch for TV Marti, which followed electronic jamming by Cuba of the first test telecast last week and again Sunday.

American broadcasters are uneasy because Castro has threatend to use huge Soviet-built transmitters to disrupt the reception of commercial radio stations in the United States if the TV Marti broadcasts, beamed from a blimp off southern Florida continue.

A spokesman for the U.S. Information Agency said TV Marti did not run a telecast test on Saturday because of bad weather. He said Sunday's test was jammed, although the telecast did manage to get through to some areas in Cuba. The spokesman said the test series continued Monday.

In the face of concern among broadcasters already wary of government involvement in their business, Bush insisted that ''America must never lose its voice'' for freedom. Just as Western radio and television coverage helped inspire and embolden democratic movements in Eastern Europe, he said, ''I am convinced that the people of Cuba will thank us when they too win the liberty they yearn for.''

The crowd, however, seemed unpersuaded.

''The voice of freedom will not be stilled as long as there is an America to tell the truth,'' Bush said to applause. ''Look, I do understand the practical concerns that some of you have about this, but I also understand that you represent the very principle TV Marti exists to serve: the free flow of ideas.''

Bush asserted that the Voice of America and other forerunners to Cuba-directed Radio and TV Marti have, over the years, guaranteed oppressed peoples around the world that ''even in the worst hours of repression, they could always count on a friendly voice to remind them of the truth.''

''I ask you to stand by your traditions, the best traditions of America,'' he told the broadcasters. ''I ask you, once again, to stand for TV Marti and to stand for freedom. If we broadcast freedom, our message will be heard.''

NAB President Edward Fritts issued a statement following Bush's speech that expressed the group's ''grave concerns'' over interference from TV Marti. But Fritts later issued a revised statement that dropped the word ''grave'' and said the NAB also was worried by the effect of Cuba's jamming efforts.

''We appreciate the president's appeal. We wholeheartedly accept his concept of freedom across frontiers, but we do have concerns about the technical aspects of TV Marti on two levels: one is direct interference from the TV Marti signal to Florida TV stations and two is retaliatory interference from Cuba,'' the revised statement said.

''We had asked to be included as a part of the evaluation team and it is unfortunate we are not,'' Fritts added. ''We will continue to talk to the USIA, State Department and other officials to get information relative to the tests.''

Funded by Congress, its start-up delayed, TV Marti plans to broadcast a variety of American programming - from sitcom reruns to news and sports - to Cuba. While its organizers have promised untainted broadcasts, a clear objective is to bombard Cuba, an economic basketcase and rigid holdout against political reform, with images of democratic movements and better lifestyles elsewhere.

The NAB speech came as Bush hit the road for two days of fund-raising for the GOP in Ohio, Indiana and Michian, with official events piggy-backed onto those political stops to justify the government expense.

Bush was, for example, to have opened the baseball season Monday night at Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati after attending a fund-raising reception for George Voinovich, the Republican candidate for governor. When the dispute between baseball owners and players delayed the opener by a week, White House officials scrambled to find another non-political angle for the visit.

(APRIL 2) UPI - In an event not nearly as publicized as Lithuania, but perhaps just as important to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's future, Soviet oil workers are proposing to sell oil directly on foreign markets to buy food and other goods.

In a recent issue of the weekly newspaper Moscow News, Siberian oil workers ''proposed that the work collective take 10-15 percent of the oil and gas and sell it domestically and abroad at negotiated prices without paying anything to the state budget.''

The workers said they would use the hard, foreign currency to buy food and manufactured goods, said Robert Ebel, former U.S. government intelligence analyst, now vice president of Enserch Corp. in Washington, D.C., said Monday.

In the last ten days, the oil workers have complained in another Soviet journal, Rabochaya Tribuna, that they produce the nation's oil and don't receive any benefit, the analyst said.

He noted, however, the workers said, ''This is not an ultimatum.''

Ebel, who closely monitors the Soviet oil industry, said, ''Gorbachev is in a difficult situation, similar to Lithuania.''

''If you give in to the oil workers, the line forms on the left,'' Ebel said.

He noted the Soviet leader had already set a precedent that may come back to haunt him by granting concessions to striking Soviet coal miners last fall.

The oil workers feel they have gotten little in return for their efforts over the years.

Oil is provided to the state for 23 rubles, or about $4 or $5 a barrel, a fraction of what it would obtain on world oil markets, the analyst said.

The complaint in Moscow News was voiced by the Nizhnevartovsk group of oil workers' collective, which pumps about 2 million barrels of the Soviet Union's 12.5 million barrels daily production, the world's largest.

Petroleum Intelligence Weekly said if the collective decided to strike it might cause a walkout in the rest of the key Tyumen region, which accounts for 64 percent of daily Soviet output.

The publication said the Nizhnevartovsk group could strike as early as this week.

It said Moscow had already granted the Tyumen workers a new incentive of 5 percent to 20 percent of the hard currency earned from production over and above the government's plan, which is set at 95 percent of capacity.

Outputs, however, from ''many fields are well below plan,'' the publication said.

PIW said Soviet output last year declined about 400,000 barrels daily from its peak in 1988 and that statistics from the International Energy Agency show exports to the West dropped 11 percent, or 200,000 barrels daily.

As a result of diminishing returns, Moscow has cut back on its investment in Soviet oilfields, Ebel said.

PIW said, ''While there is no doubt about a steady slide in Soviet production, observers differ considerably in judgments about the level of decline and the reasons for it, which include natural decline, poor maintenance, civil unrest and workers stoppages.''

To correct the deteriorating situation, Moscow is attempting to lure western capital and technology by offering joint ventures.

In Houston last week, Soviet officials offered joint venture agreements to representatives of an estimated 75 to 100 energy companies, providing details about vast reserves of oil and natural gas fields. Another meeting is scheduled for London Tuesday.

Dealing with the Soviet bureauracy, however, still apparently presents formidable obstacles to the formation of such agreements.

Amoco Corp., the fifth largest U.S. oil company, last week disclosed it had been discussing oil exploration in the Soviet Union with Soviet officials for the last two years.

On items that still must be resolved before drilling could begin, Amoco chairman Richard Morrow said, ''There are a lot of them. You've got the legal issues, you've got financial issues. You've got organizational issues.''

''They've all got to be talked about. The important thing is discussions are still taking place and where they might lead we have yet to see,'' he said.

Analysis By: Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (APRIL 2) UPI - Sometime before the end of this century chances are you will be entertained by an entirely new show-business concept. It's called Cinetropolis, a vision of Iwerks Entertainment that promises an entirely new sensory experience.

Cinetropolis is comprised of three central but separate entities - individual systems that promise audiences unique adventures in sound, sight, and movement unavailable in conventional theaters or theme parks.

Cinetropolis as envisioned would require a huge building to offer the trio of independent projection devices that break through conventional film systems.

Iwerks has installed individual systems at 20 theme parks, museums and expos around the world, but to date the only place to experience all three at once - the Cinetropolis - is at the company headquarters in the San Fernando Valley.

The first is Iwerks 870: A powerful motion picture theater system combining giant-screen movie images with six-channel surround-sound to produce enormous, crystal clear projections from a frame size that is more than seven times larger than standard 35mm film.

The curved screens extend to a height of six stories - 60 feet - by 84 feet wide in front of steeply raked rows of auditorium seats, putting audiences smack-dab into every scene.

The second system is Iwerks 360: A distortion-free 360-degree screen literally surrounds viewers with overhead projection onto a cylindrical screen 55 feet in diameter, again placing the viewer in the midst of the action. The audience stands in the center of the theater, hanging onto rails to keep their balance.

Then, there is RideWerks - called a TurboTour simulation theater: Members of the audience are strapped into seats adapted to hydraulics. As action bursts forth on an overpoweringly enormous screen, the seat tilts, banks, turns and bucks in conjunction with what is happening onscreen.

Movement of the seat simulates a rocket ship, horse, airplane, helicopter, boat or other conveyance, which, when synchronized with the screen action, convinces the "passenger" he or she is plunging at enormous speed headlong into the scene. It is as thrilling as any white-knuckle roller coaster.

Iwerks also has developed a three-dimensional technology that gives audiences a high-resolution image without the use of "3-D" glasses. Not intended to replace conventional movie theaters, some Iwerks technology simply heightens action-adventure films.

"Driving Miss Daisy," for instance, would not be enhanced by Iwerks 870, as opposed to "Indiana Jones." "We try to create the optimum visual and sound systems and layout so everyone in a theater has a great seat no matter where he or she sits," said Iwerks' spokesman Craig Hanna.

"In most theaters with huge screens you have to sit back away from the image, or get a headache because they are grainy and out of focus. Our high-resolution projection is brighter and crisper, putting you into the picture."

The scaled-down prototypes of Iwerks 360, Iwerks 870 and TurboTour, when experienced in succession, provide a sample of a unique evening of entertainment.

Each component serves a different purpose - the 360 is a novelty providing viewers with the intimate experience of being surrounded on all sides by dramatic scenery and action, the 870 is a breathtaking means of seeing a conventional motion picture, the TurboTour is a thrill ride.

Among the 870 systems in use is one in the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum in Washington. There is a TurboTour theater operating successfully in Tokyo and another scheduled to open in Sweden with 94 seats and a 35-foot-high screen.

Hanna said, "People are getting more sophisticated. They want more than just thrill rides. "The public expects more and more from the roller-coaster experience. They are getting bigger and more expensive. The new one at Magic Mountain cost $6 million. And it never changes.

"The TurboTour can be changed with a new film and seat-motion program to represent a space adventure one day, next a miniaturization like 'Honey, I Shrunk the Kids' or, for that matter, a roller-coaster ride." And, a 50-seat TurboTour Theater costs approximately $1.2 million.

In the past, Disney was the principal pioneer in new techniques to entertain the the public. In fact, Ubbe Iwerks, father of Iwerks Entertainment's chairman, Don Iwerks, was one of Walt Disney's top executives. "Our concept combines the three technologies to see films of different lengths. The audience would move from one area to the next," Iwerks said.

ELIZABETH, NJ (APRIL 2) UPI - A devout accountant accused of murdering his wife, mother and three teenage children in 1971 undertook the slaughter ''with love in his heart,'' his lawyer said Monday.

John Emil List was driven to what he saw as an effort to save his family's souls by a strict religious upbringing, the drug-ridden society of the early 1970s - which he perceived as ''the face of hell'' - and the threat of financial disaster, defense lawyer Elijah J. Miller Jr. said in his opening statement at List's trial.

Miller, who is employing a defense based on a claim of innocence by reason of mental defect, said his client ''was fragmented with mental disease.''

''He is not a whole person,'' Miller told jurors. ''Make no mistake, John List killed his family, but these killings were something other than murders.''

Miller said the devout Lutheran accountant thought he was saving his family ''when he entered hell with his eyes open, when he committed these acts with love in his heart for his mother, his wife and his children.''

Assistant Union County Prosecutor Brian Gillet, in his opening statement, read a five-page confession List left on Nov. 9, 1971, explaining why he shot his family. The prosecutor employed the confession, in the form of a letter from List to his pastor, in an effort to undercut the mental defect defense by emphasizing the deliberate nature of the killings.

The letter included instructions on funeral arrangements and a discussion of List's belief that he did the right thing by killing his children while they were still Christians.

List, 64, who is on trial on five counts of murder in Union County Superior Court, fled from New Jersey after the killings and lived under the name Robert P. Clark for 17 1/2 years while working as an accountant in Denver and Virginia. He was arrested last year in Richmond. He faces multiple life sentences if convicted.

Although List appeared calm as he was escorted into the courtroom Monday, he brushed away tears as Gillet read the letter he wrote the Rev. Eugene Rehwinkel. He sat through most of the prosecutor's statement with his head on his hand, his back to a courtroom packed with reporters and spectators.

The brief opening statements were followed by testimony from prosecution witnesses aimed at laying out the detail of List's planning for the killings.

The witnesses included a neighbor and her son, who was a 14-year-old classmate of Frederick List's in 1971, the milkman, the Westfield school truant officer and three employees of Suburban Trust Co. who said that List redeemed $2,000 in savings bonds and cashed two checks totaling $285 on Nov. 9, 1971.

Gillet told the jury that List worked systematically, shooting his wife, Helen, and then his mother, Alma, 84, some time after the children left for school, picking up first his daughter, Patricia, 16, at school, and then his son Frederick, 13, at his after-school job and shooting them. All four received one bullet in the back of the head.

Another son, John, 15, arrived home unexpectedly, Gillet said, and was shot 10 times with two different guns.

''This defendant systematically executed his wife of 20 years, his elderly mother, his sons and daughter - his own flesh and blood,'' Gillet said.

NAIROBI, KENYA (APRIL 2) UPI - A prominent Kenyan dissident vanished from his home last week and has been missing for four days, his wife said Monday.

She appealed to the public for help in tracing Mukaru Ng'ang'a, saying her husband feared he would be detained without trial by Kenyan security forces for the third time in eight years.

''He was absolutely sure than it was merely a matter of time before they came back for him,'' Lucy Mukaru Ng'ang'a said in a statement issued through her lawyers.

''For some days before he disappeared, my husband looked apprehensive and expressed his fears to me, saying that he was being followed around by strange persons whom he suspected to be plainclothes policemen,'' she said.

Prior to his reported disappearance on March 29, Ng'ang'a, in his 40s, was arrested in 1982 for saying he thought Kenya should have a multi-party democracy.

Released two years later, he was re-arrested in 1986 and held for a further three years. On his release, he claimed he had been brutally tortured - starved, beaten and kept immersed in cold water.

Four weeks ago, police tried to pick him up for questioning as part of a government crackdown on potential opponents in the wake of the unexplained violent death of Foreign Minister Robert Ouko.

Ng'ang'a went into hiding, then sued the government for an injunction preventing his detention.

''I am not ready to give myself up voluntarily because my personal liberty and possibly even my life seems to be in very real danger,'' Ng'ang'a said at the time. ''There can be no democracy in a one-party system.''

The High Court turned down his case March 19.

President Daniel Arap Moi and numerous leading politicians have since condemned advocacy of a multi-party system in Kenya as seditious, arguing that political pluralism would lead to a resurgence of tribal conflict.

The government has picked up and questioned over 50 people in the past month, all members of the Kikuyu tribe, Kenya's largest tribal group, in its bid to stamp out sedition and rumor-mongering.

On Friday, a Presbyterian churchman, the Rev. Joseph Imunde, was sentenced to six years in jail for sedition.

Government and church leaders have swapped angry words in the past week over Kenyan churches' alleged involvement in sedition.

On Monday, Minister of Information and Broadcasting Waruru Kanja lost his job two weeks after he caused an uproar at the opening of Parliament when he used a debate to compare Ouko's death to a famous 1975 political assassination.

Kanja recalled the abduction and murder, under President Jomo Kenyatta, of member of Parliament J.M. Kariuki. Kariuki, an outspoken critic of the government of the day, was widely held at the time to have been killed by security police. No official explanation of his death was ever made public.

Kanja's comparison led to calls for his resignation and accusations that he was breaching principles of collective government responsibility.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (APRIL 2) UPI - The brother of executed dictator Nicolae Ceausescu denied murder and genocide charges Monday at the beginning of one of the most high-profile trials since the December revolution.

Gen. Nicolae Andruta Ceausescu, who faces a maximum sentence of life imprisonment if convicted, is the closest Ceausescu relative to stand trial for crimes stemming from communist dictator's near quarter century rule.

He was given the name Andruta to distinguish him from his famous older brother, whom he closely resembles.

The former chief of a security police training unit is accused of fatally shooting seven people Dec. 21 during some of the heaviest fighting between loyalist forces and anti-government demonstrators. Ceausescu's regime fell the next day.

He also is charged with inciting others to commit genocide, attempted murder and weapons offenses.

Prosecutors said they would produce witnesses who saw Gen. Ceausescu shoot seven people in the crowd outside the Intercontinental Hotel in central Bucharest. The defendant maintained he fired only into the air.

''I fired five or six bullets - a whole magazine - into the air,'' Ceausescu said, adding he could not have killed anyone because he was behind the security forces and could not have shot through them.

The defendant, dressed in a brown-and-gray striped prison uniform, appeared nervous during the court appearance, grinding his teeth, rocking in his chair and shaking slightly. As he entered the courtroom he began to cry on seeing his daughter, who has not been permitted to visit her father since his Dec. 23 arrest.

''How can you defend that hyena?'' the mother of one of his alleged

The trial, expected to last at least three more days, has been treated with unusual senationalism in the local news media.

The Bucharest daily Adevarul, considered close to the provisional government, published an interview with the defendant Friday in which he reportedly claimed to have been persecuted by Elena Ceausescu, wife of the late dictator, who was executed along with her husband Dec. 25.

The reason for the persecution, he was quoted as saying, was that he had once found her cavorting naked with two German officers during World War II. She put pressure on him to prevent him from exposing her to her husband, Gen. Ceausescu explained.

The defendant's lawyer, Vaile Soroceanu, called the charges against the general absurd, but said he was still hopeful his client could get a fair trial.

The main reason for his optimism, Soroceanu said, was the fact the trial judge is young and never ran a court during the Ceausescu regime.

Several other Ceausescu family members are still awaiting trial, including the dictator's son, Nicu. In the western city of Timisoara, a trial has been under way for more than a month for 21 former leaders of the dictator's former secret police.

The proceedings against Gen. Ceausescu began a day after a mass demonstration in Bucharest commemorating the 100th day of the anti-Ceausescu revolution.

Led by several opposition parties, about 10,000 people marched through the capital, chanting anti-government and anti-communist slogans. There were no reports of violence.

Saturday, only a few hundred people joined interim Prime Minister Petre Roman and President Ion Iliescu for official ceremonies marking the anniversary.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (APRIL 2) UPI - Columbia Savings and Loan Association, once the most profitable thrift in the country, said Monday that it is insolvent because of huge losses in its junk bond portfolio.

The disclosure means that federal regulators are likely to seize the 29-branch thrift, even though Columbia said it has filed a plan with regulators to return to financial health.

''I think it's going to be hard for Columbia to stay afloat,'' said Tony Howard, a banking analyst with Crowell Weedon & Co. ''Right now, it looks pretty hopeless.''

Federal regulators seized two other major sick California thrifts - Imperial Savings in San Diego and Mercury Savings of Huntington Beach - in late February, but refused to comment Monday on Columbia's outlook.

''The Office of Thrift Supervision will review the situation with Columbia on an individual basis and act accordingly, as with all other cases,'' said OTS spokeswoman Laurie Lavaroni.

Columbia disclosed late Sunday that it had lost $379.1 million in the fourth quarter of last year and another $200 million in the first two months of this year. In the fourth quarter of 1988, Columbia made $16.2 million, or 39 cents a share.

As a result of the losses this year, Columbia said its stockholders' equity fell to a negative $121 million as of Feb. 28. That figure had been $77.6 million as of Dec. 31.

Columbia also said that it expects further losses and asset writedowns for the month of March.

Since December, Columbia has been operating under strict limits imposed by the regulators which restricted it from growing, funding some commercial loans and paying dividends without prior approval. At that point, it had also failed to meet the new capital levels required by the federal thrift bailout legislation.

Capital is the cash and other assets used by financial institutions to protect themselves against heavy losses.

Because it is insolvent, the thrift's lending activities are now restricted to making residential loans of less than $500,000.

But Howard said Columbia has not emphasized that area of its business, a traditional one for thrifts. ''When the regulators placed the limit on Columbia's ability to grow last year, that was really the death knell,'' Howard said.

Columbia had posted impressive profits through most of the 1980s because of its strategy of heavy investment in the junk bonds, many purchased through Michael Milken and the now-defunct Drexel Burnham Lambert. The strategy, which gave Columbia the largest junk bond portfolio among thrifts, was engineered by Thomas Spiegel, who resigned as chairman and chief executive officer in December.

The Spiegel family has voting control over Columbia stock, and his Spiegel's father Abraham Spiegel recently became chairman.

Columbia's downfall began with the collapse of the junk bond market last year and was accelerated with the requirement in the thrift bailout legislation that thrifts divest all junk bonds by 1994. In late October, Columbia stunned the financial world by announcing a $226.3 million loss for the third quarter due to a fall in the value of its junk bonds.

Between Sept. 30 and Dec. 31, the value of its investment securities - which consists largely of junk bonds - fell from $4.36 billion to $3.38 billion.

Edward G. Harshfield, Columbia's new chief executive officer, said last month that the thrift wanted to sell the entire junk bond portfolio to a single buyer. He said in the announcement Sunday that First Boston Corp. had held discussions with potential buyers, but added that such a deal would not take place before this year's third quarter.

But analyst Howard said it is unlikely that there will be any takers at anything less than a deeply discounted price.

Columbia admitted in the announcement that such a deal would not be enough to put it in compliance with capital requirements. It also said that if it occurs, the transaction could carry negative implications on its ability to borrow and for its net interest income.

In the announcement, Harshfield said, ''Notwithstanding our current financial condition, we believe Columbia has the resources to reach full compliance with the capital standards mandated by Congress before the Dec. 31, 1994 deadline.''

''Our regulators have been working with us in a very constructive manner '' Harshfield said.

Columbia said in the announcement that it had increased its provisions for credit loss reserves by $465.6 million during the fourth quarter. It had warned earlier that such losses would total at least $320 million.

Columbia also said it had sold $575 million in junk bonds between last August and February.

For 1989, Columbia had a loss of $591.1 million, off from 1988 earnings of $65 million, or $1.55 a share.

The 1989 figure include gains of nearly $220 million from selling securities last year and a loss of $61.6 million in real estate operations because of a weakening in the Southern California office lease market.

Analysis By: Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (APRIL 2) UPI - Acting. A hazardous occupation? Well, not as dangerous as, say, bronc riding. Hardly as perilous as being a steeplejack, or as brutal as professional football.

Granted, acting for Angela Lansbury is not life-endangering. Nor does Meryl Streep find herself in life-or-death jeopardy very often. Even Sylvester Stallone has stunt doubles.

So how precarious a profession can acting be? Just take a look at actor Lou Diamond Phillips to get an idea. The other day Phillips limped into his hotel room just off the Sunset Strip. His gimpy leg was stitched and bandaged. His right arm was in a cast from his wrist to above his elbow. Lou was not the picture of health.

Clearly, he recently had taken his lumps. Phillips was thrown and dragged more than 50 yards by a horse he was riding in a scene for "Young Guns II."

The horse's name is Arrow, which Phillips would like to change to Alpo, despite the fact that they became pals in the original "Young Guns" two years ago.

Making himself as comfortable as possible in a straight-backed chair and lighting a cigarette, Phillips - who sprang to stardom in "La Bamba" playing the late 50s rocker Ritchie Valens - said acting in this age of action pictures can hurry along premature senility.

And while Phillips doesn't compare acting with strolling alone in Central Park at midnight, he says his profession indeed can be dangerous. "Actors in their 20s and 30s are usually the ones in most danger," he said," because there are so many physical action pictures made these days. That's my age range. I'm 28 and most of the time I get physical parts.

"Kevin Costner, Tom Berenger and other guys in their category are always putting their necks on the line in demanding films. We're put in situations that require a great deal of exertion.

"In 'Young Guns II' none of us was without our aches and pains, bruises and scratches. It's going to happen and you have to be prepared for it. You accept the fact that you're going to go home physically sore some days. When I did 'First Power' I was dead tired every night from all the fight scenes and running I had to do.

"The minute you get on a horse there's an intangible. You can be hurt before you know it. A couple of weeks before I got dragged, Arrow fell and rolled over on me when we were going up a steep hill on location in New Mexico. Luckily, I got up without an injury because the ground was muddy and soft.

"But the dragging episode two weeks ago was a different story. They fired off a gun near Arrow's head and he bolted. I had plastic, breakaway shackles on my hands, which I had to hold high over my head for a story point.

"I didn't have my hands on the reins. That made all the difference. With my hands that far away from the reins, I had no way to control the horse," he said.

"Also, I had a noose around my neck, which was supposed to be breakaway, but it wasn't. The rope got caught up on the saddle horn when I was dragged with one foot hung up in a stirrup.

"The horse reared a little bit and I slid off the back. I'm a fairly deft rider and the horse is good, but this time he really spooked. I remember trying to kick my foot out of the stirrup. But I was lucky my foot was caught because it took some of the pressure off the noose around my neck.

"I could have been strangled if the noose had been pulled tight. As it was the noose cinched up around my neck just before the rope broke and the horse got free," he said.

"The horse ran a pinball line of action at a full run, bouncing me off fences, a wood pile, and a wagon in an attempt to shake me off. I never lost consciousness and concentrated on keeping the noose from choking me.

"I got kicked in the head a couple of times. My first thought was I was going to die, and that made me angry. What a stupid way to go, dragged to death by a horse in a movie.

"I'm not sure how this right arm was broken. Maybe by a kick. The ulna in my forearm was broken in four places. My left knee was gashed and the bone chipped. I was on a crutch for more than a week. And I couldn't count the bruises," he said. Phillips was hospitalized in Albuquerque for three days.

Fortunately, he had only a single scene left to play, which will be made up when his arm is out of the cast. "It wasn't really a stunt," he said. "It was a simple shot with me riding slowly into camera range. "Believe me no one can convince me that acting isn't a dangerous way to make a living."

NEW YORK (APRIL 2) UPI - A prosecutor in the rape case of a Central Park jogger revealed surprising new evidence Monday of a semen stain on the victim's sock, delaying indefinitely the trial that was to begin in two weeks.

A stunned and angry Justice Thomas Galligan agreed to an indefinite delay in the trial, which was slated to begin with jury selection April 16 at state Supreme Court in Manhattan.

"Obviously I'm very distressed by the fact that a year after the exhibit was in the possession of the police department, it has to be tested. ... It should have been done a long time ago," Galligan told Assistant Manhattan District Attorney Elizabeth Lederer.

The last-minute hearing was called after Lederer alerted the judge that a New York City police serologist last Wednesday discovered the semen stain on one of the jogger's socks. The sock, which has been in police custody since the April 19, 1989, attack will be sent to the FBI for DNA testing.

In court, Lederer told the judge the mistake was discovered while the government was making a final check of its evidence against the first three youths slated for trial - Yusef Salaam, 16, Antron McCray, 16, and Raymond Santana, 15.

"I'm not a serologist. I cannot explain to the court why it was not discovered earlier," Lederer said. Other clothing belonging to the victim, a 29-year-old investment banker, has already been tested by the FBI and failed to definitively link the youths to the attack. Genetic matches are considered more conclusive than a fingerprint.

The only semen stain discovered on the woman's clothing - found on the leg of her elasticized running pants - matched the genetic pattern of her then boyfriend. The boyfriend was never a suspect.

Defense attorneys seized the opportunity to suggest that the prosecutor's case is falling apart and argued Lederer is scrambling for time to bolster it.

"It just seems to me that it's a little disingenuous that they would not have determined this many months ago," said Howard Diller, whose client, Kevin Richardson, 15, was expected to go to trial on at a later date. "I think the district attorney has other reasons for the delay here. ... They are looking for better quality witnesses to make their case stronger."

Last month, prosecutors won a key victory when Galligan ruled admissible the youths' videotaped and written confessions. Because the six accused rapists also point fingers at one another, their trials will be severed into several groups, the judge ruled.

The suspects are charged with rape, attempted murder, sodomy, and sexual abuse. If convicted, the juveniles could receive a maximum ten years in jail.

The victim was near death after the attack, which occurred while she was jogging in the park. She has made a miraculous recovery after intensive rehabilitation and has returned to work on Wall Street.

The first of the rape and attempted murder trials was slated to begin on April 16, but was delayed indefinitely. After Lederer said the FBI testing would take at least six weeks, Galligan ordered the lawyers to return to court May 21 to set a new trial date.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (APRIL 2) UPI - The British Embassy said Monday it was closing its visa section until further notice after a huge fire gutted a fuel depot near its offices in Christian east Beirut.

''No visa or consular work can be undertaken in Beirut until further notice,'' the embassy said in a news release.

''Because of the fire in the fuel depot in Jal El Dib, it is necessary to close the visa and commercial section,'' it said.

Fuel storage tanks in the army-controlled area of Jal El Dib, a neighborhood in east Beirut, were hit Sunday night during fierce clashes between army troops loyal to Gen. Michel Aoun and militiamen of Samir Geagea's Lebanese Forces.

The fire was still burning out of control Monday and threatening the surrounding buildings.

The embassy said all consular and visa inquiries should be addressed to other British missions overseas.

The British Embiwry has closed its offices on several occasions since March 1989, when Aoun declared his ''war of liberation'' to drive some 35,000 Syrian troops out of Lebanon.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Despite an all-night meeting, transit officials in Buffalo, New York, today failed to vote on a tentative plan to restore mass transit service in the Buffalo area. Transit authority commissioners said the four-year plan would force cuts in bus and rail service... raise fares and lay off some workers. Buses and trains are idle a second day in

New York's second-largest city.

The Supreme Court is again taking up the issue of multi-Million-dollar jury verdicts. The justices today began looking at whether punitive damages violate the due process clause of the U-S Constitution. The case could lead to limits on damages meant to punish and deter a wrongdoer. The court has tried to tackle the issue three times in recent years, but has failed to settle it.

Lawyers for deposed Panamanian General Manuel Noriega are pressing their argument for a Miami judge to dismiss charges against Noriega. Former U-S Attorney General Ramsey Clark told the court today that he has heard the death toll from the U-S invasion of Panama was at least 20 times higher than U-S government figures. Defense lawyers say putting Noriega on trial would make the courts an accomplice to the alleged atrocities of the invasion.

An earthquake and several aftershocks jolted parts of northwest Washington state early today... waking up residents and causing minor damage... mainly broken glass. Scientists at the University of Washington Geophysics Laboratory say the initial tremor measured four-point-four on the Richter scale. CHICAGO (APRIL 2) UPI - Soybeans tumbled at the close Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade while corn and wheat futures held onto most of their early gains.

Soybean futures fell sharply to close 9 to 12 cents lower in a fast market. Old crop prices broke below last week's lows. Professionals led the selling.

New crop beans pulled nearby contracts lower throughout the session on carryover from last week's bearish USDA plantings report.

Soybean meal prices firmed up during the session following early professional selling.

Concerns that a stronger U.S. dollar would keep the European market quiet weighed on soymeal, analysts said. Soybean oil futures ended mixed in light and choppy trading.

Corn closed higher, gaining on fundamental activity, along with sporadic commission house trading and scattered local buying. Those gains were trimmed a bit in liquidation, shortly before the close.

Wheat traded narrowly mixed most of the session, bolstered by short-covering from commission houses, according to market watchers, who noted that a lack of export interest weighed on wheat prices.

At the close, corn was up 2 1/4 to 4 cents a bushel, soybeans off 9 to 12, wheat off 1 1/2 to up 4 and oats up 1 to 1 1/2.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (APRIL 2) UPI - The shuttle Atlantis's crew cabin was shaken by higher-than-normal vibrations during launch Feb. 28 and human error caused communications problems that delayed the launch of a secret spy satellite for five orbits, sources said Monday.

Two of the shuttle's maneuvering jets failed to operate, officials said. Atlantis suffered a hydraulic system leak in its engine compartment during ascent and trouble on the ground is believed to have caused a brief communications blackout during re-entry March 4.

NASA engineers, meanwhile, are studying whether emergency parachutes worn by Atlantis's crew were improperly rigged for speedy use. None of the problems was considered dangerous to Atlantis's crew, but because of the military nature of the flight, such details were not revealed at the time of the flight.

The "anamoly list" generated by Atlantis's flight was discussed by NASA engineers Friday and Saturday during a two-day flight readiness review to clear Discovery for blastoff April 10 to carry the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope into orbit.

One anomaly was crew cabin vibration, according to sources who asked not to be identified. Data from "accelerometers" aboard Atlantis showed the cabin experienced the highest vibration of any shuttle flight in 34 missions to date, the sources said, although the vibration was well within design limits and did not pose a threat to the astronauts.

Sources said the vibration was "payload-related" and that its cause was understood. Because the identity of Atlantis's satellite cargo was classified top secret, no other details were available, although an engineer said similar vibrations were expected during the upcoming launch of the Hubble Space Telescope.

The sources also said "operator error" apparently was responsible for communications problems involving one of NASA's Tracking and Data Relay Satellites that delayed the launch of Atlantis's top-secret spy satellite payload about eight hours, or five orbits. The satellite was widely reported to be a new photo-reconnaissance spy station that may have cost up to $1 billion.

The Air Force said March 16 that "hardware elements" from Atlantis's mission would fall out of orbit and burn up in Earth's atmosphere, raising the possibility of a major satellite failure. But the Air Force refuses to discuss military space payloads and the fate of the satellite was not known, despite its high cost.

Along with delaying the satellite's launch from Atlantis, communications glitches also marred the shuttle's re-entry. Sources said "operator error" on the ground resulted in a "drop-out" of S-band radio telemetry from Atlantis at one point during re-entry, although the problem was quickly corrected.

None of the problems thought to have been encountered by Atlantis's crew were considered dangerous to the astronauts or the space shuttle, although engineers are studying potential trouble with the crew's emergency parachutes that could have made a bail out more difficult to pull off than otherwise expected.

Bruce Sauser, an engineer at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston, said an "incident board" was looking into the parachute issue and that no problems were anticipated for the shuttle Discovery's launching next week, which will involve the same parachutes used during Atlantis's flight.

Following the 1986 Challenger disaster, NASA implemented a rudimentary crew bail-out system to give astronauts a chance to escape from a shuttle in the event of multiple main engine failures that otherwise would require a crash landing in the ocean - not thought to be a survivable option.

To use the bail-out system, shuttle astronauts, wearing bulky, 70-pound spacesuits, would extend a telescoping pole out of the orbiter's open hatch and hook an "extraction bridle" to the pole before sliding down and out of the shuttle.

The extraction bridle is what begins the parachute opening procedure. Engineers at the Johnson Space Center are studying whether a problem with the way the bridles are rigged would have made it tougher than usual to hook up for bail out.

DALLAS (APRIL 2) UPI - The American Heart Association, bowing under attack from federal regulators and food manufacturers, Monday dropped its controversial seal-of-approval program for foods.

The HeartGuide program has been criticized since the heart association first came up with the idea of lending its logo to foods it deemed low in cholesterol, sodium, and fats.

But opposition intensfied in recent months, when both the Food and Drug Administration and Agriculture Department announced their disapproval of the plan. Some food manufacturers, including the beef industry, also waged a strong fight against the labeling effort.

Dr. Myron Weisfeldt, president of the Heart Association, Monday announced the HeartGuide program is being halted and "redesigned to respond to the changing environment in Washington to work with federal agencies and the food industry." The revised program will not involve placing the heart association's logo on foods, he said.

The FDA said it considered the food endorsement plan misleading because even if a brand met the heart association's nutritional standards, it would not receive a HeartGuide seal unless a manufacturer paid hefty fees for testing and consumer education.

FDA opposition prompted most of the initial 103 food brands to back out of the HeartGuide program before its start in February. The heart association said the nine remaining participants were being notified Monday the HeartGuide program was being suspended.

AHA spokesman Howard Lewis said the HeartGuide logo was on grocery store shelves in "selected" markets on Pam non-stick spray, Promise margarine, and Heartbeat products manufactured by GFA Brands.

"I think the FDA is going to work with these companies so they don't lose their inventory," said Lewis, referring to the FDA's threat to take action against products bearing the HeartGuide seal.

The revamped program will focus on educating consumers about nutrition, with added emphasis on legislative and regulatory actions to provide understandable food labeling, the AHA said.

"It's important for the American public to know we will not be changing the basic objectives of HeartGuide," Weisfeldt said. "The primary goal is still to help Americans improve the way they select and prepare foods, and ultimately reduce their risk of heart disease."

The heart association also released a March 30 letter from acting FDA commissioner James Benson that indicated government opposition to the program had not changed despite an AHA proposal to modify the food labeling element. "The FDA still believes that programs such as HeartGuide tend to increase consumer confusion and may also be misleading," Benson said.

Weisfeldt said the heart association is pleased that Benson acknowledged the useful role the AHA has played "in contributing toward the current national movement for food labeling reform."

Since the HeartGuide program was unveiled, the FDA has proposed regulations that would overhaul food labeling, improve regulation of food-related health claims and establish uniform definitions for often-misleading terms like "low fat" and "high fiber."

Consumer groups have criticized the FDA for dragging its feet on health claims. "I'm concerned that the FDA won't go far enough or act quickly enough," said Bonnie Liebman, director of nutrition for the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

The demise of the HeartGuide seal "is a shame for consumers who want simple thumbs up or thumbs down advice on whether a food is good for their heart. This kind of labeling is something the FDA should have been doing a long time ago," Liebman said.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (APRIL 2) UPI - Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Monday his government has not yet decided on a controversial proposal to merge East and West German currencies by requiring East Germans to exchange their money at a 2-to-1 rate.

Kohl was responding to criticism from partners in his coalition government and from leading politicians in East and West Germany, who argued the proposal Saturday by the Bundesbank, the powerful West German central bank would wipe out the savings of elderly East Germans and slash the value of wages.

In his statement Monday, Kohl said the West German government was studying the proposal in which two East German marks would be needed to buy one West German deutsche mark to achieve monetary unity. Kohl said his government would not make a decision without consulting East German authorities.

''Therefore, no decisions or commitments have been made on the issue,'' Kohl said. ''I fully acknowledge my responsibility toward the people'' of East Germany.

Otto Lambsdorff, chairman of the Free Democratic Party, the junior partner in Kohl's governing coalition, said the 2-to-1 rate would wipe out elderly East Germans' savings and cut wages in half.

Under the proposal, only a small portion of East German savings accounts - as much as $1,175 per person - would be exchanged at a 1-to-1 rate. The remainder would be exchanged at the 2-to-1 rate.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, also a member of the Free Democrats, said in a radio interview Monday the proposal should be ''reconsidered seriously.''

Lothar de Maiziere, expected to become East Germany's next prime minister because the Christian Democratic Union party he leads won general elections last month, also criticized the proposal.

''Wages in East Germany are much lower than in West Germany,'' he said. ''At a moment when we are in a process of dismantling subsidies, to cut wages in half could lead to great social tensions.''

East German Prime Minister Hans Modrow said such a decision could cause a new exodus of East Germans to West Germany.

''We now have a situation which contradicts everything that (West German Chancellor) Helmut Kohl said during the election campaign here,'' Modrow said. ''This could lead to great discontent among East Germans.''

The East German State Bank joined the growing criticism of the proposal and called for a 1-to-1 exchange rate.

''Any other exchange rate is neither politically, economically nor socially justified,'' the bank said in a statement.

Bundesbank chairman Karl-Otto Poehl defended the proposal, saying it raises the current value of the East German mark, which is set at a 1-to-3 exchange rate. He said the decision to allow savings to be exchanged at 1-to-1 rate was made as a concession by Kohl and other West German politicians during the East German election campaign.

Merging the two German currencies was a major campaign issue in the first free elections in East Germany in nearly 50 years.

Martin Kirchner, general secretary of the East German CDU, Sunday called the Bundesbank proposal "unacceptable" and said East Germans felt betrayed by it.

Five days before the election, Kohl told East Germans at a rally in Cottbus he favored a 1-to-1 exchange rate for savings accounts but gave no further details. He ruled out the rate for other areas such as pensions and wages.

On Sunday, Kohl denied making wide-ranging promises on currency reform but said in a radio interview: ''We intend to do what we said we'd do.''

Lambsdorff said the Bundesbank proposal would hurt the elderly and the wage earner. He said the elderly are particularly vulnerable in East Germany because they rely heavily on savings to augment low retirement pay.

Elmar Pieroth, a leading West German CDU economist who has been proposed as East Germany's new economics minister, also insisted the rate be made at 1-to-1. He said that rate should also include retirement pay and wages.

''East Germans do not pull down super wages,'' he said. ''They average about 1,000 marks (about $588) a month.''

Pieroth said the 1-to-1 rate was needed to offset the expected cost of living increase when a free-market system replaces government subsidies.

The final decision on monetary reform is seen as a crucial first step toward eventual German unification. Officials have said they want to have the currency system in place by mid-summer.

WARSAW, POLAND (APRIL 2) UPI - Solidarity founder Lech Walesa said Monday his weekend warning of a strike threat at the historic Gdansk shipyard was ''a slip of the tongue'' and pledged his full support for Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki.

''Please tell everybody that there is no quarrel between Prime Minister Mazowiecki and Lech Walesa,'' the union chief told a farmers' rally outside his hometown of Gdansk.

Walesa admitted he is often ''shouting, protesting and grumbling'' that the economic reforms under Mazowiecki are not proceeding quickly enough, ''but if I were once again now to suggest a candidate for prime minister, I would suggest Tadeusz Mazowiecki.''

On Saturday, Walesa told Mazowiecki that workers at the Gdansk shipyard will launch an anti-government strike on Monday to protest low wages and dissatisfaction over the way their affairs are being handled.

''Saturday I did not make myself clear, saying the shipyard was going on strike,'' Walesa told the farmers Monday.

''It was a slip of the tongue. It was not like that. The shipyard issued a manifesto to the government that if (the situation) is not changed ... then probably the shipyard will go on strike.''

Walesa said he was told Monday morning that some workers at the shipyard, the birthplace of Solidarity, were ready to strike.

''I had to defend, phone (and) intervene opposing it, because I didn't want a strike now. This is the last thing we need now,'' he said.

Walesa's comments came as railway workers began scattered protests Monday over low wages, and the government's stabilization plan claimed more casualties.

In the southeastern town of Sanok, the Autosan bus factory, the largest in Poland, shut down Monday due to lack of demand for buses, the news agency PAP said in Warsaw. Six hundred workers were dismissed Monday, and another 900 will lose their jobs by the end of the month.

''There are no vacancies, either for workers of various trades or for administration personnel, in other enterprises in Sanok and its vicinity '' the news agency said.

Unemployment has already topped 200,000 in Poland, compared with a handful before stiff measures went into effect Jan. 1 to make Polish industry more efficient.

In an interview with the weekly ''Konfrontacje'' newspaper, Walesa was asked whether he still believes it was the right decision for Solidarity to agree to lead the government last August.

''I made the decision because at that historic moment there was no other choice,'' he replied. ''But on the whole I am opposed to the move,'' because the union must return to its traditional role as champion of the workers.

Referring to the May 27 elections for local government, he added, ''I suppose that one more time the elections will be held under the Solidarity banner - but this will be the last time.''

After that, he suggested, others must get to work organizing political parties and programs.

RESTON, VA (APRIL 2) UPI - DynCorp announced Monday the acquisition of Program Resources Inc., a biomedical research and technology services company.

Terms of the transaction were not disclosed. The purchase adds 1,400 employees, $50 million in revenues, and $900 million in backlog to the Reston, Va.-based defense and commercial aviation contractor.

Founded in 1973, Program Resources provides scientific, laboratory, computer, and administrative support to federal agencies.

DynCorp President Dan R. Bannister said the acquisition is in line with the company's plan to reduce its reliance on the shrinking Defense Department budget.

He said DynCorp will consider other acquisitions as part of this growth and diversification strategy.

In February, the company added six technical and scientific contracts to its Government Services Group with the acquisition of the assets of Bell Technical Operations from Combustion Engineering Corp.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - The ''loudest message'' given to officials trying to draw up a National Energy Strategy is the need for increased energy efficiency, Energy Secretary James Watkins said Monday.

In releasing a progress report on his agency's efforts to draw up a formal energy plan for the country through the year 2030, Watkins said 15 public hearings around the country had revealed a broad national consensus in favor of greater efforts to save energy.

''The loudest single message was the need to increase energy efficiency,'' Watkins told reporters. ''Energy efficiency was seen as a way to reduce pollution, reduce dependence on (oil) imports and reduce the cost of energy.''

Watkins said he agreed with that goal and that the nation had to do better than the 10 percent increase in energy efficiency already projected due to current conservation measures.

''That is not enough,'' he said. ''We believe we can double that.''

Watkins said improved energy efficiency was certain to be a central recommendation of the proposed National Energy Strategy that his department is scheduled to send to President Bush this December. The strategy is supposed to be released publicly in early 1991.

Bush ordered the Energy Department to draw up the strategy July 26, saying it would enable the nation to chart its own energy future rather than reacting to crises, such as oil shortages of the 1970's.

The Energy Department has held 15 public hearings and received more than 1,000 written submissions since last August to gather information for the development of the strategy.

The interim report released by Watkins represents the department's analysis of some 12,000 pages of public testimony by government officials, industry representatives and environmentalists.

Watkins said the testimony covered the full range of energy issues, ranging from safety concerns about nuclear power to controversy over off-shore oil drilling to the impact of coal-fired power plants on acid rain and global warming.

He said that, other than increased energy efficiency, the department had not yet settled on the key elements of the National Energy Strategy, but was considering seven key policy options and expected to develop several more before any final decisions were made later this year.

Among other key areas, Watkins said the National Energy Strategy would focus on ''technology transfer'' - ways the government can help translate research breakthroughs in the laboratory into practical technology that can help America become a leader in producing and saving energy.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 2) UPI - Nearly 11,000 Kaiser Permanente employees went on strike Monday, forcing postponements of elective surgery and other non-critical care for patients enrolled in the nation's oldest and largest health maintenance organization.

The strike affected seven Kaiser hospitals and 45 clinics, mostly in Los Angeles and Orange counties. Employees at Kaiser facilities in San Diego, San Bernardino, and Riverside counties and in northern California were not involved in the work stoppage.

Tom Ramsay, a spokesman for Local 399 of the Service Employees International Union, said 10,900 of its members - about 97 percent of Kaiser's 11,200 service, clerical and technical employees - walked off the job at 12:01 a.m., one minute after their three-year contract expired. Ramsay estimated that "thousands" of employees were marching on picket lines Monday outside Kaiser facilities.

The latest talks between Kaiser and the union broke off Saturday night, and no new talks were scheduled. "We want to go back to the table, but it's Kaiser's move," Ramsay said. "We're now hoping Kaiser will feel the pressure of the strike and will come back to the table."

A tentative contract agreement had been reached Thursday and union officials unanimously agreed to endorse the proposal, Kaiser spokeswoman Janice Seib said. But the union's membership rejected the proposed pact Friday by a vote of about 3,000 to 1,400. Some 6,000 members did not vote on the contract.

Kaiser officials said they feel the contract's rejection indicates the union's rank-and-file does not fully understand the terms of the pact.

"That's simply not true," Ramsay said. He noted that, during the course of negotiations, the union bargaining team met with members 27 times to explain the terms being discussed. "They knew what they were doing (when they voted against the offer)."

The company met with federal mediators on Saturday to request a second ballot, Seib said. At that point, the union bargaining team joined the meeting and submitted a counter offer, Seib said.

Neither Seib nor Ramsay would disclose the terms of that offer, which was eventually rejected by the company. The company's $44-million offer called for salary increases of five to six percent in the first year and three to five percent in each of the following years of the three-year pact.

Seib said Kaiser is prepared to deal with a strike. "For the last ten days we've been taking steps to reduce the number of patients in the hospitals by transferring (critically ill) people (to hospitals unaffected by the strike) and postponing a number of elective surgeries," Seib said.

She said jobs normally performed by striking employees were being covered by management and other exempt personnel, as well as by employees called in from Kaiser facilities unaffected by the walkout.

"The really important thing that people should know is emergency rooms will continue to function as normal," Seib said. "Most of the positions that are involved in this contract have little to do with patient care."

Local 399 represents clerical, housekeeping, and technical workers, including licensed vocational nurses, at Kaiser hospitals or medical centers in Anaheim, Bellflower, Harbor City, Los Angeles, Panorama City, Woodland Hills, and West Los Angeles.

The last walkout by Kaiser employees was in 1988, when Local 501 of the International Union of Operating Engineers staged a five-day strike. Members of Local 399 last walked off their jobs in 1975 in a work stoppage that lasted four days.

Kaiser Permanente serves 2.2 million members in Southern California and 6.2 million nationwide. About 90 percent joined through group plans or employee benefits packages.

LONDON (APRIL 2) UPI - Authorities struggled to regain control Monday over a Victorian-era prison where inmates protesting jailhouse conditions went on a rampage.

Home Secretary David Waddington told the House of Commons he could not confirm reports from surrendering prisoners that about 12 people, mostly sex offenders, had been killed in the rioting.

"It has not been possible to confirm these stories, and to date no bodies have been discovered, but the possibility that fatalities have occurred cannot be ruled out,'' said Waddington, whose office oversees Britain's prison system.

Twelve staff members and 35 prisoners were injured in skirmishes at Strangeways Prison in Manchester, 200 miles northwest of London, authorities said. The chapel and a gymnasium were badly damaged by fire.

Authorities said they had regained control of five of the prison's 10 buildings. Police did not storm the buildings and instead seemed to be trying to wear down prisoners, observers outside said.

Waddington said 119 prisoners had not surrendered and 1,458 others had been transferred to other prisons.

He said the uprising was a case of ''prisoners indulging in an orgy of violence against their fellow inmates.''

The secretary promised a thorough inquiry into ''this extremely serious incident.''

A prison guard said the overcrowded and dilapidated jailhouse looked ''like a bomb site.''

The prison, built in 1868, was designed for 970 inmates but now houses up to 1,600.

The Prison Officers Association warned further rioting and disorder were inevitable unless staff levels increased. The group charged the government with ''criminal negligence'' in its handling of prisons.

Association Chairman John Bartell said the government was warned there would be a riot at Strangeways this weekend.

''Everybody in the prison knew there was going to be a major demonstration '' he said. ''We've been telling everybody loud and clear.

''We've been telling the Home Office prison department ... for two years about the shortage of staff and the fact that we felt that our safety was in jeopardy.''

Despite the long- and short-term warnings, there was ''very little response,'' he said. ''Staff life was placed in danger ... and the prison has been virtually wrecked.''

David Mellor, a Home Office minister, denied being warned to expect a riot.

''He knows no more about the prison system than the prison cat,'' scoffed an association official.

Opposition Labor Party's deputy leader Roy Hattersley also blamed the government for the riot.

''If we treat men like animals, we ought not be surprised when they behave like animals,'' Hattersley said. ''The failures and disorders (Sunday) are the direct result and responsibility of the present prison policy, the direct responsibity of the home secretary and his inadequate policies for staffing our prisons and improving the condition within them.''

In defense, Waddington said the prison population nationally is now more than 2,100 below last year, while the total expediture on the system has risen by 20 percent in real terms in the past 12 months.

By 1992-93, another 10,000 places will be added to the prison system, he said.

''Sadly the short-term consequences of this incident will be to worsen conditions elsewhere just when real improvements were flowing from the combined effect of our policies on criminal justice and the prison building program,'' Waddington said.

The riot broke out Sunday morning in the prison chapel, where five guards were overseeing 300 prisoners, and quickly spread through the compound.

Through the night a helicopter circulated overhead, monitoring the prisoners' activities.

Despite rain, some hard-core prisoners maintained posts on the steeply pitched prison roof. Many wore masks, and others wore guards' uniforms.

Their demands were not revealed publicly.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (APRIL 2) UPI - President Frederik de Klerk ordered a high-profile deployment of army troops to support police in halting a wave of political unrest Monday, but declared his reform program and announced he would meet Nelson Mandela later this week.

''The overwhelming majority of all South Africans want a peaceful negotiating process to succeed and the government will continue to strive for this,'' de Klerk told a joint session of parliament as Mandela pursued his own peace efforts in strife-torn Natal province.

Balancing security concerns with his reform agenda, de Klerk said it was necessary to maintain a 46-month-old state of emergency and warned of mass detentions in a bid to crush the unrest, particularly in Natal, where he said it had reached ''shocking'' proportions.

At the same time, however, he said legislation would soon be presented to grant temporary indemnity against prosecution to exiled activists of the African National Congress to allow them to participate in peace talks.

He also said legislation would be introduced empowering the president to grant permanent indemnity but he ruled out blanket amnesty.

Shortly before he spoke, the first batch of eight political prisoners to be released under de Klerk's reform plan were freed from Cape Town's Robben Island facility. Not scheduled for release until July 1992, they were greeted at the harbor by 100 cheering friends and relatives.

It raised to 40 the number of jailed activists released since de Klerk's Feb. 2 decision to lift a 30-year ban on the ANC and free Mandela from 27 years imprisonment to pave the way for formal power-sharing negotiations to end the country's racial conflict.

The release of an estimated 350 political prisoners and the lifting of the emergency are among the key ANC preconditions for participating in peace talks.

De Klerk said he would meet Mandela later this week on the ANC's decision to suspend an April 11 meeting with the government intended to address the obstacles standing in the way for formal negotiations. Mandela said the meeting would be held Thursday.

''It is difficult to understand why an organization saying it is interested in peace refuses to come and talk about that very issue,'' de Klerk said, adding the ANC decision came as a ''complete surprise.''

Wrestling with the worst political unrest of his eight months in power, de Klerk said police supported by the South African Defense Forces ''have received instructions to immediately act to stop incidents of violence and unrest.''

The measures included a ''greater visible presence of the security forces, the patrolling of roads and suburbs with vehicles and airplanes.'' An airwing of police reservists supporting SADF and police units already is operating, he said.

Enforcement of laws against violence also would be ''sharpened,'' he said.

In Natal, where 53 people have died since last Tuesday in battles between supporters of ANC-linked organizations and the rival Zulu movement Inkatha de Klerk said ''ample additional manpower provided by the defense force is already deploying in the area.''

''Normal policing also will be intensified and arrangements are being made for extra courts,'' he said.

''The destruction of lives and property has reached proportions which can truly be descibed as shocking,'' de Klerk said of the conflict, which has left some 3,000 dead since 1987 and flared last week after ANC supporters stoned busloads of Inkatha supporters.

''Investigations show that there are several causes,'' he said. ''Solutions will not be found overnight. It will cost much time, money and patience.''

The package, he said, was ''imposed to ensure that the security situation in the Republic of South Africa remains under control and is normalized as quickly as possible - to neutralize revolutionary and radical agendas... based on violent conflict, illegal mass actions, the breaking of laws and the abuse of citizens rights.''

De Klerk's announcements after a morning session with the National Security Council in Cape Town stopped short of meeting demands he impose martial law in Natal's Edendale Valley outside the provincial capital of Pietermaritzburg.

The declaration would have allowed army troops to move into the area without the constraints of acting under the direction of police, who residents have accused of supporting the Inkatha movement of Mangosuthu Buthelezi in clashes over the past week.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - Most high school seniors don't know enough about government and history to be responsible citizens, education officials said Monday in releasing test results that one historian called ''fresh evidence for despair.''

The Education Department's 1988 test of students in the fourth, eighth and 12th grades found they had a ''Trivial Pursuit sort of familiarity'' with basic names, dates and concepts in civics and history.

But the students had little knowledge about the causes of historical events or the workings of government. For example, 56 percent of fourth graders could name Columbus's ships, but only 36 percent knew why he sailed.

Of the seniors, only 51 percent understood the Constitution guarantees religious freedom and just 57 percent knew - when asked during an election year - that presidential candidates are nominated by national conventions.

Several speakers at a news conference where the results were released noted that, at a time when countries around that world are embracing democracy, U.S. students have little idea about how their system developed or functions.

''Freedom, we must remember, is not ours by accident,'' said Christopher Cross, assistant secretary of education for research. ''In the end, our children and every generation of Americans must themselves take up the rights, the privilege and the responsibility of self-governance.''

As in government ''report cards'' on reading, writing and geography released this year by the National Assessment of Educational Progress, white students did better than blacks and Hispanics - results officials said appeared to reflect economic disparities.

The civics test found performance by eighth-graders had improved over tests in 1976 and 1982. But seniors suffered a significant decline overall as falling scores for white students wiped out improvements by minorities. A comparison of history tests in 1986 and 1988 found little difference.

Students' proficiency was divided into four levels - 200, 250, 300 and 350. At 200, a student knows basic facts, such as who the first president was. At 350, a student would know that judicial review is the power of courts to rule on the constitutionality of actions by other branches of government.

Chester Finn, chairman of the National Assessment Governing Board, said 300 was a ''a level of adequate functioning for a citizen of the United States.''

But only 46 percent of the seniors reached 300 in history and just 49 percent reached it in civics - meaning the average senior, who is within months of legal vioting age, did not know the president nominates the chief justice of the United States or that the soldiers fighting for the South in the Civil War were called Confederates.

Only 6 percent of seniors reached the highest level on the civics test and just 5 percent reached it in history. An example of a level 350 question was knowing that diplomatic ties between America and the People's Republic of China were established during Richard Nixon's presidency.

''The national assessment ... gives us fresh evidence for despair,'' said Mary Frances Berry, a history professor at the University of Pennsylvania and the president-elect of the Organization of American Historians.

''If the national assessment report is accurate, our high school graduates on the whole, lack the kind of understanding of the nation's heritage that is necessary to be an informed citizen in a democracy.''

To improve the situation, Finn called for shifting social studies curriculum away from an emphasis on ''boring'' lists of facts and suggested a longer school year be considered.

(APRIL 2) UPI - In Manchester, England, observers say British police will try to wear down rioting inmates who are in control of the Strangeways Prison. About 47 people have been injured since convicts took over the facility yesterday to protest conditions at the Victorian-era prison.

Officials refuse to comment on claims by injured inmates who say about a dozen people have been killed. Guards had warned officials to expect a riot.

A prosecutor in Elizabeth, New Jersey, is hoping the words of a man charged with shooting to death his family more than 18 years ago will help convict the suspect. In an attempt to show John List was a rational person the prosecutor today read a five-page confession from List that was left after the 1971 slayings of his mother, his wife and their three teen-age children. The public defender in the case argues List had a mental illness.

HAVANA, CUBA (APRIL 2) UPI - Cuba jammed U.S.-sponsored TV Marti broadcasts for the sixth time Monday amid warnings that the nation could engage in an electronics war with the United States.

State-run Radio Reloj said the Spanish-language TV Marti, which originates in Washington and is repeated to Havana via a blimp tethered off the Florida Keys, resumed broadcasting at 3:45 a.m. Monday.

''At 3:47 a.m., interference circuits went into operation,'' Radio Reloj said. Two minutes is the fastest Cuba has jammed the TV Marti signals, which it does by sending an alternative transmission on the same frequency.

Radio Reloj said the broadcasts ceased at 6:45 a.m.

The first of a series of TV Marti tests began March 27, drawing charges from Cuban authorities that the United States is violating Cuban sovereignty and international telecommunications agreements.

The controversial television project, which is likely to cost $15 million a year, is named for Cuban independence hero Jose Marti and involves anti-Castro Cuban exiles living in the United States.

Cuba's Radio Reloj said Cuba has sent details about the transmissions to the International Telecommunications Union, and expects a response soon.

A Third World diplomat who asked not to be identified said Cuba would first use external pressures to try to persuade the United States to cancel the project before taking any drastic action.

''Cuban officials have publicly said they have the technical capabilities to disrupt domestic broadcasts inside the United States,'' the diplomat said.

''If TV Marti tests continue, it can cause an electronics war between the two countries. It is believed that Cuba has three powerful Soviet-made transmitters,'' he added.

On March 23, the Cubans turned up their transmitters during a news conference given by President Fidel Castro, interrupting broadcasts from at least four Florida stations with Castro's speech.

In May 1985, when Radio Marti began broadcasting to Cuba, Castro suspended a year-old immigration accord with the United States. The pact was renewed in 1987.

''It is unlikely that Castro would cool down this time,'' the diplomat said.

Critics of the project say TV Marti is unfeasible not only because of the Cuban vow to jam the signal, but because it violates the International Telecommunications Convention of 1982, signed by the United States and Cuba.

Cuban officials have said more than 65 percent of the island's 10 million population favor interruption of the programs, which aim to provide news and entertainment in Cuba.

The United States severed diplomatic ties with Cuba in 1961, when Castro began adopting a Marxist-Leninist line to which he has adhered.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - Two high-level Japanese emissaries arrived in Washington on short notice Monday to meet with Secretary of State James Baker and later with President Bush to discuss problems hampering U.S.-Japan trade talks.

Japanese sources said the two envoys were to tell the American leaders that Japan has given way on the major points raised by the United States, and that these changes will be reflected in new Japanese legislation which will open access to American goods in Japan.

The sources said the changes will be made public Wednesday.

The visit underscored the seriousness of the escalating conflict between the two Pacific Rim economic superpowers.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater, traveling with President Bush, said Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu had called Bush before the president left the White House Monday morning.

Bush told reporters along for the two-day trip that his conversation with Kaifu was ''very fruitful'' and added, ''I've been encouraged by recent progress'' in the talks. But he added, ''We'll have to wait and see.''

Fitzwater said the Japanese envoys were Nobuo Matsunaga, former ambassador to Washington, and Deputy Foreign Minister Hisashi Owada. Their stated goal, he said, is ''to explain what exactly the situation in Japan is and to try to make as much progress as possible.''

''He (Kaifu) said he was trying very hard - a lot of problems, a lot of difficulties,'' Fitzwater said.

The emissaries arrived Monday, the State Department said, and were scheduled to meet separately with Baker and White House national security adviser Brent Scowcroft Monday. Fitzwater said they would see Bush Wednesday.

The purpose of the visit by Matsunaga and Owada, Fitzwater said, is to ''express the prime minister's personal commitment to solving the problems'' that have stalled the talks. He said the two emissaries are carrying a personal letter to Bush from Kaifu.

Bush and Kaifu met in Palm Springs, Calif., in February, but failed to come up with specific measures that would narrow the trade deficit between the United States and Japan.

Since then, the Japanese stock market has suffered sharp losses and the dollar has shown strength against the Japanese yen - events that could increase Japanese opposition to opening markets to U.S. goods.

The arrival of Kaifu's envoys coincided with the opening of two days of U.S.-Japanese trade talks in Washington. The participants on both sides have been told to produce an interim report on removal of ''structural impediments'' - built-in features of both cultures and economies that hamper imports.

One example cited by American officials are the Japanese laws that ostensibly protect ''mom-and-pop'' stores, but effectively prevent American retailers from setting up shop in Japan.

The head of the American delegation, Undersecretary of State for Economic Affairs Richard McCormack, said in his opening remarks that the discussions ''may at times be heated,'' but added, ''Just remember: we begin this meeting as friends and we will end as friends.''

An interim report on the talks is expected Wednesday and a final report is due in July.

As of January, the most recent data available, the monthly U.S. trade deficit with Japan stood at about $2.9 billion. The annual U.S. trade deficit with Japan has remained steady at about $49 billion.

Adding pressure to the situation are pending complaints under the so-called Super 301 clause of the 1988 Trade Act involving satellites and communication equipment, super-computers and lumber products. If the disputes are not settled, Congress is expected to order retaliation in the form of higher tariffs for some Japanese products.

Administration officials and other experts fear such action could trigger an open-ended trade war between the world's two largest trading nations.

BALTIMORE (APRIL 2) UPI - Drug treatment appears to curb the behavior of some AIDS-infected men who keep having sex with many partners despite the risk of transmitting the deadly virus, doctors reported Monday.

Johns Hopkins University researchers said they gave a drug known to reduce male sex drive to four men infected with the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus or HIV.

The patients, two of whom were mentally retarded and two of whom were diagnosed with sexual disorders, were referred for the experimental treatment because of ''suspected or reported increases in sexual activity '' Johns Hopkins officials said.

Within six weeks of receiving the drug, the men reported a ''dramatic decrease'' in the number of sexual contacts, Dr. Frederick Schaerf and his colleagues said.

One patient reduced his sexual contacts from 50 per week - the most recorded - to one contact or less per week, the researchers said.

The drug used in the study, medroxyprogesterone or Depo-Provera, has been used in the past to help control the sex drive of rapists and other sex offenders. The drug reduces levels of testosterone, the hormone that controls male sex drive.

In the study, three men received injections of Depo-Provera, which is made by The Upjohn Co. of Kalamazoo, Mich., every one or two weeks, and a fourth received a daily, oral dose of the drug. The only side effect of the treatment was mild high blood pressure in one patient, said Schaerf, who presented his findings Monday at the Hopkins Conference on AIDS.

The men, who ranged in age from 22 to 44, received psychotherapy along with the drug treatment.

Researchers speculated the drug-psychotherapy combination may also help prevent men with psychiatric and judgement disorders who are not infected with AIDS to reduce sexual activity that puts them at high risk of infection.

The AIDS virus is spread by sexual or blood-to-blood contact, such as drug users sharing needles. It can also be passed on from an infected mother to her baby.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - The jurors who heard the case against John Poindexter began deliberating Monday under a judge's orders to ignore the bitter "political disputes" that characterized much of the Iran-Contra scandal.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene gave members of the jury a lengthy description of the law and their duties, then sent them into the jury room.

The judge said he would not sequester the panel and ordered deliberations to continue daily, from 9:45 a.m. to 5 p.m. EDT, until a verdict is reached.

Greene told the jurors in his 58-page instructions: ''For example, it is not your function, or the court's, to decide who was right in particular disputes between the Congress and the president, or between Democrats and Republicans, or liberals and conservatives.

''Likewise, it is not your function, or the court's, to decide whether President Reagan's commitment to assist the Contras in Nicaragua was the correct policy for the United States, or whether his opponents were right in their criticism of that commitment,'' Greene said.

''On the same basis, you are also not called upon to decide whether the president's policy toward Iran and the American hostages kept in Lebanon was a wise or an unwise policy. Those questions are left to the elected representatives of the people in the legislative and executive branches, and ultimately to the citizens who vote in elections, not to judges and juries.''

Greene's ruling was a defeat for Poindexter, although other parts of the instruction were more favorable to the former national security adviser. Poindexter's attorney, Richard Beckler, had tried tried to turn the case into a debate over Ronald Reagan's Iran and Contra policies, arguing that Poindexter was the victim of a political battle between Congress and the White House.

Another component of Beckler's defense has been that Poindexter never intended to mislead Congress. In order to convict, the judge told the jurors, they must be convinced that Poindexter deliberately lied.

Greene also told the jury it is not a proper defense to decide that Poindexter acted on direct or indirect instructions from Reagan to violate the law.

''The instructions or orders of a superior do not constitute a defense to crime,'' Greene said. He also noted that Reagan denied during videotaped testimony that he ever authorized any aides to break the law - and Poindexter also maintained he always obeyed the law.

Poindexter did not take the stand to defend himself. The judge cautioned the jurors that Poindexter exercised his ''absolute right'' and they could draw no inference of guilt from the fact.

Poindexter, 53, the last of the original Iran-Contra defendants, is the highest Reagan administration official to stand trial in the scandal. The retired Navy rear admiral is accused of five felonies involving obstruction of Congress, conspiracy and the destruction of official government documents.

The jury consists of seven women and five men. The panel had lunch and then elected Wayne Mitchell as its foreman. Mitchell works for a company that processes medical insurance claims and is pursuing a paralegal career at night.

The jury's first note to the judge asked for a copy of the indictment, a copy of the court's instructions, exhibits in the case - and paper towels.

The crucial part of the case against Poindexter involves two statements he made to two congressional committees on Nov. 21, 1986. Four of the five charges relate to those meetings.

Prosecutors say that Poindexter told a ''false cover story'' as part of a conspiracy to deceive Congress about secret arms sales to the Iranians.

Poindexter is accused of lying when he said he did not learn of a November 1985 shipment of U.S. Hawk anti-aircraft missiles to Iran until January 1986 - two months after it happened. The prosecution presented evidence that Poindexter helped supervise and direct the November 1985 shipment.

Poindexter also is charged with lying to Congess in July 1986 when he wrote three letters denying that his National Security Council violated a two-year congressional ban on U.S. military aid to the Contras.

If convicted on all five counts, Poindexter faces up to 25 years in prison and $1.25 million in fines. But no other Iran-Contra figure who has pleaded guilty or been convicted by a jury has been sentenced to a day behind bars.

The Iran-Contra scandal involved secret U.S. weapons sales to Iran in an effort to free American hostages in the Middle East, and the diversion of some of the profits to the Nicaraguan Contras when Congress had banned such aid.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - Yields for 13- and 26-week T-bills fell Monday at the government's weekly auction.

The Treasury Department auctioned $8 billion of 13-week bills at an average discount of 7.83 percent, down from 7.85 percent at last week's auction and the lowest since Feb. 26, when the auction yielded 7.72 percent.

The government also sold $8 billion of 26-week bills at an average discount of 7.81 percent, down from 7.83 percent last week and the lowest rate since Mar. 5, when the rate stood at 7.79 percent.

The discount rate understates the actual yield to investors.

The investment, or coupon-equivalent, rate was 8.10 percent on the 13-week bills at an average price of $9,802.10 per $10,000 face value. The investment rate on the 26-week bill was 8.24 percent at an average of $9,605.20 per $10,000.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - A 15-month study of the federal court system has recommended a series of changes to limit the amount of cases filed, it was announced Monday.

The study, authorized by Congress, made a variety of recommmendations to ''prevent the system from being overwhelmed by a rapidly growing and already enormous caseload and ... preserve access to the system for those who most need it.''

The main focus of the more than 100 recommendations is to concentrate federal court resources on questions of federal law and to hand off issues dealing with state law to state courts.

Chief Justice William Rehnquist, in accepting the report, said that with demands on the federal courts constantly increasing, the courts cannot follow a policy of ''benign neglect.''

The problem of an increasing caseload in the federal court system has worried officials for well over a decade.

According to statistics, between 1958 and 1988 the number of cases tripled in district courts and increased by more than tenfold in appeals courts.

A number of proposals have been made over the years, including the addition of another level of appellate review between the circuit courts of appeal and the Supreme Court, creating more federal appeals courts and setting up a series of specialized courts.

Such a massive overhaul was viewed as too radical by the study committee.

Among the report's recommendations:

-Officials should not bring drug cases to federal courts that could and should be filed in state courts.

-Judicial vacancies should be filled and additional federal judgeships should be added but more judges should not be viewed as the long-term solution to a rising caseload.

-Courts should be allowed to experiment with alternatives to solving civil cases such as arbitration.

-Creation of an office to help Congress measure the effect of proposed legislation on caseloads.

-Civil tax cases should be unified in one court.

-Congress should create a new court to handle disability claims under the Social Security Act.

The Federal Courts Study Committee was established by Congress in 1988 and was authorized to ''examine problems and issues currently facing the court of the United States'' and to ''develop a long-range plan for the future of the federal judiciary.''

The study was conducted by a panel composed of members of Congress, judges and lawyers and were appointed by Chief Justice William Rehnquist. The report was presented Monday to Rehnquist, President Bush, Congress and bodies representing state and federal judges.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (APRIL 2) UPI - A water line broke Monday at the Kennedy Space Center, triggering a power outage to the shuttle Discovery and delaying work to charge the Hubble Space Telescope's batteries, officials said.

Despite the power interruption, no flight hardware was damaged and engineers said Discovery's launch on the 35th shuttle mission remained on track for 8:47 a.m. EDT April 10, two days earlier than had been planned.

The revised launch date, announced Saturday at the conclusion of a two-day flight readiness review, threw a wrench into Vice President Dan Quayle's plans to attend the year's third shuttle liftoff.

White House officials said Monday Quayle's schedule was booked for April 10, although a visit to the spaceport could still be possible if Discovery is unable to make it into orbit on time for any reason.

Quayle, chairman of the National Space Council, missed a launch attempt last year when the shuttle Atlantis was grounded six days by technical problems.

The power outage occurred Monday morning when a water line broke at the Kennedy Space Center's launch control center, spraying water on a key electrical system that caused problems with the shuttleport's power distribution system.

"It was just before 10 o'clock," a spokesman said. "Apparently, there was a two-inch water return line that separated, they don't know why, and it sprayed some water on a motor control unit, which controls the power buses ... in the launch control center."

Power to the Kennedy Space Center press site dropped briefly, causing printers and computers to shut down and restart. "It shut down the power at the two (shuttle hangars), in the firing room and at the launch pad," the spokesman said. "They had some power glitches ... that brought down all the systems."

Discovery was not damaged but critical work to charge the Hubble Space Telescope's batteries was interrupted and the time lost will have to be made up later. While spare time is built into the shuttle's launch processing schedule, "things just got a little tighter for us," said one engineer.

MIAMI (APRIL 2) UPI - General Development Corp., which pleaded guilty to conspiracy last month in a $100 million fraud scheme, said Monday it may seek protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. bankruptcy code.

General Development, one of Florida's oldest and largest real estate developers, said negotiations with lenders on a $60 million loan broke down during the weekend, leaving it unable to meet debts.

''The company is considering all alternatives available to it, including seeking protection under the federal bankruptcy laws,'' General Development said in a statement. Company executives were not immediately available for comment.

Last week, the company reported that it was considering a sale of assets or of the entire company.

In Monday's release, the company said it needed the loan to meet payments on a $175 million revolving-credit account, a $75 million subordinated note and operating expenses. Talks with lenders fell apart after three weeks of talks.

''As a result, the company will be unable to meet certain of its obligations that are now due,'' General Development said.

The company and two former top executives each pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy late last month in separate plea bargains reached with federal prosecutors.

A federal grand jury indictment returned Mar. 14 charged General Development, former chairman David F. Brown, 49, and former president Robert F. Ehrling, 50, with inflating the value of the company's Florida homes and preventing buyers, many of them from Northern states, from checking prices on competing properties.

Prosecutors say the fraud cost home buyers as much as $100 million.

The company, Brown and Ehrling, both of whom resigned March 9, were each charged with seven counts of mail fraud, seven counts of interstate transportation of people to commit fraud and two counts of conspiracy to commit mail fraud.

Brown and Ehrling are scheduled to be sentenced May 22, when they will face a maximum prison sentence of five years and fines of up to $250,000.

General Development has agreed to pay a $500,000 fine and implement a 25-year restitution plan that could cost the company as much as $100 million.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 2) UPI - For nine years, shadowy Air Force F-117A stealth jet fighters resembling arrowhead-shaped black bats have been flying high over the California and Nevada deserts in the utmost secrecy.

Even when used in combat for the first time, little was known publicly about the highly classified F-117As that dropped two 2,000-pound bombs on Panama in last December's pre-dawn invasion.

Although the radar-evading fighters first flew in 1981 and became operational in 1983, the Air Force did not acknowledge their existence until November 1988 - and then released only a grainy photograph of one plane.

Now, the Air Force is ready to open the books wider on the unique aircraft.

The Pentagon plans to release details Tuesday about the costs, structure and performance of the F-117A fighter, the older cousin of the better-known B-2 stealth bomber that was rolled out for the public in November 1988.

The F-117A will be rolled out for cameras later this month at Nellis Air Force Base, Nev.

Developed and produced in secrecy by Lockheed's ''Skunk Works'' facility in Burbank, Calif., the F-117A fighter - like Northrop Corp.'s B-2 bomber - is made of plastics and non-metallic composites that absorb rather than reflect radar beams and enable the craft to slip through enemy defenses.

In releasing the photograph in November 1988 showing a bat-like plane with a protruding cockpit for the lone pilot, the Pentagon said only that the F-117A was a single-seat, twin-engine plane and that more than 50 were flying.

Aviation Week & Space Technology reported Monday that Lockheed has delivered 56 of 59 F-117As on order, and that the planes are designed to carry only a single laser-guided 2,000-pound bomb in its internal bomb bay.

This would be in keeping with the aircraft's performance in Panama, where two F-117As each dropped a 2,000-pound conventional bomb Dec. 20 near the barracks of a Panama Defense Forces garrison at Rio Hato to allegedly ''stun'' the enemy prior to a parachute drop by Army Rangers.

Another four F-117As circled overhead, but were never called into action in Panama, U.S. officials said.

The F-117As of the 37th Tactical Fighter Wing were refueled in flight and immediately returned to their home at the Tonapah Test Range in the Nevada desert southeast of Reno.

The wing is scheduled to move from Tonapah to Holloman Air Force Base, N.M., this summer.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said the use of the F-117As reduced casualties in Panama on both sides. ''It is a very accurate weapon, and the reason we used that particular weapon is because of its great accuracy

'' he said.

Costs of the F-117A program have been classified, but estimates have placed it at about $6 billion - or about $100 million per plane. The B-2 bomber costs $530 million per plane.

Until the late 1980s, the Air Force went to great lengths to keep the planes from view of Soviet spy satellites, hiding them during the day in hangars at the Tonapah and Nellis bases and flying them only at night.

At least three of the fighters have crashed, killing two Air Force pilots. A fatal crash in July 1986 at Bakersfield, Calif., made headlines because the Air Force cordoned off the area and would not allow the public near the site. A second fatal crash occurred at Nellis in October 1987.

MOSCOW (APRIL 2) UPI - Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis said Monday the embattled Baltic republic may be willing to delay establishment of full independence in a retreat in its 3-week-old showdown with Moscow.

Landsbergis appeared to soften his stand in his remarks opening a Lithuanian Parliament session convened to discuss Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's demand to rescind the legislature's March 11 declaration of independence.

Landsbergis told deputies that ''the legal act of independence proclaimed by the Supreme Soviet does not mean the immediate establishment of independence on the territory of the republic,'' the official Tass news agency said.

In an earlier telegram to Gorbachev, Landsbergis said Lithuania ''has no intention of harming the policy of perestroika,'' the Soviet president's drive for economic and political renewal.

The crisis in Lithuania has steadily grown since the Sajudis nationalist movement headed by Landsbergis gained control of Parliament in Feb. 24 elections, chose him as the republic's president at its first session March 10 and declared independence the next day.

In twin appeals to the Parliament and to the Lithuanian people Saturday, Gorbachev urged lawmakers to rescind the independence declaration as a condition for talks with Moscow and said failure to do so could bring ''grave consequences.''

Landsbergis refused to consider a total reversal of the March 11 declaration, saying any such suggestion ''has no grounds,'' Tass reported from Vilnius.

But Landsbergis's remarks indicated the Sajudis nationalists now running Lithuania may be moving toward the less confrontational approach adopted in neighboring Estonia, where a new parlimant Friday approved a gradual transition to independence.

The Soviet government moved Friday to reimpose control over Lithuania's judicial system, firing newly appointed Procurator Artural Paulauskas for ''violations of the Soviet Constitution'' and sending a replacement from Moscow.

Several hundred people picketed the procurator's office in Vilnius on Monday to protest Paulaskas's dismissal, Radio Moscow's Interfax news service said.

Paulaskas was supported by 95 percent of the office's senior staff during a meeting at its headquarters, Interfax said.

The legal system in the Soviet Union's 15 republics long has been the jealously guarded prerogative of central authorities.

Gorbachev's weekend appeals contained the first outline of a basis for dialogue with the Lithuanians about their desire to secede from the Soviet Union, which annexed all three Baltic states in 1940.

In his telegram, Landsbergis said the Lithuanian Parliament's presidium had noted Moscow's ''readiness to start discussing the legality of Lithuania's acts and resolutions concerning the Soviet Constitution.''

''Representatives of Lithuania are also ready to enter into dialogue with the U.S.S.R. government or its representatives at any level and to discuss the issue of Lithuania's legal status,'' Tass quoted Landsbergis as having told Gorbachev.

UPPER MONTCLAIR, NJ (APRIL 2) UPI - Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., announced his candidacy Monday for a third term and, having amassed a large war chest, rejected calls to limit his campaign spending.

Bradley, 46, is a heavy favorite against Republican Christine Todd Whitman. Despite the favorable odds, he has said he plans to spend $10 million in the race.

In fact, since his 1984 re-election, Bradley, a former star basketball player for the New York Knicks, has raised more than $9 million, much of it from political action committees.

Bradley's active fund raising has led to speculation that he might be interested in running for the White House in 1992. It also has prompted Whitman, a former president of the Board of Public Utilities, to challenge Bradley to limit his campaign spending to $3 million and give the remainder to charity.

Bradley brushed aside both matters during his formal announcement speech at Montclair State College, where his wife is a professor of literature. "The way I feel about what I have raised is: I have a chance once every six years to communicate intensely with the people of New Jersey and that is what I intend to do," Bradley said. "I want to share with them some thoughts and feelings about New Jersey and the country and this is my opportunity to do that."

He also repeated his contention that he intends to finish out his Senate term if elected. "I have been asked that question before and I'll say the same thing in 1990 that I said in 1984: I will serve my six-year term and can't conceive of anything that would change it," he said.

Bradley, who has become known in Congress for work on tax and foreign debt issues, is riding a large wave of popularity going into the race. A recent poll by the Eagleton Institute of Politics at Rutgers University showed 67 percent of Garden State residents believed he was doing an "excellent" or "good" job.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Army troops are being deployed across South Africa today in a high-profile show of support for police efforts to crush a wave of political UNrest. President Frederik de Klerk says the black-on-black violence in Natal province makes it impossible to lift a 46-month-old state of emergency in South Africa. De Klerk also warns that the fighting could lead to renewed detentions.

The Washington, D-C, jury in John Poindexter's Iran-Contra trial began deliberations today after the judge in the case gave them a lengthy description of the law and their duties. U-S District Judge Harold Greene cautioned jurors NOT to try to judge the ''political disputes'' that characterized much of the Iran-Contra affair. Greene says he will NOT sequester the jury during its deliberations.

The transit authority in Buffalo, New York, left commuters stranded for a second day today when it declined to vote on a tentative plan aimed at restoring bus and train service. County officials worked out the plan that would've steered county tax money to Buffalo's cash-strapped Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority. Authority commissioners say the four-year deal would NOT have provided enough funding for mass transit operations.

Last-minute pre-trial motions today delayed the opening of the case against two of seven white youths charged in last summer's racial slaying of a black New York teen-ager. The motions for suppression of evidence threaten to put off until tomorrow efforts to seat two juries. Security was tight for the long-delayed trial for the shooting of Yusuf Hawkins, whose death inflamed racial tensions in New York City.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 2) UPI - Israel, threatened with destruction by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, warned Baghdad Monday Israeli forces could deliver a crushing blow against the Arab country if it attacked.

''Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's declaration reveals, once again, the basic truth at the root of the situation in the Middle East, which is extreme enmity toward Israel and the continued aspiration to destroy Israel,'' Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said.

Israeli analysts believe Saddam threatened to use chemical weapons and ''let our fire eat half of Israel'' in an effort to halt any pre-emptive strikes against Baghdad's nuclear program.

Israel destroyed Iraq's Osirak nuclear reactor in 1981 and last week's discovery in London of 40 Iraq-bound components for triggering a nuclear explosion might provide the reason for a similar response, the analysts said.

Saddam's speech highlighting Iraq's chemical weapon capability was characterized by Israeli officials as boastful and a reminder to the United States, Britain, the Soviet Union and especially Israel that 1981 was not 1990.

''Israel should not discard such threats,'' said Yitzhak Rabin, defense minister until his resignation last month when Israel's government collapsed. ''But it is in our power to give a devastating answer several times stronger than Saddam Hussein's threat.

''And I would not advise him to provoke Israel. Israel is strong and Iraq is within serious hitting range of Israel,'' Rabin told Israel Radio. ''We have sufficient answers to these threats.''

The Israeli government portrayed Saddam's use of chemical weapons in Iraq's war with Iran and against its Kurdish citizens as ''barbaric'' and his boasting ''with impunity'' of Iraq's chemical arsenal as a reminder of the constant threat Israel faced.

Shamir said the Iraqi regime is ''notorious for its brutality'' and described Saddam's comments as ''threats of a most severe nature.''

''Israel is a country aspiring toward peace, but one which has always known how to defend itself,'' Shamir said. ''And let there be no doubt - Israel will also know how to defend itself in the future and defeat the evil designs of its enemies.''

Yossi Amihud, spokesman for Israel's Foreign Ministry, urged other nations to unite against Saddam.

''It is high time for the civilized world to act in unity and see to it that Saddam Hussein will not have the possibility to pursue his irresponsible and criminal designs,'' he said. ''Israel, which has always known how to defend itself, will know how to defend itself in the future as well.''

As part of its civil defense system, Israel in recent years has attempted to prepare its citizens for a possible chemical weapons attack. Protective gear has been passed out in several regions of Israel and training exercises have occurred in schools under programs studied for their effectiveness by Israeli authorities.

Senior security officials provided Israel's Cabinet Sunday with a background briefing related to Iraqi military developments, including the implications of Iraq positioning surface-to-surface missiles farther east toward Israel.

Reserve Brig. Gen. Aharon Levran, a 30-year veteran of the Israeli military and co-author of ''The Middle East Military Balance,'' said he attributed less importance to what Saddam said than to Iraq's current military strengths. ''The Middle East Military Balance'' is an annual report on the arsenals of Middle East countries and military trends in the region.

Levran said he did not believe Iraq would have a nuclear capability for at least five years, but Baghdad appeared to be actively attempting to gain the complicated equipment necessary.

On the missile front, Iraq launched a 48-ton rocket into space last year that raised fears it had the missile capability to hit Israel or targets farther away. But the launch capability of Iraq's missile arsenal and its level of destructiveness when expanded to longer ranges still was uncertain, Levran said.

Several Israeli newspapers commented Monday on Iraq's military developments, with Yediot Aharonot saying, ''The irony of the whole situation is that precisely at a time that we are trying to concentrate our efforts on bringing the peace process forward, an arms race is being brought upon us, the size of which we have never seen before.''

SEATTLE (APRIL 2) UPI - A statewide coalition of abortion proponents Monday launched an initiative drive to protect abortion rights in Washington.

Leaders of "Pro-Choice Washington" said they were seeking the required 150,001 signatures needed on a petition to present to the Legislature next year to protect abortions rights under the Supreme Court ruling in Roe vs. Wade.

The measure, called the "Reproductive Privacy Act," would guarantee abortion rights under state law. The Legislature could pass the measure, write an alternative, or pass the initiative on for voter approval in the fall of 1991.

"We feel it's pretty likely that Roe vs. Wade will be eroded over a period of time, and we're not content to let that happen in Washington state," said Lee Minto, chairwoman of the coalition and head of Planned Parenthood in Seattle-King County.

The act would guarantee women the "fundamental right to be free of state interference with their personal choices regarding birth control and abortion."

Catholic bishops in Washington quickly issued a statement calling the initiative "morally wrong and unnecessarily divisive."

Esther Herst, executive director of the Washington chapter of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said recent passage of highly restrictive abortion bills in several states was an "ominous sign" that "a woman could be thrown back to a time when the most private and personal choice she will ever face may be made by the government."

Coalition leaders produced portions of a recent poll of 604 state voters that showed 78 percent oppose government interference in a woman's right to either terminate or complete a pregancy. According to the poll, 36 percent felt abortions should be legal in any circumstances, and 53 percent favored the right to an abortion in some circumstances.

BOSTON (APRIL 2) UPI - The Federal Communications Commission began an investigation Monday into a phony distress call that contributed to the Coast Guard's dismissal of a real distress call from a fishing boat, which apparently sunk minutes later.

An FCC spokesman said investigators would try to determine who placed the March 25 hoax call two minutes after a real distress call from the Sol E Mar. Neither call gave a location.

The Sol E Mar, which had a father and son on board, is believed to have sunk 30 miles south of Martha's Vineyard immediately after its distress call. Both men were feared lost.

"We are currently reviewing the situation," said FCC spokesman Vincent Kajunski. "We will be assisting the Coast Guard in whatever investigations they make."

The Coast Guard suspended its three-day search for the 50-foot Sol E Mar at 10:10 p.m. Sunday after a review of file tapes indicated the vessel radioed it was sinking a week earlier.

"This is the fishing vessel Sol E Mar. We're sinking. We need help now," said the voice in the four-second message copied at 9:18 p.m. on March 25.

The call was followed two minutes later by a second message in which someone claimed, "in a sarcastic voice," to be sinking, said Lt. Paul Wolf a Coast Guard spokesman. Coast Guard emergency personnel at Martha's Vineyard determined the call was a hoax, Wolf said.

Neither message gave a location but they were believed to have originated at the same point and came in on the same channel. After the second call, both were dismissed as apparent hoaxes, Wolf said.

"What would you have done if you were sitting in the chair?" Wolf said. "At that point, we have no one overdue. It's not till five days later that we discover the Sol E Mar is even missing."

Authorities said William Hokanson, Sr., 44, and his son, William Jr., 19, were aboard the Sol E Mar when it left its home port of Fairhaven on March 22.

The lack of a location in the first message would have made it nearly impossible to find the Sol E Mar in any event, and also may have indicated the vessel's emergency was too urgent for any chance of rescue, Wolf said.

"We wish there weren't any hoaxes, but there are many. The hoax in this case had a definite bearing. I don't say it made the whole case go one way or the other, but it certainly had a bearing on it," Wolf said. "I think it was a no win situation."

The men were last heard from on the day they are presumed to have sunk when the younger Hokanson called his girlfriend on a cellular telephone to tell her the vessel would return March 28. Family members reported the Sol E Mar missing March 30.

The search covered some 27,000 square miles south of Martha's Vineyard and extended as far as Long Island, Wolf said. The search, which has turned up no debris, has been suspended pending further developments.

INDIANAPOLIS (APRIL 2) UPI - Ryan White, the teenage AIDS victim whose court battle to attend school was documented in a television movie, was hospitalized Monday in critical condition.

White, now 18, who has been in and out of hospitals since he contracted the disease more than five years ago, was admitted late last week to Riley Hospital for Children, but officials declined to elaborate on the specific nature of his illness. He reportedly had staph infections late last year.

He was one of the first students in the country to be banned from school for having acquired immune deficiency syndrome, a virus that robs the body's immune system of its ability to fight off infections and diseases.

His battle with AIDS and the Western School Corp. near Kokomo gained wide attention shortly after he contracted the disease in late 1984, when he was 13, from a tainted blood-clotting agent used to treat his hemophilia.

He eventually was allowed to return to school in early 1986 after a yearlong court battle. The next academic year, parental concern about his condition subsided in the Kokomo area, and White's eighth grade year at Western High School passed virtually without incident.

The Whites in early 1987 moved from Kokomo to Cicero, where students at nearby Hamilton Heights High School welcomed Ryan and expressed little concern about being around a classmate with AIDS.

The Whites filed a $2 million suit in March 1985 against Hyland Therapeutics Division of Baxter Travenol Laboratories, a California-based pharmaceutical company that supplied the AIDS-tainted clotting agent called Hemofil. Nine months later, U.S. District Judge Allen Sharp dismissed the suit, ruling that the company was immune from such action.

White was the subject of an ABC television movie that was broadcast Jan. 16, 1989, and he appeared with Ronald and Nancy Reagan during a March 1990 event in Los Angeles during which the Ryan White National Program for AIDS Education was established by Athletes and Entertainers for Kids.

NEW YORK (APRIL 2) UPI - The dollar was broadly higher in New York trading Monday as traders took profits on West German marks amid controversy over monetary union with East Germany and sold British pounds on London's weekend strife.

Currency dealers said another dollar surge against the Japanese yen halted on the brink of the psychologically important 160-yen mark. Profit-taking and possible discrete central bank intervention were cited, as well as wariness of a Group of Seven meeting set for Saturday in Paris.

Traders said a heated German controversy over the rate at which East German marks will be converted to hard deutsche marks under a monetary union plan heightened market uncertainties, inducing mark-selling.

In late New York trading, the U.S. currency was changing hands at 1.7010 West German marks, up from 1.6940 marks late Friday. Against the Japanese currency the dollar fetched 159.15 yen, up from 158.45.

During the weekend, West Germany's central bank proposed conversion of East marks to deutsche marks at a 2-for-1 rate, rather than at a more politically acceptable but potentially inflationary 1-for-1 rate.

The Bundesbank proposal created a furor in the two Germanys. The West German chancellor, Helmut Kohl, under heavy political pressure from East and West alike, said his government had not committed itself.

''People sold the mark on that,'' said trader Renato Strauss of Bank Julius Baer & Co. in New York.

Britain's pound sagged on world markets after a London demonstration against a highly unpopular poll tax turned to rioting.

But Credit Lyonnais' chief corporate trader, Carol Callanan, said the pound rose from its day lows, perhaps on the view that British interest rates would stay high even if Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher were to resign.

Other dollar rates: 1.5035 Swiss francs, up from 1.4982; 5.7190 French francs, up from 5.7030; and 1,251.25 Italian lire, unchanged.

The British pound slumped to $1.6340 from $1.6460.

In Europe, the dollar closed higher. It finished in Frankfurt at 1.7020 marks against 1.6960 Friday and moved up in Zurich to 1.5050 Swiss francs from 1.5017 at the end of last week.

In London, the pound slid to $1.6305 against $1.6460.

Traders cited reduced confidence in the ruling Conservative government after weekend riots in central London following a demonstration against the poll tax, a new personal tax that replaces property levies.

The dollar was up in Paris at 5.7210 French francs against 5.6980. It rose as well in Brussels, at 35.1850 Belgian francs against 35.1350, and in Milan, at 1,252.90 lire against 1,249.35.

In Tokyo earlier, the dollar defied Bank of Japan intervention to soar to a 39-month-high of 159.95 yen, against 157.65 Friday. Purchases by institutional investors sent the unit above 160 yen in morning trading.

''The current market is totally pro-dollar,'' said Masao Takahashi, managing director at Chemical Bank, adding another raise of the official discount rate could stop the yen's further fall.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $370.25 an ounce, off from $370.50 Friday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $369.80 an ounce, down from $370.20. In Zurich, gold finished unchanged at $368.50 an ounce. London gold fell to $369 an ounce from $369.75.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.965 an ounce, off from $4.97. The Comex closed spot silver at $4.946 an ounce, up from $4.945. Zurich silver closed unchanged at $4.95 an ounce. London silver fell to $4.96 an ounce from $4.97.

NEW YORK (APRIL 2) UPI - The stock market closed broadly lower Monday in one of the lightest sessions of the year after the blue chips almost erased an early sharp drop sparked by the second-worst loss ever on the Tokyo market.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 20.49 Friday, lost 6.76 to close at 2700.45 after being down more than 20 points in early trading.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.77 to 186.08 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 1.24 to 338.70. The price of an average share slumped 13 cents.

Declines easily led advances 1,131-424 among the 1,983 issues crossing the NYSE tape, but the margin was down from as much as 10 to 1 in early trading. Big Board volume was 124,360,000 shares, compared with 139,340,000 shares traded Friday, the fourth-lightest trading day of the year.

Tokyo stocks suffered their second-largest one-day decline Monday, losing 6.6 percent of their value amid speculation that Japan's economic boom could be coming to an end.

The blue-chip Nikkei index plummeted 1,978.38 points, or 6.6 percent, to 28,002.07, its lowest level since November 7, 1988. The plunge was second only to the record 3,836.48-point loss in the aftermath of the global market crash in October 1987.

Analysts blamed the plunge on a falling Japanese yen, rising interest rates and a report that insurance companies, major investors in the market have moved to sell stocks. The Finance Ministry, attempting to stop the market plunge, said it investigated and found the report to be groundless.

While prices in New York opened sharply lower, they did not immediately extend the early declines, and the blue chips bounced back late in the session to close with only modest losses. Bargain hunting was responsible for the late rebound, analysts said.

''It seemed the real buyers were waiting for the market to fall out of bed but by late morning there was just no liquidation interest left and buyers nibbled away for the rest of the day,'' said Michael Metz, analyst at Oppenheimer & Co.

''I think most investors are undercommitted to the market and looking for an entry point rather than an exit. So when the market goes down on dull volume, like it did today, it attracts bargain hunters,'' he said.

On the trading floor, Amax was the most active issue, up 1/2 to 28 1/4 amid ongoing speculation about a potential takeover bid.

Fleet/Norstar Financial Group followed, down 5/8 to 21 1/4. Reports said the company has disclosed that regulators are examining its operations.

Network Equipment Technologies was third, plummeting 6 3/8 to 23 1/2 after a disappointing earnings estimate for the March quarter.

American General was also active, tumbling 1 7/8 to 36 3/4 after Torchmark withdrew a $50-a-share takeover bid. Torchmark said it would propose a slate of nominees for election to American General's board at the company's May 2 annual meeting, but American General rejected Torchmark's nominations.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T lost 3/8 to 41 5/8, IBM fell 3/8 to 105 7/8 Woolworth was down 3/8 to 62 3/4, Merck gained 3/4 to 70 3/8 and Coca-Cola jumped 1 3/8 to 76.

Elsewhere, General Development plunged 1 7/8 to 4. The company, unable to reach agreement on a credit facility over the weekend, is weighing filing for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection, among other alternatives.

Hotel Investors fell 1/2 to 4 1/2 after revising an agreement to sell some hotel interests. The new accord calls for the sale of fewer hotels for less money, reports said. The company also reported a large loss for 1989.

And Columbia Savings and Loan, once the most profitable thrift in the country, sank 23/32 to 13/32. Columbia said it is insolvent because of huge losses in its junk-bond portfolio.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 144,564,980 shares, compared with 165,985,030 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed sharply lower in active trading on the American Stock Exchange.

The Amex Market Value index fell 2.38 to close at 359.00. Declines led advances 397-166 among the 816 issues traded. The price of an average share lost 8 cents. Composite volume totaled 16,001,200 shares, compared with 19,800,955 shares traded Friday.

Denmark's put warrants on the Tokyo stock market's Nikkei index led the Amex issues, up 3/4 to 11 3/4. The warrants allow investors to profit from the Tokyo market's declines.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 2.36 to 433.18.

CHICAGO (APRIL 3) UPI - Directors of UAL Corp., facing a $5.2 billion buyout bid from United Airlines employees backed by UAL's biggest stockholder, met Monday to review progress in negotiations with the employee group.

There was no word on what progress, if any, had been made in weekend talks with representatives of the three employee unions and their financial advisers. An investment banking source, however, said directors were seeking to have more cash included in the proposed deal.

The current proposal would give shareholders $150 per share in cash, $25 per share in 10-year senior subordinated notes bearing 15 percent interest and non-voting common stock constituting 25 percent of the new company's total common equity. The remaining 75 percent would be held by an Employee Stock Ownership Plan.

Directors - led by Chairman Stephen Wolf - were said to be seeking at least $200 a share in cash, as well as some solid commitments for bank financing.

The agenda of Monday's special board meeting, held via telephone hookup, was kept secret and no statement was released.

An investment banker said UAL's financial advisers have drawn up a preliminary plan for the selling off of assets as directed by the board, but it was not known if the plan was reviewed during the session - the second special UAL board meeting in four days.

''I think probably they just got a briefing on the status of negotiations '' the source said.

Directors of UAL, parent of United, reluctantly agreed March 22 to begin negotiations with United's three employee unions - the Association of Flight Attendants, the Air Line Pilots Association and the International Association of Machinists - on the new employee buyout proposal.

But the board said at the time that it believed the bid combining cash, debt and equity, valued by analysts at as much as $5.2 billion, was inadequate.

Directors have instructed UAL advisers to develop a plan for asset dispositions and to consider other proposals to maximize shareholder value. UAL revised a standstill agreement to allow investor Marvin Davis - who put UAL in play last summer with a $240-a-share offer - to begin buying stock.

Davis, however, has given no indication he is interested. He has been unavailable for comment and his New York spokesman refused to comment on whether the billionaire Los Angeles investor has renewed his interest in UAL.

The three unions and Condor Partners - UAL's biggest stockholder, with 11.8 percent of the outstanding common stock - joined forces last month behind the employee bid.

Condor has threatened a proxy battle to unseat UAL directors at the company's April 26 annual meeting as a means of paving the way for employee acquisition of the company. The unions and Condor, however, have asked the UAL board to begin negotiations on the buyout before the proxy contest began.

While the employee group and Condor have refused to estimate the total value of their pending buyout offer, Robert Decker, airline industry analyst for the Chicago-based investment-rating firm Duff & Phelps, estimated the combination of cash, debt and equity to be worth about $230 a share, or $5.2 billion.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - Chase Manhattan Bank announced Monday it has created a Japanese corporate finance group offering services to Japanese corporations and the Japanese government in the United States.

The new unit, organized under the North America Corporate Finance Sector of the bank and headed by former Merrill Lynch Japan specialist Mark J. Lerner, will also serve U.S. companies with interests in Japan.

The business will provide services in the areas of financing, mergers and acquisitions, private placements and joint ventures, a Chase statement said.

''We expect to provide Japanese clients with a level of service unique to any such group on Wall Street,'' Lerner said. ''We will combine the finesse and expertise of an investment banking effort with the strength of Chase's strong commercial banking presence.''

He said the Chase unit will provide the same quality of service to Japanese companies as is afforded major U.S. corporations. Lerner said his unit would work closely with Chase's merchant banking operation to assist Japanese clients in acquisitions and other direct investments.

In Japan, Chase is involved in corporate finance and securities activities as well as transaction and information services and is the leading clearer of U.S. dollar transactions in the Tokyo market, the company said.

Chase said Chase Manhattan Trust and Banking Co. of Japan is the third-largest foreign trust bank there.

Analysis By: Joan Hanauer

NEW YORK (APRIL 2) UPI - "The Marshall Chronicles" opens with 17-year-old Marshall Brightman waking up and saying with dismay, "Oh God, I'm still in high school."

It's a droll, off-beat sitcom about the life of a high school senior in New York City that premieres on ABC Wednesday, April 4, 9:30-10 p.m. Eastern time.

There is a theory that only aspiring teenagers, fellow teenagers and masochistic adults enjoy sitcoms about teenagers, who in real life are not always a laugh riot to live with. "The Marshall Chronicles" is a sitcom about teenagers for people who normally don't like sitcoms about teenagers.

The story is told from viewpoint of Marshall Brightman, an intelligent, highly aware young man played engagingly by Joshua Rifkind. He often speaks directly into the camera, ala "The Wonder Years."

Marshall displays a disarmingly intelligent view of his life, his surroundings and even the animals in the zoo known as the New York subway system. The grafitti shown on the subway cars is history in New York, but this show is made on a sound stage in Los Angeles.

In the opening show he must deal with Leslie, a girl who talks like a machine gun and is worried about the zit that ate Pittsburgh. He loves Melissa, who has just broken up with Johnny, who has the I.Q. of a brisket. The plot, about Leslie's desire for a tattoo, is not the show's strong point.

That's Marshall himself, showing the audience life through his eyes. There are his teachers. They range from the guy whose classroom is out of control and who tries to exert his authority, saying, "All right, just put the desk down please," to the self-styled with-it type who calls Socrates "a righteous dude."

At home, his mother asks if he wants her to be one of those parents who just stands around, oblivious to what's going on in his life. "No," Marshall says, "I've got Dad for that."

Rifkind, who plays Marshall, is 24 to his character's 17. "It's not hard for me to play this kid because I feel a certain kinship with Marshall," Rifkind said in an interview. "I was a lot like Marshall is now when I was in high school."

They were not alike in that Marshall goes to high school in New York, while Rifkind, a fourth generation Angelino, attended Beverly Hills High, where the drama department is almost a vocational school.

"The problems I faced as a high school student and that Marshall faces are the same for students all over the country. It's not important whether it's New York or Beverly Hills or Idaho," Rifkind said.

He always wanted to be an actor. "When I was very small I didn't entertain my parents' party guests with scenes from 'An American in Paris,"' he said "but from the time I was in high school I knew acting was something I wanted to do. It was a gift I had been given and I wanted to pursue it very seriously."

Rifkind began pursuing his career after graduating from college and taking a year off to travel around Europe and North Africa. In his first professional audition, he beat out 800 and 1,000 candidates by landing the starring role on "The Marshall Chronicles."

Rifkind said he and Marshall have differences that he must remember in playing the role. "His perspective isn't my perspective," Rifkind said. "Any reflections he has on the world or specifically about his own sexuality or ability to perform in the world have not been tempered by years in the same way my reflections are. My perspective has a certain patina that Marshall's doesn't have."

Molly Dodd is beginning a new series of days and nights, pregnant and unsure who the father is.

"The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd" begins its fourth season, airing on the Lifetime cable network Friday, April 6, 10:30-11 p.m. Eastern time, and Blair Brown gave an update on the character.

"The first show confirms the fact that she is, in fact, pregnant," Brown said in an interview. "When we left off last year it seemed very likely. But she won't have the baby until episode 20 or so. We're stretching this out as long as we can.

"I have all different size pregnancy pads. They're nice because everybody's always giving you a seat so I'm reaping some benefits. Also when I have to wear wireless mikes I can hide the battery packs right in my kangaroo pouch. I may never deliver."

Is the father detective Nathaniel Hawthorne or her ex-lover Moss Goodman? "That's in the formative stages," she said. "It's not something we know in the first 13 episodes."

She explained the decision to get Molly pregnant, saying: "You can't stick to the same format forever. As the character grows, she changes. The relationship with her ex-husband has to go through some changes. How do you maintain the tensions of the relationships?

"The show can't endlessly be Molly and Mr. Right. She has to get into other relationships. That's the reason we decided she should have a child. Her life will be a lot different when she has a child."

DALLAS (APRIL 3) UPI - MCorp Monday reported a loss of $28.3 million in 1989, compared with a loss of $977.8 million in 1988.

The bankholding company, once the second largest in Texas, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy on April 4, 1989, after federal regulators declared 20 of its 25 banks insolvent and closed them.

In the 1989 results, the company showed the operations of its remaining five banks as discontinued operations because the management has decided to sell them.

MCorp said the $28.3 million loss was made up of a $16 million loss from continuing operations and $12.3 million loss from discontinued operations.

The loss from continuing operations resulted from non-interest expense of $22.3 million which included professional fees of $10.4 million and personnel expense of $4.6 million.

The loss was partially offset by net interest income of $5.8 million. That income was favorably affected in 1989 by non-accrual of interest for the last nine months of the year on about $470 million of unsecured debt for borrowed money, the company said.

In the first quarter of 1990, MCorp completed the sale of MVestment, a trust and investment subsidiary, for $120 million to Cleveland-based AmeriTrust Co. That sale produced a gain of $96.3 million.

In the first quarter of this year, MCorp entered into definitive agreement for the sale of two other banking subsidairies, MBank Corpus Christi and MBank El Paso.

''The company is also evaluating various alternatives with respect to the dispositon of its other banking subsidiaries (in Brownsville, New Braunfels and Waco) and its remaining assets in connection with, or prior to, filing a plan of reorganizaiton,'' the company said.

A wholly-owned subsidiary of MCorp entered into an earnest money contract March 9 for the sale of undeveloped land in downtown Houston for $24 million cash.

South African President F-W de Klerk told a joint session of parliament today that he's ordering army troops deployed across the country to fight an outbreak of fighting between rival black factions.

De Klerk predicted mass detentions and a continuation of the 46-month-old state of emergency to crush the UNrest, particularly in Natal province, where he says it has reached ''shocking proportions.''

But he declared his reform program on track and announced he'll meet anti-apartheid leader Nelson Mandela later this week.

De Klerk says he's proceeding with pre-conditions for peace talks with Mandale's African National Congress... including the release today of eight political prisoners and granting temporary indemnity for A-N-C leaders to come to South Africa to participate in the talks.

Mandela last week canceled peace talks scheduled for next week after 11 anti-government demonstrators were shot and killed by police near Johannesburg.

At the same time... Mandela toured violence-ravaged Natal, where his followers have been clashing with followers of Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi's Inkatha movement.

Mandela said he wanted to meet with Buthelezi and assure his followers he wants peace.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - Shearson Lehman Hutton Holdings Inc. will take a stunning $630 million restructuring charge for its efforts to boost profitability, the largest one-time charge in Wall Street history, the company said Monday.

A combination of the restructuring charge, operating losses and another one-time accounting charge is expected to result in a first-quarter loss of $897 million to $917 million, the securities firm said.

Shearson said it is predicting a first-quarter operating loss - before restructuring charges - of approximately $110 million to $130 million, reflecting a slowdown in business and industry conditions in January and February.

The first-quarter restructuring charge of approximately $630 million reflects Shearson's recent cost-cutting efforts, which have included laying off some 2,000 employees, withdrawing from some businesses and scaling back in others, the company said.

The one-time charge taken for a change in accounting principle amounts to $157 million, Shearson said.

Prior to Shearson's move, the largest charge ever taken by a securities firm was the $470 million one taken by Merrill Lynch & Co. in January, also as a result of restructuring efforts.

Shearson has been trying in recent months to complete a recapitalization program to stave off a downgrading of its credit rating.

Analysts attribute Shearson's troubles to a drop in individual investor business following the 1987 stock market crash, problems in its real estate unit and an expansion in the 1980s that included acquisition of E.F. Hutton & Co.

Moody's Investors Service Inc., in response to Shearson's announcement, confirmed the ratings of Shearson's senior debt and commercial paper as well as the ratings of the subordinated debt and commercial paper of Shearson's broker-dealer subsidiary, Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc.

''Both the special provisions as well as the operating loss were consistent with expectations in view of Shearson's problem asset exposures and depressed conditions in the wholesale and retail securities markets,'' Moody's said.

''Shearson's ratings are supported by its close relationship with its parent, American Express Co.,'' the rating agency added.

As a result of the charge and cost-cutting efforts, the company said it expects to realize improved annual profits of more than $400 million.

The benefits, along with a $1.15 billion capital boost from American Express and outside investors, should begin to be realized in the second quarter, the company said.

The restructuring charge included the cost of Shearson's decision to withdraw from principal real estate activities, cease originating limited partnerships, sell its high-yield portfolios, cut back dozens of branch offices and reduce some overseas business.

''Our decisions to withdraw from some activities and downsize others will allow us to devote all out energy and resources to building businesses that are well positioned to compete in the 1990s,'' said Howard L. Clark Jr., Shearson's chairman, president and chief executive officer, in a statement.

''Our aim moving forward is to expand on the leadership positions we currently enjoy in four key businesses: individual investor services, investment banking, capital markets and asset management,'' he said.

Clark, formerly chief financial officer at American Express, assumed the helm at Shearson earlier this year. He succeeded Peter Cohen, who was forced to resign after disagreements with American Express on ways to finance its struggling subsidiary.

Clark launched a strategic review of Shearson's core business in an effort to boost profitability, and further layoffs are expected.

Included in the restructuring charge is $230 million for the closing of some corporate offices, international offices and 67 domestic branches; $115 million to high-yield securities portfolios; and $45 million in severance payments to laid-off employees.

The $1.15 billion in additional capital included an infusion from American Express of $750 million in equity and $250 million in money market preferred and $150 million in senior capital notes placed with outside institutional investors.

Last week, Shearson and American Express also reached a definitive agreement on American Express' plan to buy all the outstanding shares of Shearson in a deal estimated at $370 million.

CHICAGO (APRIL 3) UPI - West Point Acquisition Corp., William Farley's vehicle for acquiring West Point-Pepperell Inc. in a $1.6 billion buyout, said Monday it has defaulted on bank loans and subordinated bonds used to finance the deal and would seek to restructure debt.

The company issued a statement saying that its $796 million tender offer bank credit facility was not paid on the due date last Friday and that interest payments due Monday to holders of subordinated bonds also would not be paid on schedule.

''West Point Acquisition has been in negotiations with its tender-offer banks and has made an exchange offer to its subordinated bondholders in an effort to restructure its debt,'' the statement said.

''The outcome of these negotiations cannot be predicted,'' West Point Acquisition said, adding it was ''hopeful'' a ''satisfactory'' restructuring can be achieved.

West Point Acquisition emphasized the defaults do not affect subsidiary West Point-Pepperell Inc., which remains a public company listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

West Point-Pepperell closed at $37 a share, down $1.25, in trading on the New York Stock Exchange Monday.

West Point Acquisition holds 95 percent of the outstanding West Point-Pepperell stock, purchased last year under a $58-a-share tender offer.

The West Point Acquisition statement noted an amended credit facility for West Point-Pepperell was signed recently, eliminating cross defaults on West Point-Pepperell's debts in the event of a default by West Point Acquisition.

A bond analyst said West Point Acquisition is seeking to delay interest payments on its subordinated notes for as long as three years and, in exchange, is offering holders of subordinated notes an equity position in the company.

West Point Acquisition acquired the 95 percent stake in West Point, Ga.-based West Point-Pepperell last April in a bitter takeover battle that dragged on for six months.

The tender offer was financed by $1.4 billion in bridge loans, a mix of high-interest bank loans and junk bonds. Farley was to obtain permanent financing to pay off the bank loans and acquire the remaining 5 percent of West Point stock by last November.

But hard times in the junk-bond market made it impossible for Farley to put together workable permanent financing. Farley had been banking on the sale of West Point's Cluett-Peabody subsidiary, which makes Arrow shirts, to help pay off high-interest bridge loans.

Farley reached a long-delayed agreement last month with Biddermann SA, a French clothier, on the sale of Cluett-Peabody, but the deal fetched considerably less than the $600 million Farley had expected.

Banks, including Wells Fargo Bank and Bankers Trust Co., agreed to extend the bridge loans, but the status of those loans was in doubt following West Point Acquisition's failure to make the interest payments scheduled for last Friday.

Officials of West Point-Pepperell and Farley's firm - Farley Inc. - were unavailable for comment on the developments, and spokesmen for Wells Fargo Bank and Bankers Trust refused to comment.

Chicago-based Farley Inc., is a diversified, privately owned company with assets of $1.5 billion, operating such manufacturing businesses as Fruit of the Loom, in which it holds a controlling 19.5 percent interest, Acme Boot and Doehler-Jarvis.

Farley has insisted that West Point-Pepperell is a natural addition to Farley Inc.'s textile holdings. But analysts have questioned this, saying there is little common ground between Fruit of the Loom's underwear business and the Pepperell line, which aside from Arrow shirts, consists primarily of bed and bath textiles.

(APRIL 2) UPI - Buffalo, New York, Mayor James Griffin is offering the city's cash-strapped transit authority one-Million dollars with ''NO strings attached'' to end a two-day shutdown of mass transit service.

But Governor Mario Cuomo says the state has NO money to restore bus and train service in New York's second-largest city.

135-thousand commuters had to make it to work or school on their own today. Absentee rates were running at 60 percent in some high schools.

The Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority refused another bail-out offer last night... continuing a shutdown of all transportation service.

Erie County legislators offered to steer county tax money to the beleaguered transit system, including a percentage of the county sales tax and a real estate transfer tax.

But authority commissioners said the four-year deal would NOT provide enough funding and would force the authority to make a 20 percent cut in bus and train service... increase the basic one-dollar fare by 10 cents... and force the layoff of about 125 workers.

One legislator described the agreement as ''half a loaf,'' but urged commissioners to approve it anyway. Commissioners say they'll hold out for a better offer. Transit union workers are urging new taxes and NO layoffs.

Pittsburgh residents are hoping the three-day supply of water the city has in reserve will outlast the fuel spill that's making water from the Allegheny River UNusable right now.

Emergency officials say as much as 200-thousand gallons of fuel spilled into the river when a landslide apparently ruptured a 10-inch pipeline at Freeport. Pennsylvania, Friday.

One-Million people along the river are under mandatory or voluntary conservation orders.

One emergecy official said- quote- ''God forbid someone should have a fire somewhere.'' The spill forced seven Allegheny County school districts to cancel classes today.

Most Pittsburgh area businesses remain open... but managers are reducing water usage... restaurants are serving water only upon request and using paper plates to cutdown dishwasher use. Water cooler companies are reporting fantastic business.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - Federated Department Stores Inc. and Allied Stores Corp. posted combined operating losses of more than $45 million in February, according to figures the companies released Monday.

Specifically, Federated and Allied recorded monthly operating losses of $29.8 million and $15.8 million, respectively. These amounts are before bankruptcy costs.

The information was included in a filing the companies, both owned by the Canadian company Campeau Corp., made with the trustee of the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Cincinnati. The subsidiaries filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors Jan 15.

Despite the losses, the companies said the February results ''reflect a significant improvement over losses in the January post-filing period.''

Respective operating losses experienced by Federated and Allied in the 20 days ended Feb. 3 were $37.8 million and 19 million.

''We view February results as reflecting the stabilization of our department store operations,'' Carol Sanger, vice president of corporate communications for Federated and Allied, said in a statement.

Sales ''trended upward'' throughout February, she noted, but the companies continued to experience some inventory shortfalls, especially in certain electronics areas, during the month.

''Across all merchandise areas, however, we ended February with stocks in better shape than we had anticipated,'' Sanger said.

''This reflects the significant progress that has been made in returning to normal vendor-supplier relations'' since Allied and Federated filed their Chapter 11 petitions.

(APRIL 2) UPI - A Washington, D-C, jury is deliberating the fate of former national security adviser John Poindexter. Poindexter is charged with five felonies in the Iran-Contra scandal... involving obstruction of Congress, conspiracy and the destruction of official government documents.

U-S District Judge Harold Greene today gave jurors strict instructions in what they could and could NOT consider in deciding Poindexter's guilt or innocence.

Greene said the jury can NOT consider ''who was right and who was wrong between Congress and the White House''... whether former President Reagan was correct or wrong in supporting the Nicaraguan Contras... or whether the arms deals with Iran constituted ''a wise or UNwise policy.''

Greene also told the jury it is NOT a proper defense to decide that Poindexter acted on direct or indirect instructions from Reagan to violate the law.

Poindexter NEVER took the stand to defend himself. The judge cautioned the jurors that Poindexter exercised his ''absolute right'' and they could draw NO inference of guilt from the fact.

The U-S Supreme Court today agreed to consider whether punitive damages are getting too big.

The case involves an insurance salesman who pocketed group health premiums from city workers in Roosevelt City, Alabama. When the workers couldN'T get their medical bills paid, they sued.

The salesman worked for Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, but sold the insurance through another firm. But the jury found Pacific Mutual liable for the acts of its employee, and fined the company more than one-Million dollars.

Last year, the court said such jury awards are NOT prohibited by the Constitutional ban against excessive fines. But it left open the chance that excessive fines could violate the due process clause of the 14th Amendment.

In another case, the court refused to enter a dispute between automakers and crash victims. The victims wanted manufacturers to be held liable for failing to equip vehicles with airbags.

The high court also let stand a Maryland ruling that a formal court hearing is NOT required to revoke the license of a day care facility charged with child abuse.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (APRIL 2) UPI - A clandestine group that claimed responsibility for a recent attack on two Poles in the Lebanese capital issued a warning to France Monday, saying it would attack French interests unless the body of an Arab man was returned within a month.

''We are giving the French government an ultimatum of one month to return the remains of martyr Sulieman Halabi to any Arab soil,'' said the organization, which calls itself the Revolutionary Action Organization, the Arab Resistance Front - the Martyr Suleiman Halabi Unit.

''This is a warning to the French government before we take any action against the French interests,'' the group said in a handwritten statement delivered to the offices of a Western news agency in Moslem west Beirut.

The organization did not further identify Halabi, nor did it say how he had been killed or how the French government was involved.

The same group claimed responsibility Friday for an attack on two Polish citizens in west Beirut. The attack was described as a ''warning'' to the Polish government, which had offered to let Jews leaving the Soviet Union travel via Warsaw to Israel.

Gunmen in a speeding car shot and wounded Bugdan Sarkis, 47, an employee at the Polish Consulate, and his wife Eva, 30, outside the Bristol hotel in the Syrian-policed west Beirut late Friday.

The two Poles were hit with several bullets and rushed to the nearby American University hospital, where doctors said their lives ''were not in danger.''

The Polish government condemned the attack as an act of terrorism and asserted that it stood by its offer to assist Soviet Jews.

(APRIL 2) UPI - President Bush today tried to make allies of American broadcasters worried about U-S efforts to beam television broadcasts into Cuba.

Bush urged the National Association of Broadcasters convention in Atlanta to stand for ''the free flow of ideas'' of T-V Marti .

The programming is funded by Congress and is to include a variety of American shows... from sitcoms to news and sports. Organizers have promised UNbiased broadcasts, but a clear objective is to show Cuba images of democracy and better lifestyles.

Bush got a cool reception from group. N-A-B President Edward Fritts issued a statement after the president's speech, saying broadcasters are concerned the planned transmissions will interfere with Florida T-V stations.

Fritts also raised concerns about Cuban threats to jam commercial radio waves in the United States in retaliation.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (APRIL 3) UPI - Salvadoran armed forces have stepped up surveillance in the Gulf of Fonseca but cannot verify U.S. reports of arms shipments from Nicaragua to leftist rebels, officials said Monday.

Vice President Francisco Merino denied that rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front had been receiving weapons from Nicaragua since the Sandinista government lost Feb. 25 elections.

''There has been a certain amount of speculation on that, but the armed forces have not reported anything,'' Merino told reporters.

Merino was responding to a report that U.S. officials in Washington had mentioned a ''notable increase'' in arms shipments through the Gulf of Fonseca, a waterway that links Nicaragua with southeastern El Salvador.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jefferson Brown said the report ''comes from U.S. intelligence sources. I can't say anything clearer than that.''

A spokesman for the Salvadoran armed forces said the military has ''slight suspicions'' but has found no evidence of recent arms shipments to the rebels.

The armed forces have exercised close control over the Salvadoran Pacific coast, particularly in the Gulf of Fonseca, which is where arms could be introduced from Nicaragua, the spokesman said.

''In any event, the armed forces are aware of this situation and have stepped up their patrols and vigilance,'' he added.

The government of President Alfredo Cristiani suspended diplomatic relations with Nicaragua last November when two light aircraft with Nicaraguan registrations crashed in southeastern El Salvador and spilled their loads of surface-to-air missiles.

The contents of one of the planes was reportedly picked up by rebels.

Cristiani has said he will resume relations with Nicaragua when U.S.-backed President-elect Violeta Chamorro takes office April 25.

Salvadoran rebels have made no comment on the charges, but they said last month that ''weapons are no problem, we can buy them anywhere in the world that there is a market.''

The rebels were responding to remarks by Cristiani that they had been left isolated and weakened following the Sandinistas' electoral defeat in Nicaragua.

British authorities say the afternoon quake caused only minor damage. It measured five-point-two on the Richter scale at the epicenter near Wrexham in north Wales.

British Geological Survey seismologist Roger Musson says it ''was near the top end of the scale'' for British earthquakes.

UNconfirmed reports had chimneys falling, damaged buildings, and broken windows.

Seismologists measured the tremor at four-point-four on the Richter scale.

The University of Washington pegged the epicenter just outside Deming, near the Canadian border in northwest Washington state.

A guard at Stangeways Prison in Manchester, England, says the facility looks ''like a bomb site.''

Authorities are struggling to regain control following an inmate riot yesterday against prison conditions. Authorities say 12 staff members and 35 inmates were injured in skirmishes. The chapel and a gymnasium were badly damaged by fire.

The B-B-C reports half of the prison's 10 buildings are under control. More than 100 prisoners are still on the loose.

Observers say police have NOT stormed the buildings and instead seem to be trying to wear down the inmates.

The Home Office, which oversees Britain's prison system, could NOT confirm reports from inmates that a dozen people had been killed in the rioting. The prison was built in 1868 for 970 inmates, but now houses about 16-hundred.

Prison guards say they had warned officials there would be a major disruption, but there was NO response.

The riots coincided with a weekend of anti-tax rioting in several British cities. Dozens of people were arraigned on public disorder and looting charges today.

(APRIL 3) UPI - Major league owners and the players union ended their wrangling over the size of the Opening Day rosters Monday, agreeing to use 27 players through April 30.

The two sides had reached an initial agreement on the 27-player limit when the lockout ended March 19. However, last week negotiations between the two sides broke down on how the service would be counted for the extra players carried for the first three weeks of the season.

''Considering the time involved to get the players ready, this is a good idea, especially from the pitching standpoint,'' said Dodger coach Bill Russell. ''We now have the opportunity to keep from taking a toll on our pitching staff and to give some players a chance to play in the big leagues.''

The owners and players were worried about injuries that might result due to the shortened spring training.

''This is the best way to do it,'' said Dodger infielder Mickey Hatcher. ''We were looking at a situation where the risk of injury would be very serious. This takes a lot of the pressure off. We can save a lot of wear and tear on the pitching staff.''

In other news, Paul Molitor, the Milwaukee Brewers' leadoff hitter who signed a $3 million contract during the winter, was placed on the 15-day disabled list with a broken thumb. Molitor, 33, can not rejoin the club until April 17 but probably will miss more time, the team said.

And Lithuania retreats in its showdown with Moscow...

These stories... and more... next, from United Press International:

County lawmakers tonight agreed on a funding plan to end a two-day shutdown of the public transportation system in Buffalo, New York.

Bus and train service should resume normal operations tomorrow morning.

An Erie County official says the plan includes 750-thousand dollars from New York state and one-Million dollars from the city of Buffalo. It also adds a ''rearrangement'' of other money.

The funding plan also includes using a portion of the county sales tax. UNlike an earlier plan, it does NOT include severe service cuts NOR the layoffs of 125 employees.

Buffalo's bankrupt transit system shut down early yesterday morning... turning the city into the largest American city without public transportation. An estimated 135-thousand commuters today resorted to car pools, bicycles and their feet to get to work and school.

In 1981, Israel used U-S-made F-16 jets to destroy Iraq's French-built nuclear reactor southeast of Baghdad. Jerusalem claimed Iraq was working on an atomic bomb.

Saddam said today at a military ceremony that- quote- ''We DON'T need an atomic bomb because we have advanced chemical weapons. I swear to God... we will let our fire eat half of Israel if it tries anything against Iraq.''

I-N-A quotes Saddam hinting that the recent ruckus over Iraq trying to import U-S nuclear triggers through Britian might be a cover for Israel to launch another attack against Iraq.

Saddam reminded listeners that Iraq proved its chemical weapons technology at the end of the Iran-Iraq war. At the time, Iraq used chemical weapons against its own minority Kurdish population.

(APRIL 2) UPI - The Republican National Committee says chairman Lee Atwater has entered a New York City hospital to undergo radiation treatment for a brain tumor.

Doctors found the tumor in his brain last month, but diagnosed it as NON-malignant. They say regular radiation treatments would probably lead to a full recovery.

Doctors still describe the tumor as NON-malignant, but say they've discovered it has the potential to grow. To prevent that growth, Atwater will undergo what is called ''aggressive'' radiation treatment.

It involves inserting radioactive isotopes into the tumor for five days. The procedure is performed under local anesthesia. Atwater is expected to take several weeks to recover.

President Bush wished Atwater well during a G-O-P fundraiser in Cincinnati tonight.

A doctor says Ryan White... the teen-age AIDS victim who attracted nationwide attention five years ago... has ''the most critical infection he's ever had.''

White was admitted to an Indianapolis hospital Thursday. His physician... Dr. Martin Kleiman... said White is hooked up to a chemical ventilator to aid his breathing and is heavily sedated in the intensive care unit.

White is now 18. He contracted AIDS from a blood treatment for hemophilia in 1984.

Because White is a hemophiliac, surgery would be a last resort because of the chance of severe bleeding. Family spokeswoman Carrie Jackson Van Dyke says White has been suffering internal bleeding.

Five years ago, White... then 13 years old... was banned from school near Kokomo, Indiana, for having AIDS. He was allowed to return to school in 1986 after a yearlong court battle.

His eighth-grade school year passed virtually without incident. When his family moved to Cicero, Indiana, students welcomed White and expressed little concern about having a classmate with AIDS.

Lithuania's president moved to defuse the crisis with the Soviet Union today. He sent Mikhail Gorbachev a telegram saying Vilnius does NOT want to harm the policy of perestroika.

The Tass news agency says President Landsbergis told parliament the act of proclaiming independence does NOT mean an immediate break from Moscow. He says Lithuania may be willing to wait for independence.

The U-S Supreme Court has upheld a lower court order barring the state of California from executing death row inmate Robert Alton Harris. Harris was scheduled to die in the gas chamber tomorrow morning for two murders in 1978.

An Allegheny County commissioner says the oil spill moving toward Pittsburgh may be worse than a much larger spill on the Allegheny River two years ago. 200-thousand-gallons of fuel is fouling the water supply for one-Million people.

(APRIL 2) UPI - West German Chancellor Kohl says Bonn has NOT yet decided whether East and West German currencies will be merged at a proposed 2-1 exchange rate. East officials say that would wipe out the savings of elderly East Germans.

Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater was admitted to a New York City hospital today for treatment of a small brain tumor doctors fear may get worse. The 39-year-old Atwater will undergo radiation implant treatment.

Lava flowing from the Kilauea Volcano today forced the evacuation of 50 homes in the Kalapana Gardens neighborhood on Hawaii's big island. Civil Defense officials say it's the most serious threat to the area since 1986.

A coalition of environmental groups is suing the U-S Forest Service. The National Audubon Society, the Sierra Club and other conservation organizations claim the forest service has become a ''tree farm'' for the timber industry.

The World Health Organization says preventable diseases among children and smoking among adults are responsible for more than 50-Million deaths world-wide each year. That includes 39-Million deaths in developing countries.

American adverturer Bill Arras is claiming a record of sorts. Arras says he flew a hot air balloon across the frozen U-S-Soviet Bering Strait border without Soviet permission... then flew back to the American side when the wind shifted.

(APRIL 2) UPI - It appears the transit authority of Buffalo, New York, finally got what it wanted. The authority tonight voted to resume service tomorrow morning after a two-day shutdown that left commuters scrambling to come up with ways to get to and from work today. The approved package includes 10-Million, 200-thousand dollars in county, city and state aid the first year. It also calls for raising fares by a dime to one dollar, ten cents.

The fuel spill in Pennsylvania's Allegheny River is beginning to break up. But nearly one-Million people in the Pittburgh area are still under mandatory or voluntary water conservation orders until the water is deemed safe again. Local officials are blasting the Buckeye Pipeline Company for taking six hours to report the spill after a landslide ruptured a pipeline Friday.

The president of Lithuania is compromising in a showdown with Moscow. Vytautas Landsbergis said in Vinlius today that Lithuania's declaration of independence last month does NOT mean immediate independence. He also said he means NO harm to reforms in the Soviet Union. Yet Landsbergis refused to give in to Soviet President Gorbachev's demand that Lithuania renounce independence.

A jury began deliberations today in the Iran-Contra trial of former national security adviser John Poindexter. DALLAS (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Lomas Financial Corporation (NYSE: LFC) announced today that it has executed an agreement with General Electric Capital Corporation (GECC) to sell the common stock of its commercial leasing subsidiary, ELLCO Leasing Corporation, for approximately $161 million in cash and the assumption of $1.009 billion of debt and $30.6 million of preferred stock. The purchase price represents estimated common stockholders' equity at closing minus $3 million of transaction adjustments. The purchase price is subject to final adjustment, based on the actual net worth of ELLCO on the closing date.

Completion of the sale requires approval of the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York. Lomas has filed an application with the Court to approve the sale and expects the hearing in the Court with respect to such sale will take place before the end of April. Completion of the sale is subject to normal closing conditions.

As a result of the execution of the agreement to sell ELLCO and its submission to the Court, the maturity of ELLCO's outstanding privately held debt, which amounts to approximately $617 million, has been extended to the earlier of May 31, 1990 or completion of the sale. Lomas indicated that as a result of the transaction, its consolidated debt will be reduced by approximately $1.009 billion, the current outstanding amount of ELLCO's short-term borrowings and term debt.

Jess Hay, chairman of Lomas, said that completion of the sale of ELLCO is a critical step toward Lomas' emergence from Chapter 11.

"While we were only able to achieve a sale price approximating book value, we are extremely pleased with the overall result. More than $1 billion in debt and preferred stock will be eliminated from our consolidated balance sheet and ELLCO, under GECC's ownership, will return to a position of prominence in servicing its customers and vendors," Hay said. "We are satisfied that the auction process has been comprehensive and that the transaction, as proposed, is in the company's best interest," he concluded.

WILMINGTON, DE (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Hercules Advanced Materials & Systems Co., an operating company of Hercules Inc. (NYSE: HPC) and Rhone-Poulenc S.A. (NYSE: RP Pr C) today announced an agreement for the development, marketing and sales of ceramic fibers.

The memorandum of understanding signed by Hercules and Rhone-Poulenc outlines terms of cooperation under which Hercules exclusively will market and sell Rhone-Poulenc's siliconcarbonitride fiber, called FIBERAMIC, in North America. The agreement also outlines terms for cooperative efforts in ceramic materials development.

FIBERAMIC is manufactured in France at a Rhone-Poulenc pilot facility. The agreement allows for production in the United States when market demand requires a domestic source.

FIBERAMIC is a multifilament, continuous ceramic fiber designed for use in high-temperature composite applications such as hypersonic aircraft structures and engines. It remains amorphous up to 1400 degrees Celsius, and this contributes to its excellent property retention at extreme temperature conditions.

FIBERAMIC is available as 250- or 500-filament continuous tow or as short fibers (0.8 mm, or 1/32 inch long). The fiber is used as a reinforcement for either ceramic, metal or high-temperature polymeric matrix composites.

Hercules Advanced Materials & Systems Co., an operating company of Hercules Inc., is one of the world's leading producers and users of carbon and graphite fibers for aerospace applications. The company also produces liquid molding resins for use in reaction injection molded products for the recreation and transportation industries. Ceramic products are one of the advanced materials targeted by the Hercules Advanced Materials & Systems Company for future growth.

Rhone-Poulenc develops and produces a wide variety of strategic advanced materials for use in the aerospace and electronics industries. In addition to ceramic fibers, the company manufactures high-performance resins and molding compounds, high-temperature superconductor powders, and advanced ceramic products. Rhone-Poulenc S.A. concentrates its activities in three areas: life sciences, advanced materials and specialty chemicals, and organic and inorganic intermediates. The company operates in 140 countries and has 86,000 employees. Worldwide sales in 1989 were approximately $12 billion.

NEW YORK (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Reuters Holdings PLC (NASDAQ: RTRSY) said it would seek shareholder approval of separate proposals to increase its borrowing powers, to make various changes to employee share option schemes and to allow selective purchase of its own shares.

Acting under British company law, which requires shareholder approval for the proposals, Reuters is convening an Extraordinary General Meeting for April 26. The Extraordinary General Meeting will follow immediately upon the company's Annual General Meeting, also convened for that date.

Reuters is seeking authority to change its borrowing powers from twice to 2-1/2 times adjusted capital and reserves. The definition of reserves would be changed to include goodwill arising on acquisitions made after Jan. 1, 1990 with borrowings being calculated net of cash and marketable securities. Based on the position as at Dec. 31, 1989, the effect would be to raise Reuters borrowing limits to 1,020.7 million pounds sterling from 816.6 million pounds.

Reuters Chairman Sir Christopher Hogg said: "Reuters operates in an industry which, of its nature, involves substantial goodwill and its own market capitalization and level of profits are large in comparison with its reported asset base.

At Dec. 31, 1989, Reuters had total borrowings falling due after more than one year of 22.4 million pounds, down from 75.7 million pounds a year previously. Shareholders' equity rose to 408.3 million pounds from 265.7 million pounds over the same period.

Reuters is also seeking standard powers to purchase up to approximately 10 percent of its issued share capital at prices between 10p per share and a price per share not more than five percent above the average middle market quotation for the 10 business days before the purchase is made. There is no connection between this proposal and the proposal to increase Reuters borrowing limits.

Any shares purchased would be canceled and would not be available for re-issue. The authority, if granted, would expire at the next Annual General Meeting. Ordinary shares of Reuters in issue at Dec. 31, 1989 totalled 431.1 million, of which 416.3 million ranked for dividend.

Reuters supplies a wide range of services to both business subscribers and to the news media. It obtains its information from around 160 exchanges and over-the-counter markets, from data contributed directly by more than 3,715 subscribers in 82 countries and from a network of some 1,270 journalists, photographers and cameramen. ATLANTA (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - The industry-leading Massachusetts Indemnity and Life Insurance Co. (MILICO), the life insurance company for the A.L. Williams (NYSE: ALW) general agency, has introduced four innovative level premium, level coverage, term life insurance products.

The new Common Sense Term (CST) products offer significantly lower premiums and more flexibility than the popular CST-20 product they update.

Besides increasing the choices of affordable term life products available to clients, the Common Sense Term products offer these distinct advantages:

-- Substantial premium reductions for the same insurance protection in many cases for current MILICO policyholders. As a result, clients can increase policy death benefits without a premium increase.

-- Customers are not required to begin a new contestability period when a MILICO policy replaces another insurance policy. This applies to the total face amount of the replaced policy.

Importantly, current MILICO clients can take advantage of the opportunity to convert their existing coverage to the new term life policies after the new products are approved in their state. Customers should contact their local A.L. Williams representatives for additional information.

The four new Common Sense Term offerings include five- and 10-year level term life insurance products, both changing in the final year of their initial term to decreasing term to age 65. The other two are 15- and 20-year term life products with premiums increasing at the end of each term and at age 70 when the policy becomes annual renewable term to age 100. In all instances, the client is guaranteed insurability at the end of these terms.

MILICO currently leads the insurance industry with more than $300 billion in individual face amount of life insurance in force. Both MILICO and the general agent of the marketing agency, ALW Marketing Corp., are subsidiaries of Primerica Corp. (NYSE: PA), a diversified financial services company with assets of approximately $18 billion.

LOWELL, MA (APRIL 2) PR NEWSWIRE - Courier Corporation (NASDAQ: CRRC) a leading specialty printer of high quality books, today unveiled plans to streamline operations at its Westford (Mass.) book manufacturing plant (The Murray Printing Company).

The 600,000-square-foot facility, with a workforce of 465, produces books for the trade, scientific and educational markets. Currently, printing and binding operations, along with paper storage, are spread among a complex of older multi-story mill structures and a modern one-story 250,000-square-foot printing plant located on a 45-acre site.

Courier's plans call for the relocation of virtually all of its Westford operations into the newer building by the end of calendar year 1990. Presses and other machinery, as well as the offices, will be transferred to the one-story plant, obsolete equipment will be retired, and more streamlined manufacturing procedures will be instituted. This is part of an ongoing specialization program designed to boost productivity and enhance cost-effectiveness throughout the corporation.

Courier estimates the cost of streamlining its Westford operations at $4.5 million. Approximately half of this amount involves capital expenditures. The remainder represents after-tax expenses associated with the consolidation and will be charged against earnings in the company's second quarter ending March 31, 1990. The company further indicated that it anticipates the consolidation of operations and the resulting efficiencies at Westford would result in a workforce reduction of 10-15 percent by the end of the calendar year.

The consolidation of operations under one roof will free up approximately 350,000 square feet of space in the Westford mill complex which will be available for future development.

Courier Corporation, headquartered in Lowell, Mass., is an international producer of books, bibles, reference texts, directories, technical manuals and software documentation. DALLAS (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Oryx Energy Co. Tuesday announced an oil discovery in the Austin Chalk that set company records for production and horizontal length, heightening optimism by the Dallas-based independent in the potential of its horizontal drilling program in the Pearsall Field.

On the 24-hour initial production test, the C.R. Haley No. 1 tested 2,049 barrels of oil per day (BOPD) and 965 thousands cubic feet of gas through a 33/64-inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 485 pounds per square inch. During testing, the well flowed at a calculated rate of up to 6,144 BOPD, the most of any Oryx Energy well in the Pearsall Field. The Haley No. 1 will qualify for a maximum production allowable of 1,640 BOPD.

The Haley No. 1 was drilled to a measured depth of 10,184 feet and reached a horizontal length of 4,242 feet. This horizontal displacement surpassed the company's previous record of 4,164 feet set in January by the Stroman-Harris No. 2. The Haley No. 1 is located in Section 30, IG&N Railroad Survey A-339, Zavala County.

Speaking this morning to institutional investors at the Howard Weil Conference in New Orleans, Jerry W. Box, vice president for exploration, said this latest discovery was just one more reason why his company is so optimistic about its horizontal drilling program in the Austin Chalk.

Oryx Energy continues to acquire land in the Pearsall Field and now holds nearly 180,000 net acres. The company previously announced plans to drill 85 horizontal wells by the end of 1990. Box said about 60 of those will be development wells, the rest exploratory.

The Dallas-based Oryx Energy Co. conducts its domestic operations through Sun Energy Partners L.P. Oryx Energy, the managing general partner and 98-percent owner of the partnership, is the largest independent oil and gas company in the world with assets in excess of $5 billion and proved reserves of more than one billion equivalent barrels.

RESTON, VA. (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - US Sprint Tuesday initiated the first-ever long-distance service that permits Japanese to call from the United States to Japan, or to virtually anywhere in the world, through the assistance of a Japanese-speaking operator, and bill the call to a Japanese credit card.

Under an agreement between Sprint International, US Sprint's private networks and international telecommunications subsidiary, and JCB International, the largest credit card company in Japan with 16 million cardholders and the fourth largest in the world, JCB customers will be able to place domestic and international calls from any telephone when traveling throughout the United States.

According to market surveys, more than 4 million Japanese travelers visit the United States yearly, calling Japan an average of four times per trip. Frequently they pay a premium rate when their long-distance calls are placed from hotel rooms and billed through the hotel telephone switching facilities.

Japanese customers who use the US Sprint service may charge the calls directly to their JCB cards and realize substantial savings.

Future features of the service may include optional direct dial calling, credit card billing for facsimile transmissions, and the ability to call Japan from additional countries such as the United Kingdom and Hong Kong. US Sprint may also offer Japanese language information services such as weather and financial news.

''US Sprint's development of this uniquely tailored service signals our interest in assuring that Japanese travelers have access to a high-quality international long-distance service that meets all their needs,'' said Bill Burgess, Sprint International vice president of telecommunications services.

HOUSTON (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Howell Corp. announced Tuesday the receipt of a refund of federal income taxes plus interest totalling approximately $32 million.

The interest income included in this receipt is approximately $21 million.

The net, after-tax cash amount derived from this refund is $23 million, resulting in $17 million, or about $3.50 per share, of net income to be included in first quarter earnings. Results for the first quarter of 1990 are not yet available. The company plans to utilize these funds to retire all of its senior secured indebtedness.

The company was able to file Amended U.S. Corporation Income Tax Returns in 1988 for the years 1978, 1979, and 1980 due to the company's earlier consent to an extension of the statute of limitations applicable to those years at the request of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). The IRS request was based on an audit of unrelated tax issues affecting those years that was resolved in early 1988.

The company's claims for federal income tax refunds were predicated upon allegations made by the Department of Energy (DOE) against the company and three of its affiliates regarding crude oil price and allocation regulation violations arising from operations in 1978, 1979, and 1980. The company and the DOE fully resolved and settled the allegations by entering into a Consent Order which became effective as a final order in April 1989. The combination of the fact that those years remained open for amendment and the fact that the company entered into a Consent Order with the DOE enabled the company to sustain its claims for refund.

The significant interest that accrued was based on statutory provisions of the Internal Revenue Code which provide for such interest of overpayment of taxes.

Howell Corp. (NYSE: HWL) is an energy industry holding company. Through wholly owned operating units, it is engaged in oil and gas exploration and production, crude oil marketing, technical fuels refining and marketing, custom chemical processing, product terminalling and common carrier bulk liquids transportation of hydrocarbons and chemicals.

PICKERINGTON, OH (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - R.G. Barry Corp. (AMEX:RGB) Tuesday halted manufacturing operations at its factory in Ciudad Juarez, Chihuahua, Mexico.

Approximately 200 workers were affected.

''Although actions such as this are never easy, it is not economically feasible for us to continue operating in Juarez,'' said Gordon Zacks, chairman and chief executive officer.

''Employee turnover is a chronic problem for many of the industries operating in Juarez and we experienced an excessive turnover rate. As a result, we have not been able to hire, train or retain enough people to allow our plant to operate at a reasonable cost level or near its capacity.

''Thanks to an aggressive expansion program, we can meet our current and projected manufacturing needs. During 1989 we nearly doubled the size of our manufacturing plant at Nuevo Laredo, Tamaulipas, Mexico. We also opened a new facility at Ciudad Acuna, Coahuila, Mexico, which replaced a factory destroyed by fire in 1988. We expanded operations at our Laredo, Texas, plant and we have obtained exclusive rights to all production output from a newly opened factory in the Shenzhen, People's Republic of China.''

(NYSE/London and Zurich Stock Exchanges:AMI) Tuesday announced reported earnings of $36 million, or 50 cents per share, for the second quarter of fiscal 1990 ended Feb. 28, a strong increase from earnings of $18.1 million, or 26 cents per share, for the same period in 1989.

Net revenues for the most recent quarter were $738 million, an increase of 8.8 percent over the $678.2 million in revenues posted for the same quarter last year.

Earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization for the second quarter of fiscal 1990 rose 22 percent to $135 million, from $110.7 million in the comparable period of fiscal 1989.

Commenting on the company's financial and operational performance, Harry J. Gray, chairman and chief executive officer of AMI, noted: ''Our restructuring program is delivering on its promise, illustrated by a 2 percent improvement in our gross profit margins in both the second quarter and the first six months of the fiscal year. Further, we achieved a 24 percent reduction in overhead costs over the first six months of 1989.''

Non-recurring merger costs of $128.2 million recorded in the first quarter or about $1.27 per share, led to a net loss of $17.6 million, or 25 cents per share, for the first half of fiscal year 1990. This compares with earnings of $18.6 million, or 26 cents per share, for the comparable period in 1989. Last year's earnings were affected by non-recurring costs for reserves totalling $24 million, or 21 cents per share, taken in the first quarter of 1989 for malpractice insurance and lease buyouts associated with the consolidation of corporate and regional offices.

Revenues for the six months ended Feb. 28, 1990, increased 10.7 percent to $1.466 billion, from $1.325 billion in the previous fiscal year. Earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization for the six month period were $265.1 million, an increase of 21.7 percent from the $217.8 million earned in the same period the previous year excluding the merger costs in fiscal 1990 and the non-recurring costs in fiscal 1989.

Admissions for domestic facilities in the first half were up 2.8 percent, patient days rose more than 3.6 percent, and the average occupancy rate advanced to 47.4 percent from 45.1 percent the previous year.

''With the strong operating performance turned in by AMI, we remain confident that we will continue to generate sufficient cash flow to service debt and fund capital expenditures,'' Gray said.

''While bottom line figures for the next 12 months will be affected by the addition of acquisition debt to our income statement and balance sheet after the consummation of our merger agreement, we fully expect continued strengthening of our cash flow and operations.''

''Our divestiture program is also proceeding on schedule. Divestitures to date, including our 65 percent interest in AMI Healthcare Group plc, the largest private hospital company in the United Kingdom, and Glendora Community and Santa Cruz Hospitals in California, bring gross cash from divestitures to $401.5 million so far this year,'' said Gray.

''We are well on our way to meeting our goal of raising $1 billion in proceeds through asset sales over the next 12 to 18 months.''

''We continue to be committed to focusing our resources on a core group of hospitals and undertaking those projects which provide the very best returns in terms of both health care quality enhancement in our communities and our financial performance,'' Gray noted.

American Medical International currently operates 51 acute care and psychiatric hospitals in the United States, plus several facilities in Europe.

ATLANTIC CITY, NJ (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - At Donald Trump's new billion-dollar 17-acre Trump Taj Mahal Casino Resort, waitresses and waiters have given up their pad and pencils for miniature computer terminals to take orders in the resort's restaurants.

At the Bombay Cafe and New Dehli restaurants, waitresses and waiters use NCR Corp.'s 2750 hand-held order entry systems to input orders, which are then transmitted via radio waves to the resort's kitchen and bars where they are printed or displayed.

This all happens without the waitress/waiter leaving the customer's table, making the whole ordering process quick and efficient. Later, the NCR system even prints out the guest check.

''The Trump Taj Mahal's NCR hand-held systems save time and improve accuracy, by standardizing order-taking procedures and eliminating handwritten orders,'' said Tom Adams, vice president of administration, Trump Taj Mahal. Adams said the systems are part of an approximately $1 million Trump Taj Mahal-NCR contract.

The 27 NCR 2750 units in the Bombay Cafe and 22 units in the New Dehli restaurant are linked to an NCR 2760 food service system, a pc-based system that will aid the restaurants' managers by providing them with a series of detailed management reports.

The 2750 hand-held units are actually miniature computer terminals that speed orders from the dining area to the kitchen or the bar. Using radio-frequency transmission and run by battery packs, the units can be used both indoors and out. Because of their portability and flexibility, the Trump Taj Mahal plans to use the hand-held units in the pool snack bar area.

The Trump Taj Mahal will have more than 1,250 deluxe hotel guest rooms and lavish suites, along with restaurants with a seating capacity for 3,000 people at one time.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - PC software publisher Nantucket Corp. Tuesday announced it has opened a sales, support and training center in the Soviet Union, staffed entirely by Soviet nationals.

Nantucket's Moscow center will offer complete technical support for its products, as well as provide a base for the firm's sales efforts within the Soviet Union. With this venture, Nantucket becomes the first U.S. software company to open and staff a Soviet service center in this fashion.

Nantucket, a privately held software publishing company, specializes in application development software for personal computers. Its flagship product, Clipper, is the standard for PC application development, with installations in Fortune 1000 companies worldwide.

According to company President Larry Heimendinger, the decision to set up a sales-and-support organization in the Soviet Union was driven by a desire to accelerate improvements in the Soviet economy.

Clipper is currently the PC development standard in the Soviet Union, with more than 15,000 copies estimated to be in use already. In the past, it has been common for popular Western software to be freely copied and distributed in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Clipper is a comprehensive application development system that includes a robust, open-architecture language, a compiler, linker and a full set of development utilities. The product is being translated into Cyrillic, complete with full documentation, for distribution in the Soviet Union.

CHATSWORTH, CA (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Datadesk International Inc., a leading third-party manufacturer of keyboards for personal computers, Tuesday introduced the Switchboard, a computer keyboard comprised of independent modules that can be easily rearranged for optimum user performance.

The revolutionary design of the keyboard allows users to rearrange the basic modules and plug in additional input devices. The Switchboard is also the first keyboard that is engineered to work with both Apple Macintosh and IBM personal computers.

The basic keyboard can be rearranged into six different layouts. For example, the cursor keys may be positioned on the right or the left for user comfort. With additional modules, sold separately, users have an even greater number of layout options. A desktop publisher, for instance, may chose to replace the cursor pad with a trackball -- on the left- or right-hand side -- or add a set of vertical function keys.

The basic Switchboard has a 105-key layout with removable numeric, cursor and alpha keypads. The user can completely reposition the keypads creating six different keyboard layouts. Thus, the Switchboard can be reconfigured or personalized to facilitate the user's typing efficiency and comfort.

According to Solomon, the Switchboard offers users a positive tactile response similar to the feel of the company's first generation of highly rated keyboards.

Along with the Switchboard, Datadesk is introducing a family of modules designed to enhance productivity by allowing users to further customize the keyboard for specific applications and the forthcoming standard graphical interface operating environments. These modules include a trackball with cursor keys, vertical function keys (old AT style) and a programmable 24-key macro/3270 module.

The 24 keys on the macro/3270 module are user programmable without requiring the use of RAM resident software. Macro keys facilitate the use of the keyboard with applications that require users to enter awkward or long sequences of keystrokes. The keys can be configured as PF1 - PF24 function keys for IBM 3270 environments.

Datadesk International is an award-winning third-party supplier of innovative, ergonomically designed keyboards and other input devices for the Macintosh and IBM and compatible PC markets. Founded in 1985, Datadesk was one of the first to introduce a 101-key keyboard for the existing installed base of IBM XT, AT and compatibles.

The standstill is subject to certain conditions, including the execution of various mortgage documents, and will terminate if the conditions have not been met by April 30, 1990.

During the standstill period, the trust will continue in its efforts to arrange a long-term restructuring of its lending agreements.

In the interim Prime will continue its discussions with several potential multiple-property purchasers. Any transaction or transactions resulting from such discussions would be expected to require a minimum of 90 days to conclude.

Prime separately announced that earnings per share for the third quarter ended March 31 are expected to be substantially below the 51 cents earned in the comparable quarter of the prior year. The decline is attributable to continued softness in hotel occupancy and rates and the lack of property sales or development fee income in the quarter.

The company expects that property sales and development activity in general will remain slow until conditions in the real estate market, including terms and availability of debt financing, begin to improve.

Prime owns, operates or manages 139 hotels with 20,500 rooms nationwide. Prime also is the franchisor for Howard Johnson, Rodeway Inns International and operates the U.S. Ramada franchise system, which, in aggregate, totals 1,100 properties with 150,000 rooms.

BATESVILLE, IN (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Tuesday, Hillenbrand Industries, Inc. (NYSE) announced unaudited results for the first quarter ended March 3, 1990.

Hillenbrand Industries, Inc.
Summary of Consolidated Revenues and Income
(In Thousands Except Per Share Data)

	Three Months Ended
	3/03/90	3/04/89
Net revenues:
Industrial	$272,457	$233,737
Insurance	6,858	3,827
Total net revenues	279,315	237,564
Income before income taxes	33,530	26,822
Income taxes	13,680	11,061
Net income	$ 19,850	$ 15,761
Earnings per common share	$ .53	$.42

W. August Hillenbrand, President and Chief Executive Officer, stated that results for the first quarter resulted in respectable increases over the comparable period in 1989. Total revenues of $279.3 million were up 17.6 percent, led by the Insurance group's 79.2 percent rise and the Industrial group's increase of 16.6 percent. Net income rose 25.9 percent to $19.9 million and earnings per share were $.53, up 26.2 percent when compared to the first quarter of 1989. Both periods reflect adoption of the new accounting standard SFAS 97 which affects the reported results for the Insurance group. Consequently, restated revenues and earnings per share for last year's first quarter were lower by $25.0 million and $.03, respectively.

All Industrial businesses except American Tourister produced solid increases in revenues and profitability. The softening retail and wholesale markets for luggage products led to flat sales when compared to last year's excellent first quarter. Tourister's profit contribution was negatively impacted by a higher level of fixed costs as a result of the expansion of our factory outlet stores. The strength of the consumer economy in 1990 will directly affect this Durables segment company. Medeco is off to a good start in 1990.

HAUPPAUGE, NY (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Richard Projain, president and chief executive officer of ElectroSound Group Inc. (AMEX: ESG), Monday reported the operating results for the periods ended February 28, 1990.

For the nine months ended February 28, 1990, the company incurred a loss of $99,000. The nine month results include a gain of $418,000 on the June 1989 sale of the assets of the company's commercial duplicating equipment manufacturing operation.

The prior fiscal year loss of $7,221,000 reflects provisions of $7,909,000 associated with the company's investment in Memory-Tech, the compact disc joint venture with Mitsubishi Corp. This joint venture was sold to Mitsubishi at the end of the prior fiscal year.

The historically slow third quarter was disappointing with a loss of $710,000 being sustained. In February, 1990, the company ceased operations in Los Angeles and began relocating its West Coast audio tape duplicating capacity to its other exisitng operations on Long Island and Indiana. A charge of $200,000 was provided in the third fiscal quarter for the cost associated with the relocation of the duplicating capacity.

As a result of the June, 1989 disposal of duplicating equipment and computer peripheral distribution activities, sales declined 21 percent for the nine months to $19,600,000 and 35 percent to $4,595,000 during the third fiscal quarter.

Sales from ongoing duplication services for the nine month period are about the same as prior year levels but declined 13 percent in the third quarter.

The company indicated that the relocation of its duplicating capacity to the areas where demand is greatest should result in improved customer service and increased profitability on the continued sales levels.

MADISON, NJ (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Schering-Plough Corporation Tuesday issued a sharp rebuttal to statements by Elan Corporation disputing the legitimacy of Schering's nicotine patch patent.

After examining statements made by Elan in a March 23 press release, the company said it was fully satisfied that its patent (U.S. Patent No. 4,908,213) reflected novel art and technology. Contrary to Elan's assertions, there can be no infringement of a U.S. patent application, only of an issued patent. Elan issued its press release following a March 17, 1990, article in The New York Times on Schering's patent.

The company obtained its patent on March 13, 1990, for a transdermal nicotine patch designed to reduce tobacco craving by dispensing nicotine in a controlled dose over 24 hours. The patch has several advantages over orally administered nicotine products, including a superior controlled release of nicotine into the bloodstream and the avoidance of mouth and gum irritation, which nicotine gums can cause.

Addressing Elan's statements, the company took strong issue with Elan's claim that Schering had failed to cite relevant prior art in its patent application, specifically Elan's international patent application on transdermal nicotine delivery. Schering-Plough said that it did, indeed, cite relevant prior art in its filing and that the patent examiner offered additional references during the prosecution.

The company maintains that Elan's published patent applications are no more relevant to the invention than the totality of art cited at the time

Schering's application was prosecuted. Thus, Schering contends, Elan's statements were not only premature since they were made before Elan had access to Schering's file history (and, therefore, could not know what transpired in the Patent Office), but were also ''off base'' in imputing any irregularity to the company's filing.

Schering-Plough said the point of novelty in its patch is that it contains an antipruritic agent to suppress itching, a feature not alluded to in Elan's filing.

Schering-Plough is a research-based company engaged primarily in the discovery, development, manufacturing and marketing of pharmaceutical and health care products worldwide.

COLUMBUS, IN (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Cummins Engine Co. Inc., today said it expects first quarter results to be modestly profitable on sales slightly lower than those of the fourth quarter.

The announcement was made to shareholders at their annual meeting.

Cummins President and Chief Operating Officer James A. Henderson said, ''Profit performance beyond the first quarter will depend heavily on market conditions. We see no immediate recovery in the markets that declined in the middle of last year: North American heavy-duty trucks, pleasure boats and recreational vehicles. Our best estimate is that demand will remain level through the summer, with a gradual improvement later in the year. At present, our plants have adjusted to the lower volumes, we are experiencing the benefits of our earlier consolidation, and there appears to be no further need for adding to warranty reserves,'' he said.

''We believe we are well-positioned to capture an increasing share of markets worldwide in a environment of tighter emission controls. For these reasons, we look forward to the 1990's with enthusiasm and expect to improve our profit performance steadily as the economy and our markets recover,'' Henderson concluded.

Theodore M. Solso, Vice President and General Manager - Engine Business, noted that although sales of engines for North American heavy-duty trucks softened considerably in the second half of 1989, total production for the year exceeded 150,000 trucks. ''Cummins continues to hold a leadership position in this industry, outselling all competitors combined during every year of the 1980's,'' he said. All of Cummins' other engine markets grew in 1989, most notably bus and light commercial markets. Cummins' success with the 6B engine in the Dodge Ram pickup truck was a major reason, Solso said. Nearly half of all Dodge heavy-duty pickups were sold with Cummins power.

Cummins' technology gives its products a competitive edge, he continued; much of the technical work is driven by 1991 federal on-highway emissions standards. To meet these standards, Cummins will offer a complete line of both electronic and mechanically controlled L10 and NT heavy-duty engines. ''We have strengthened our quality assurance process as part of the introduction program for these new 1991 products,'' Solso said.

Sales for the group exceeded $2.4 billion, up 52 percent from four years ago. ''This growth is the result of new engine families which Cummins developed and introduced during the past 10 years,'' Solso said.

Cummins' Components Group also experienced a sharp reduction in its North American business during the second half of 1989, according to Kevin E. Sheehan, vice president for the group. As a result, 1989 was a year of modest sales growth.

In other action today, the following directors were elected: Harold Brown, Robert J. Darnall, Hanna H. Gray, James A. Henderson, Henry L. Hillman, J. Irwin Miller, Paul L. Miller, William I. Miller, Donald S. Perkins, William D. Ruckelshaus, Henry B. Schacht, William D. Schwab and Franklin A. Thomas.

ALAMEDA, CA (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - The DECStation 5000 introduced this morning by Digital Equipment Corp. will speed the acceptance of UNIX workstations in the commercial computer market, the president and chief executive officer of Ingres Corp. (NASDAQ:RELY) said Tuesday.

''The new DECStation 5000 is a significant breakthrough in commercial computing, not only in price and performance, but also in its ability to run powerful commercial applications crucial to large and small corporations,'' said Paul Newton, president and CEO of Ingres.

In the past, workstations have been used most frequently for technical and engineering applications and less so for traditional business functions, primarily because they did not feature powerful enough software for mainstream commercial applications, Newton said.

The DECStation 5000 introduced by Digital Equipment Corp. bundles a powerful new relational database -- ULTRIX/SQL -- based on technology acquired from Ingres Corp.

''By bundling the world's most advanced commercial database into an under-$15,000 desktop workstation, DEC has broken a major remaining barrier to UNIX workstations making major inroads into the commercial market,'' Newton said.

ATLANTA (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - ''Our financial results through February of this year have fallen below the levels we achieved in 1989, reflecting higher costs for producing and delivering electricity and mild temperatures across the region that slowed the growth of energy sales,'' Southern Company President Edward L. Addison said Tuesday.

The Southern Company, (NYSE:SO) is the parent firm of five electric utilities: Alabama Power, Georgia Power, Gulf Power, Mississippi Power and Savannah Electric. The Southern Company's stock is one of the 20 most widely held corporate stocks in America.

Addison announced that earnings for the first two months of 1990 totaled $87 million or 28 cents per share -- down $50 million, or 15 cents per share from the corresponding period last year.

For the 12 months ending Feb. 28, net income was $797 million, or $2.52 per share -- down $67 million, or 24 cents per share from the comparable 12 months a year ago.

Addison noted that the Georgia Public Service Commission issued a key decision last fall related to Georgia Power's investment in unit 2 of Plant Vogtle.

Georgia Power had asked for a rate increase of $413 million. The commission recognized a need for $218 million of additional revenues to be recovered over a phase-in period.

The order calls for a first-year increase in base rates of $75 million. But the impact of this increase of customer bills is being offset by $68 million of fuel cost reductions and other one-time credits. The remainder of the increase -- some $143 million -- is to be recovered within 10 years as other costs associated with Plant Vogtle decline.

The commission may accelerate the phase-in plan to assure that Georgia Power's projected earnings on its retail business for the 12 months beginning May, 1990, do not exceed the authorized rate of return.

Customer rates will not be affected by any adjustment to the phase-in plan. The commission also has ordered the company to file a conventional rate case in 1991.

ROCHESTER, NY (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Eastman Kodak Co. Tuesday announced the world's fastest radiographic imaging system at a medical meeting in Kobe, Japan.

The Kodak RA system features a new generation of medical x-ray films, chemicals and processing equipment for high-quality radiographs with ''kwik-30'' processing, the fastest in the world. The new system utilizes a patented ''forehardened'' film that also provides ecological benefits by eliminating the need for hardeners in processing solutions.

''We have made a major breakthrough in technology,'' said Robert T. Hamilton, vice-president and general manager, Health Sciences Division. ''We developed the line of products in less than one year from the time we first identified the need. This is one of the most significant new developments in film-based radiographic imaging in a quarter of a century, since Kodak introduced 90-second processing in 1965.''

The new system is being unveiled in Japan at the JMCP (Japan Federation of Medical Congress Promotion) meeting, the largest annual radiology meeting in Japan.

''We recognize the differing needs of our diagnostic imaging customers throughout the world and we are proud to be able to provide breakthrough technology to meet specific customer needs wherever they arise,'' Hamilton said.

The components of the new system include six Kodak T-Mat RA films, Kodak X-Omat RA/30 chemicals, and the Kodak X-Omat processor, model M6RA.

The chemicals are single-part concentrates made for ''kwik-30'' processing. The films use an advanced emulsion for superb image quality and a new level of processing capability. The processor harnesses the power of a microprocessor for new flexiblity and efficiency.

The films and processor also can be used with traditional Kodak RP X-Omat chemicals for extended (3-minute), standard (90-second) or rapid (45-second) processing.

The new system is scheduled for availability throughout the rest of the world early next year. Pricing will be announced at the time of introduction.

PHOENIX, AZ (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - IBM and TransFirst Corporation Tuesday announced an agreement to jointly market systems which automate the distribution of benefits for programs such as Food Stamps, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, and Unemployment Insurance to help streamline procedures and delivery of benefits, while reducing the expense incurred by taxpayers to administer these programs.

The companies will market the TransFirst ACCEPT electronic benefits transfer system to government and healthcare agencies as part of a four-year agreement.

TransFirst's ACCEPT is a ''paperless'' benefit distribution system which eliminates much of the cost associated with processing and mailing forms and checks. Automated processing should improve overall service and timely delivery of benefits, while greatly improving the ability to account for benefit funds since every disbursement is reported by date, time and location, plus every transaction can be tracked. Programs can be evaluated for subsequent plan adjustments.

ACCEPT can be used for the distribution of benefits from programs such as Food Stamps, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Unemployment Insurance, Medicaid, Child Support, Social Security Supplemental Security Income, and General Public Assistance.

Today, many states issue vouchers on paper which entitle recipients to benefits. ACCEPT, through the use of an eligibility card, with a personal identification number (PIN) for security, permits electronic authorization for benefits. Recipients may receive their benefits personally from an agency representative or from the ACCEPT network of automated teller machines and terminals at food outlets.

ACCEPT allows the benefits providers to collect information on how funds are used by the recipient. Benefits are tracked in the recipient's account.

TransFirst is the leader in electronic benefit transfer installations, including systems at Ramsey County (Minnesota), the states of Maryland and Minnesota, and the U.S. Department of the Treasury/Supplemental Security Income Division.

TransFirst Corporation is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Affiliated Computer Systems, Inc. (ACS) of Dallas.

DFW AIRPORT, TX (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - American Airlines has launched the next generation of frequent traveler awards -- AAdvantage Extra -- Michael W. Gunn, senior vice president, marketing for the airline, announced at a news conference Tuesday.

AAdvantage Extra -- designed in response to customer surveys -- allows AAdvantage members to turn miles into outstanding money-saving awards received after purchasing selected products and services.

''American was the first airline to offer a broad-based program to reward the frequent traveler,'' he said. ''Today, with AAdvantage Extra, we have taken mileage awards in a new direction.''

For example, a member who purchases a 1990 Toyota Supra, negotiating the best possible price at a local dealership, may then redeem 75,000 AAdvantage miles for a $1,500 check. This is in addition to any other consumer incentives offered at the time.

''We feel AAdvantage Extra is a win-win program,'' Gunn said. ''Our AAdvantage members win by enjoying significant savings on a wide variety of products and services. American wins because it allows us to fulfill an expressed desire by our best customers.

''And our product and service providers win because AAdvantage Extra provides an opportunity to reach a large, targeted and prequalified group of consumers while at the same time transferring the tremendous brand loyalty of AAdvantage to their own products and services.''

Three models of Toyota qualify for AAdvantage Extra awards. Other products include MasterCraft ski boats, Four Seasons solariums, GRiD Computers, Pearson Sunfish sailboats, Deck House homes and John Deere front mowers.

Other merchandise includes Sea Eagle catamarans and sportboats, Baldwin pianos and clocks, fine watches and diamond jewelry from the Tourneau collection, New England Log Homes, Amish Country spas and fine furs from The Fur Vault.

In addition to these products, AAdvantage Extra offers special savings on several services. FRAMINGHAM, MA (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - Arrow Automotive Industries announces that has reached agreement in principle with its lenders to extend existing credit facilities of approximately $21 million through June 30, 1990.

Arrow, which reported pre-tax earnings of $1,155,000 for the first six months of its fiscal year, expressed its confidence that refinancing programs will be completed and in place before June 30.

Due in large part to the return to profitable operations, the company has recently received refinancing proposals from a number of institutional lenders. Credit reviews and other procedures normal in the financing process are underway.

Arrow reports that operations continue strong and that the quarter ended March 31, historically the weakest fiscal quarter for the company, is likely to show a modest level of profits in comparison to a very substantial loss in the third quarter last year.

Arrow stock is traded on the American Stock Exchange under the designation AI.

STAMFORD, CT (APRIL 3) BUSINESS WIRE - EnviroSource Inc. (NASDAQ:ENSO) Tuesday reported its 1989 financial results, and announced that it had arranged a new $72.5 million bank credit facility and that a major stockholder intends to acquire an additional 1,840,000 shares of EnviroSource common stock and to lend the company $10 million.

The company reported net income of $22.1 million, or 82 cents per share, as compared with a loss of $37.4 million, or a $5.99 per share loss, in 1988. Sales for 1989 and 1988 were $190 million and $139 million, respectively.

The company reported a loss from continuing operations of $16.9 million in 1989, vs. a $27.8 million loss in the preceding year. After giving effect to preferred stock dividends and accretion, the company had a $2.40 per share loss from continuing operations in 1989 vs. a $4.86 per share loss in 1988.

Results for 1988 have been restated to consolidate the company's 62.5 percent interest in Envirosafe Services Inc., which was reported as a ''business held for sale'' through June 1989.

Discontinued operations reflect the 1989 disposition of all units of the company's former Precision Components Segment for an aggregate pre-tax gain of $85 million, the 1989 decision to discontinue the operations of the McGraw Construction Co. (including a fourth quarter 1989 provision of $21 million for additional potential losses on McGraw construction contracts), losses upon disposition of remaining units in the former custom Vehicle Segment and the recent decision to discontinue the remediation business of Envirosafe.

Fourth quarter continuing operations produced a loss of $2.9 million in 1989, vs. a $12.2 million loss for the last three months of 1988. This amounted to a loss of 57 cents per share in 1989, as compared with a loss of $1.83 per share in 1988, in each case after giving effect to preferred stock dividends and accretion.

Sales for these periods were $49 million in 1989 and $45 million in 1988.

Taking into account the impact of discontinued operations, the 1989 fourth quarter net loss was $13 million (a $1.72 per share loss after giving effect to preferred stock dividends and accretion), vs. a loss of $10.9 million (a $1.68 per share loss on the same basis) for the last three months of 1988.

The company also noted that over the past several days it had completed a number of major steps in the financial area that will put it in a better position to pursue its growth plans.

As previously reported, the maturity of the company's 14 percent extendible reset senior subordinated notes (the ''subordinated notes'') has been extended to April 1, 1998.

In connection therewith, EnviroSource will purchase $10 million principal amount of the subordinated notes by May 15, 1990. The Dyson-Kissner-Moran Corp. (''DKM''), a major stockholder, has agreed to lend the company $10 million in cash in order to fund this purchase, and to return $10 million face amount of currently outstanding notes.

In exchange, the company will issue 1,840,000 shares of its common stock to DKM and extend for three years an existing warrant to purchase 1 million shares of its common stock currently held by DKM. The new loan from DKM will mature in 1994.

On March 30, 1990, the company also entered into a new $72.5 million credit agreement with a syndicate of banks headed by Manufactures Hanover Trust Co.

These steps plus anticipated 1990 sales of non-strategic assets and project-related financing should provide sufficient funds to meet the company's needs for working capital and capital expenditures.

Louis A. Guzzetti Jr., president and chief executive officer of EnviroSource stated, ''Our core business performed very well in 1989, and continue to show the growth potential we perceived when we announced our new business mission last year. The 1989 Precision componenets dispositions not only sharpened our focus, but also gave a healthy boost to net worth, and 1989 retirements of debt and preferred stock have set the stage for a manageable level of fixed charges.

''Considering the very unsettled state of the high yield markets, we are very pleased that we were able to extend the term of our subordinated notes to 1998 while maintaining the 14 percent interest rate. Similarly the execution of a 3-3/4 year revolving credit agreement, at a time when commerical banks are reluctant to enter into new loan commitments, is a significant success for the company. In this connection, we want to express our appreciation to DKM for the additional commitments they have made to the company, which were a key to the consummation of these transactions.''

EnviroSource supplies industrial customers with long-term specialized services, primarily the recycling, handling, stabilization or land-filling of environmentally sensitive wastes or by-products.

TOKYO (APRIL 3) - Japanese production of videocassette tape recorders (VCRs) in February fell 8.1 percent from a year earlier to 2,092,000 units, the Electronic Industries Association of Japan reported Tuesday.

The February output marked the sixth consecutive year-on-year decline, it said.

Domestic shipments of VCRs declined 19.2 percent to 374,000 units while exports declined 6.3 percent to 1,770,000 units, mainly because of decreased shipments to the United States and the European Economic Community (EEC), association officials said.

Exports to the U.S. were down 29.1 percent at 595,000 units and exports to the EEC also declined 15.8 percent to 199,000 units.

The report also said Japanese production of color television sets totaled 949,000 units in Februrary, down 7.9 percent from a year earlier, registering a year-on-year fall for the seventh straight month.

Domestic shipments declined 9.5 percent to 546,000 units, and exports continued to fall to 256,000 units, down 23.1 percent from a year earlier, registering the 12th consecutive month of a year-on-decrease.

Exports to the U.S. rose 15.6 percent to 33,000 units, but exports to the 12 EEC nations fell 20.9 percent to 15,000 units.

Exports to China also plunged 77.4 percent to 33,000 units, the association said.

PARIS (APRIL 3) - The French state-owned Pechiney aluminium and packaging group achieved a 67 percent increase in net consolidated attributable profits to 3.33 billion francs (580 million dollars) in 1989, the group said on Tuesday.

Net consolidated profits in 1988 after allowance for minority shareholders were two billion francs.

The 1989 result did not include an exceptional capital gain of 575 million francs resulting from the public sale of shares in the subsidiary Pechiney International which controls American National Can (ANC) and which were included in the accounts for the first time.

The takeover of ANC by Pechiney on November 20 1988 was marked by insider trading which caused a major economic and political scandal in France. The takeover made Pechiney the biggest packaging firm in the world.

Consolidated sales totalled 88.47 billion francs (15 billion dollars) in 1989 representing an increase of 72 percent over the 1988 figure of 51.31 billion francs.

A fall in the world price of aluminium was likely to cause a "marked reduction" in activity in the first half of 1990, but this would be offset partially by "a sharp increase" in margins in the packaging sector and a big cut in financial payments, the company said.

MONTREAL (APRIL 3) - Japan has announced an increase in its financial contribution to the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) but also said it would seek a larger voting share and the presence of more Japanese on the bank's staff.

Toyoo Gyohten, a special adviser to the Japanese Finance Ministry, told the IDB's annual meeting Monday that his country would be contributing 5.5 billion dollars to the Special Japanese Fund (SJF), which is administered by the bank.

Japan also would create a 60 million yen scholarship fund, expand co-financing by Eximbank of Japan and the IDB, and strengthen ties between the Japanese private sector and the Inter-American Investment Coporation (IIC), the IDB affiliate that promotes private sector projects, he said.

"In addition to the financial support explained above, Japan is fully prepared to make more active contributions to the IDB and the IIC in their policy formulation and operational management," he said.

"In that respect, it is highly desirable for us to see that Japan's voting share be raised from the current level of 1.1 percent and the Japanese staff members be increased," Mr. Gyohten said. "I hope these matters will begin to be studied as soon as possible."

Mr. Gyohten told the Latin American and Caribbean central bank presidents and finance ministers that the 1990s would be a challenging one for the region and that the "bitter lessons" of the past decade should not be forgotten.

He said resolving the debt problem would be the most important challenge to be confronted in reactivating the region's economies.

But he warned that the support of the industrialized countries and international lending agencies will depend on the debtor countries' courage and determination in implementing economic reforms.

Frankfurt (APRIL 3) - The Hoechst chemical firm said Tuesday world group pre-tax earnings in 1989 reached 4.1 billion marks (2.41 billion dollars), up only 1.5 percent from a year before.

Hoechst said the marginal rise in earnings was partly caused by a slowdown in the last quarter amid weaknesses in the dollar, pound sterling and yen. If the third-quarter exchange rates had prevailed, then group earnings would have been 100 million marks higher.

World group turnover for 1989 rose by 12 percent to 45.9 billion marks. The parent stock company accounted for 16.9 billion marks of the total, up 5.9 per cent, while pre-tax earnings for the parent firm came to 2.2 billion marks, a gain of nine percent.

Wiesbaden (APRIL 3) - West Germany achieved a foreign trade surplus of 10.6 billion marks (6.24 billion dollars) in February, a slight drop from the 11.4 billion marks surplus in February 1989, the Central Office of Statistics said Tuesday.

Exports rose only 2.8 percent to 52 billion marks, while imports increased at nearly double that rate at 5.4 percent, to 41.4 billion marks, the office said.

For the first two months of 1990, the trade surplus amounted to 23.5 billion marks, just ahead of the 23.2 billion marks surplus in the same two months last year.

West Germany's balance on current accounts - the sum of visible trade, transfers, and services - showed a surplus of 18.7 billion marks for the first two months of 1990, down from 20.7 billion marks in the same period a year ago, the office said.

Paris (APRIL 3) - Oil consumption by Western industrial nations averaged 38.7 million barrels per day in the first quarter of 1990, just 0.5 percent over that of the first three months last year, the International Energy Agency said Tuesday.

The agency predicted that for all of 1990, oil consumption by the 24 nations of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development would rise by just one per cent.

The report said the oil reserves of the 24 countries amounted to 453 million tonnes at the outset of this year, up four million tons from twelve months earlier.

KUALA LUMPUR (APRIL 3) - Pepper exports from the east Malaysian state of Sarawak soared 52 percent to 21,006 tons in the first nine months of last year, the Sarawak Pepper Marketing Board said Tuesday.

The board said black pepper comprised 87 percent of total exports.

The United States was the largest direct market, accounting for 4,201 tonnes, followed by Japan, 2,742 tons and West Germany, 1,608 tons.

Sarawak, which produced most of Malaysia's pepper crop, earned 138 million Malaysian dollars (51 million U.S.) from the commodity during the period, a 4.5 percent increase from the 132 million dollars (49 million U.S.) in the same period last year.

KUALA LUMPUR (APRIL 3) - A local subsidiary of Japan's Matsushita group Tuesday entered into an agreement with a local merchant bank to underwrite a 50 million Malaysian dollar (18.5 million U.S.) notes issuance facility, a bank official said.

Nelson Leong Kway-Wah, a corporate banking manager of Commerce International Merchant Bankers Bhd., said an underwriting agreement, a form of promisory note, for the four-year facility was signed Tuesday.

The facility would be guaranteed by Sanwa Bank Ltd., Mr. Leong said, adding that MACC would make use of the funds to finance its capital expenditure programme.

Mr. Leong declined to disclose the interest rate but said MACC was regarded as a prime borrower.

MACC is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Japan's Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. Ltd. and is the second Matsushita company set up in Malaysia to manufacture air conditioners.

The company was incorporated in July last year with a share capital of 100 million dollars (37 million U.S.).

Bankers said they believed MACC was the first Japanese company to raise funds in Malaysia's flush capital market.

BONN (APRIL 3) - Deutsche Aerospace, the aeronautics subsidiary of West German group Daimler-Benz, said Tuesday it was to sell its shipping division to state-owned shipyard Bremer Vulkan.

The two sides had signed a memorandum of understanding on the deal, and were negotiating detailed terms of the contract, which they hoped to sign in May, Deutsche Aerospace said in a statement.

The statement gave no details on the likely price of the deal.

Deutsche Aerospace's operations in shipbuilding and naval electronics are grouped in the Deutsche Marinetechnik and Marine und Sondertechnik companies, with total annual sales of some two billion Deutsche marks (1.17 billion dollars) and 3,000 employees.

Bremer Vulkan is controlled by the city authorities of Bremen on the North Sea coast. The company increased its capital by almost 300 million Deutsche marks (176 million dollars) late last year to finance the purchase of Daimler-Benz's shipping activities.

West German Economy Minister Helmut Haussmann had last year set the sale of Daimler-Benz's shipping interests as one of the conditions for giving the green light for its acquisition of Messerschmitt-Boelkow-Blohm (MBB).

Deutsche Aerospace had favoured ceding these activities to a group of West German shipyards including Bremer Vulkan, but these talks broke down in February.

West German group Thyssen and Thomson of France had also expressed an interest.

Daimler-Benz president Edzard Reuter said in an interview to appear in Thursday's edition of the Frankfurt business daily that West Germany's leading industrial group was renouncing all requests for reparation for its ancient property on what became East German territory.

Some 90 percent of the pre-war property of Daimler's electro-technical subsidiary AEG is on East German territory.

AEG's East German activities, like those of all West German businesses, were expropriated after the division of Germany at the end of World War II and the company has never received compensation.

Sanofi also said that its Dutch subsidiary Sanofi BV had acquired a majority stake in Dutch seed specialist Schreurs.

Piet and Peter Schreurs retained a significant capital stake in the Dutch company and would continue to run it, Sanofi said.

GENEVA (APRIL 3) - The Soviet Union should obtain observer status with the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade next month, barring serious domestic political developments, informed sources said here Tuesday.

The Soviet application met no objections in principle when it was examined Tuesday for the first time by the GATT council, the organisation's spokesman David Woods said.

But two questions remained to be resolved: when the Soviet Union's observer status would take effect, and what the real nature of such status would be.

The next meeting of the council on May 16 was likely to grant observer status to Moscow, an informed source said.

The United States and Japan have hitherto insisted that the Soviet Union should not be admitted as a GATT observer until after the completion of the Uruguay Round of multilateral trade negotiations in December.

They now seem more inclined to drop this condition, but GATT members opposing the immediate granting of observer status still felt that the timing was bad, given uncertainty over the Kremlin's attitude on Lithuania a diplomatic source said.

This was apparently the main reason for postponing a decision for another month.

The GATT council, the organisation's highest body, also on Tuesday saw the resolution of a long-standing trade dispute between Washington and Nicaragua.

Confirming the lifting of an embargo and economic sanctions against Nicaragua's former Sandinista government, U.S. representative Rufus Yerxa said Washington would also take the necessary measures to resume allocation of a quota for Nicaraguan sugar.

The U.S. government also planned to reinstate Managua's access to the generalised system of preferences.

STRASBOURG (APRIL 3) - The European parliament said Tuesday it wanted to be involved in a European Commission enquiry into the sale of state-owned British car maker Rover to British Aerospace (BAe) in 1988.

The European MP's asked the Commission, the European Economic Community executive, to give them a "detailed report on the results of this enquiry."

The Commission enquiry, expected to be completed at the end of this month, will decide whether or not to ask BAe to repay part of the state subsidies it received at the time of the Rover sale, an informed Commission source said.

It was revealed late last year that in addition to aid authorised by the Commission, the British government provided BAe with some 38 million pounds (63.3 million dollars) in hidden subsidies.

London also allegedly under-valued Rover by at least 56.5 million pounds (94.1 million dollars) according to Britain's National Audit Office.

The European parliament called on the Commission to "investigate all aspects" of the Rover sale and urged London to provide "all the documents" needed for the enquiry.

The British vice-president of the Commission, Sir Leon Brittan, said Monday that London had provided all the information he had asked for.

TEL AVIV (APRIL 3) - Israeli Premier-designate Shimon Peres, leader of the left-leaning Labor party, signed a pivotal agreement Tuesday with the Agudat Israel religious faction and appeared to be close to success in wooing two key defectors from the Likud party which would ensure majority parliamentary support for a government.

Agudat Israel, whose support for Labor had appeared to waver in recent days, signed the coalition agreement after obtaining Labor guarantees for the security of Jewish settlements in the occupied territories, a commitment to a united Jerusalem under Israeli sovereignity, freedom of conscience on certain issues, and far reaching finacial concessions to religious demands.

Peres, who was fast running out of time in his attempts to form an administration, called the signing a ''revolutionary move'' which meant that Labor ''had established the basis to form a rather wide government.''

Army Radio meanwhile quoted senior Labour sources as saying that they had reached ''agreement in principle'' with maverick Liberals Yitzhak Moda'i and Avraham Sharir which would guarantee Labor 62 seats in the 120-seat Knesset (parliament). In return Moda'i and Sharir would be given the finance and transport ministries in the new government.

A spokesman for Moda'i however stated that there was ''absolutley no truth in the rumors of agreement with Labor,'' while analysts speculated that Moda'i was still trying to up the concessions he could secure from Likud leader Izhak Shamir in return for his support.

STOCKHOLM (APRIL 3) - The Swedish and Finnish paper makers Stora and Kymmene have bought France's biggest newsprint manufacturer, Chapelle-Darblay, from its parent Pinault group for 1.32 billion francs (220 million francs), Stora announced here Tuesday.

Stora News AB, a subsidiary of the Stora group, and Kymmene will each have a 50 percent stake in Chapelle-Darblay which has two newsprint manufacturing plants at Grand Couronne near Rouen, and Saint Etienne du Rouvray, west France.

Chapelle-Darblay, whose paper-making history goes back to 1398, produces about 350,000 tons of newsprint annually and has a turnover of 2.5 billion francs (410 million dollars) and employs 1,200 people.

Stora said the newsprint market was expanding, with production increasingly based on recycled paper.

France had major resources of both wood and recycled paper and was also favoured for its geographical position within the European Economic Community, Stora said.

Stora News already has newsprint production capacity of 1.6 million tons and an annual turnover of 4.8 billion francs (800 million dollars).

Kymmene produces 2.4 million tons of paper annually, mostly for magazines.

NAIROBI (APRIL 3) - The ruling Kanu party of Kenya Tuesday expelled Waruru Kanja from the party, a day after his sacking as minister for information and broadcasting, the Voice of Kenya radio reported.

The decision was taken at a meeting of the national governing council of Kanu, chaired by President Daniel Arap Moi. It means that Kanja will automatically lose his parliamentary seat for Nyeri town.

Kanja, 59, aroused a storm of protest in parliament last month when he compared the recent murder of foreign minister Robert Ouko with the political murder of a member of parliament in 1975.

Kanja said ''freedom fighters did not envisage a society where people rising to prominence like Dr. Ouko are eliminated.'' He also bitterly criticized what he saw as general corruption.

Enraged members of parliament immediately demanded Kanja's resignation and expulsion from the party. He was dismissed from the government by Moi.

NEW YORK, UNITED NATIONS (APRIL 3) - Libya has denied claims by the Chadian Government that Tripoli was involved in recent fighting near Chad's border with Sudan, officials said Tuesday.

In a letter to the U.N. Security Council, released Tuesday, Libya's U.N. representative Ali Treiki insisted that the fighting in Chad was "an internal conflict that has been going on for years."

"It concerns the Chadians alone and exclusively," he added.

Mr. Treiki said Libya had played no role in the recent battles between Chadian government troops and rebels.

Chad complained to the Security Council last week about the alleged Libyan involvement in the fighting.

Mr. Treiki accused the Chadian Government of persisting in "creating such lies in order to obstruct peace efforts."

LONDON (APRIL 3) - The Ministry of Defense has launched a corruption investigation into British explosives manufacturer Astra Holdings, the ministry and the group said Tuesday.

Astra's former general manager Christopher Gumbley was arrested last month along with a ministry employee, Dennis Stowe.

Both men were released without being charged, but the investigation is continuing.

Mr. Stowe, who worked at the ministry's light arms directorate, was suspended and Mr. Gumbley resigned in March, prompting the resignations of four other senior Astra executives.

A ministry spokesman said Tuesday Mr. Gumbley and Mr. Stowe were still under investigation by Ministry of Defense police for "alleged corruption and contractual irregularities".

Astra said ministry inspectors had arrived at its former office in Canterbury on Tuesday to investigate "various transactions and a number of other matters".

Astra has been in financial trouble since it bought Belgian explosives manufacturer Poudrieres Reunies de Belgique (PRB) for 21.5 million pounds (34.4 million dollars) from Gechem, a subsidiary of Societe Generale de Belgique, last year.

In December Astra disclosed that it was 3.5 million pounds (5.6 million dollars) in the red after problems with delayed Ministry of Defense contracts. Its shares have slumped to 18 pence after peaking at 180 pence last year.

On March 12, Astra executives warned shareholders that the group's results would show a "substantial" deficit for the financial year that ended on March 31 because of the poor performance of PRB, which lost 12 million pounds (19 million dollars) in 1989 although Astra had expected it to show a profit of two million (3.2 million dollars).

The company has announced 250 layoffs at its factory in Grantham, in the English Midlands, and on Friday closed its former head office in Canterbury, axing eight employees.

After the sackings, Astra will retain 460 employees in its two British factories. Its sales were 96.2 million pounds (153 million dollars) for the 1988-89 fiscal year. It lost 3.4 million pounds (5.4 million dollars) in the first six months of the current fiscal year.

Astra's newly appointed chairman Roy Barber said Tuesday that his company would cooperate with the probe. "Astra is determined that ... all implications of impropriety by the company or any of its employees or directors be thoroughly investigated," Mr. Barber said.

He said the auditing firm Coopers Lybrand Deloitte was also investigating for Astra "the conduct of certain directors prior to March 1990".

BRUSSELS (APRIL 3) - The European Economic Community and Bulgaria on Tuesday initialled a 10-year trade and cooperation agreement, in a further strengthening of the EEC's ties with the emerging democracies of Eastern Europe, officials said.

The accord calls for the scrapping of quota restrictions on Bulgarian imports to the Community and developing cooperation, including joint ventures in agriculture, industry and tourism, a spokesman for the European Commission, which initialled the document, said.

Most of the import restrictions will be abolished by 1996, he said.

The Community has already signed similar accords with Poland, Hungary, the Soviet Union and last month initialled agreements with East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

The Commission is also seeking a mandate to negotiate with Romania for widening an accord that was signed in 1980 with the hardline Communist government, ousted last December.

The new agreement could be ready by the summer, Commission sources say, but added that there had been difficulties because of the caretaker nature of the government in Bucharest.

The Community will then procede to so-called "second generation" association accords to establish free trade, increased economic cooperation and a closer political relationship.

But the Commissioner for external trade relations, Frans Andriessen, has ruled out including any pledge to offer future EEC membership in these accords.

The Community signed a mutual recognition treaty with the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (Comecon) in June 1988.

EEC leaders meet in Dublin on April 28 to discuss German unification and the situation in the rest of eastern Europe.

Bulgarian Prime Minister Andrezh Lukanov, heading a pro-reform government that succeeded hardline Todor Zhivkov after his downfall last November 10, is scheduled to make an official visit to the Commission on Thursday.

The agreement initialled Tuesday must be submitted to the European Parliament before being signed by the Council of Ministers, the top EEC decision-making body.

CAPE TOWN (APRIL 3) - The Supreme Court here sentenced three men to death Tuesday for what the judge called a "horrifying reign of terror" in which two women and a man were kidnapped, robbed, raped, sodomised, and indecently assaulted.

Jerome Pienaar, 20, Roderick Bock, 20, and Steven Smith, 22 were sentenced two months after President Frederik de Klerk announced a suspension of executions in his reformist speech of February 2.

Judges may still pass the death penalty, however, and Mr. Justice D.M. Williamson said that the accused had shown no real remorse for the crimes, which they committed in this city on November 1, 1988.

One who "played a leading role in the horrific deeds of that night" had "impressed as an evil young man ... a menace," the judge said.

A youth was sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment for involvement in the crimes.

PIETERMARITZBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (APRIL 3) - African National Congress (ANC) deputy president, Nelson Mandela Tuesday ended a two-day visit to war-torn Natal townships, pledging for peace and leaving behind thousands of fired-up supporters.

He spent most of Tuesday speaking to victims of the violence and surveyed the devastation caused by fighting between the socialist United Democratic Front (UDF) and the more conservative Zulu Inkatha.

Addressing thousands at every stop, Mr. Mandela told people to lay aside their weapons and political differences and seek peace.

He also toured refugee camps set up in church halls around the townships, where more than 11,000 people have taken shelter.

Later he stopped by a make-shift clinic, where doctors told Agence France-Presse they treat some 170 sickly and injured refugees daily.

Hordes of refugees clad in torn clothes salvaged from burnt-out houses, pleaded with Mr. Mandela to forge peace in Natal.

The ANC nationalist earlier told the press he was touched by the high morale of the Natal people but alarmed by the carnage which has claimed the lives of up to 85 people in the past week.

"To see the body of a man shot, burnt and buried under debris is a very gruesome scene indeed. It was an experience I hope never to see again," Mr. Mandela told the media after inspecting bodies of people killed in the violence.

Mr. Mandela passed by shells of huts burnt in the violence and the remnants of burning barricades made up of car tyres and bedsprings.

Upturned torched cars lay scattered in the dirt roads he traversed together with ANC activists, Harry Gwala and Archie Gumede.

Troops, who moved into the townships in their droves in the weekend in an attempt to quell the violence, kept a close watch on the Mandela entourage.

Mr. Mandela has expressed guarded acceptance of troops in the townships, but again called Tuesday for police to be barred from the strife-torn areas, accusing them of collaborating with Inkatha..

As the dust settled after Mr. Mandela left to jet back to Johannesburg; residents told AFP they feared Inkatha supporters, threatened by Mr. Mandela's visit here, would turn on them during Tuesday night.

Earlier Tuesday ANC bodyguards moved in to protect Mr. Mandela while he was addressing some 11,000 ANC supporters in Edendale township, as Inkatha supporters leered at him from a nearby hill.

MOSCOW (APRIL 3) - Both chambers of the Soviet parliament passed a law Tuesday outlining the modalities for republics to secede from the union, Tass news agency reported.

The law was passed in the morning by the Council of Nationalities, on a second reading, and in the evening by the Council of the Union. Together, they form the Supreme Soviet, the country's standing legislature.

The proposals will not therefore be discussed once again in a plenary session of the parliament, as is usual.

Observers said the move indicated Moscow's wish not to lose time, following Lithuania's declaration of independence on March 11.

Under the bill, a republic wishing to secede would have to win the backing of two-thirds of the voters in a referendum and wait for a period of up to five years before leaving the union. The republic would also have to settle all financial issues with Moscow prior to leaving.

A repeat referendum could be held before the transitional period ended, to confirm the original vote, and results from each province would be considered separately, allowing individual regions to stay in the union if they wanted to.

A republic which failed to win a two-third majority for independence would not be able to hold another referendum on the issue for 10 years.

Currently, the Soviet constitution only specifies that a republic has the "right" to secede, without specifying how this can be done.

ISLAMABAD (APRIL 3) - Customs agents Tuesday seized more than six tons of illegal drugs from traffickers in Pakistan.

Official sources said a truck headed for Mekran coast from Karachi was stopped by agents 15 kilometers out of the port city. A check revealed six tonnes of cannabis hidden under flour bags.

Some 1,500 kilometers to the north another customs team recovered 380 kilograms of heroin from an oil tanker truck near Kohat, the sources said.

Last year Pakistani authorities seized more than 8.5 tons of heroin, a 40 percent increase over the seizures the previous year.

Drug trafficking has created a domestic market in Pakistan with an estimated 700,000 addicts consuming 50 tons of heroin every year.

PORT-AU-PRINCE (APRIL 3) - The high command of the Haitian Army Tuesday announced a reshuffle of its officer corps, including the appointment of Colonel Jean-Claude Duperval as the capital's new military commander.

Colonel Edy Louis replaced Col. Duperval as head of the Narcotics Bureau, an official statement said.

Former Presidential Guard chief Colonel Christophe Dardompre was put in charge of the recently created General Headquarters Companies.

The 900-strong Presidential Guard was restructured and renamed General Headquarters Companies, after the March 10 resignation of General Prosper

Avril. Some of the old troops stayed on.

Gen. Avril was replaced as head of state in an interim capacity by Ertha Pascal-Trouillot on March 13.

Meanwhile, Colonel Henri-Robert Augustin, who was put in charge of the central military department, was rejected by his own troops at Hinche central headquarters, official sources said.

Some of the soldiers rebelled Monday and marched on the town, firing their weapons into the air and causing panic among residents.

LONDON (APRIL 3) - Britain's Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) on Tuesday released electrical group GEC from some commitments made by the group in 1987 to allow it to take over electronics and defense group Plessey.

GEC had launched a hostile bid for Plessey in 1985, which was blocked by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on the grounds that it would hamper free competition.

In June 1987, GEC agreed not to acquire more than a 15 percent stake in Plessey, and not to merge with any of the group's subsidiaries.

But in 1988 GEC launched a joint bid for Plessey with West German electrical and electronics group Siemens. The joint bid was approved under certain conditions by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in April last year, and then in August by the DTI.

The British-West German consortium GEC-Siemens then took control of Plessey.

But GEC and Siemens seemed to be preparing to divide Plessey's businesses between them rather than assuming joint control, a possibility that had been raised when they launched their bid in 1988.

The DTI's decision, announced Tuesday, will allow GEC and Siemens to restructure some of Plessey's businesses in ways that were not foreseen in the Monopolies and Mergers Commission's report last year.

The DTI will now allow GEC to acquire 100 percent of Plessey subsidiaries in which it already holds a majority stake.

The DTI will also allow GEC to boost its stake to 100 percent in subsidiaries that were to become joint ventures in which GEC and Siemens would hold equal stakes.

Those companies are Plessey Semiconductors Ltd., Plessey Research Caswell Ltd., Plessey Materials, Plessey Aerospace Ltd., Plessey Aero Precision Corporation (USA) and E.S. Marine Systems Corporation (USA).

The DTI had already announced on March 14 that GEC could acquire 100 percent of three of Plessey's U.S. subsidiaries -- Plessey Electronic Systems Corporation, Plessey Dynamics Corporation, which makes aerospace components, and Plessey Materials Corporation, which makes materials undetectable to radars.

As for Plesey subsidiaries in which GEC was to have held a minority stake, if GEC and Siemens decide to increase the British group's stake, the Director General of Fair Trading would make a recommendation to the DTI as to whether GEC should be allowed to go ahead or whether the deal should be referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

In Munich, Siemens and GEC published a restructuring plan for their British subsidiaries seen as a response to the DTI decision, analysts said.

Their joint venture GEC-PLessey Telecommunications (GPT), in which both companies formerly held 50 percent, will now be 60 percent held by GEC. Siemens will retain a 40 percent stake.

But Siemens is taking 100 percent of Plessey's radar and defense systems business.

GEC is taking over Plessey's naval systems and avionics businesses.

GEC is also acquiring 100 percent of the U.S.-based Plessey Electronics Systems.

TOKYO (APRIL 3) - An auction of more than 200 Art Nouveau vases, lamps and molten-glass tableware items signed by Galle and Daum fetched record prices here Tuesday, auctioneer Jacques Tajan said.

A piece of the Eiffel Tower was also sold to a Las Vegas casino owner.

Mr. Tajan said the sale confirmed the interest of the Japanese in Art Nouveau works, which showed they were willing to fork over large sums of cash despite the recent downturns here in financial markets.

"The sale totalled 1.235 billion yen (7.72 million dollars), which constitutes a world record," Mr. Tajan said.

A 1987 sale of works by Daum brought in 450 million yen (2.81 million dollars) in Tokyo.

Mr. Tajan said that if Tuesday's sale "had been held in Paris, I would have gotten only half" of the prices earned here, adding that nearly everything brought under the hammer was sold.

But the Japanese showed little interest in buying the last three sections of the Eiffel Tower's original staircase.

A Las Vegas casino operator, bidding by telephone, bought a section for eight million yen (50,000 dollars), Mr. Tajan said.

The two other pieces were purchased by French buyers. The first fetched nine million yen (56,250 dollars), and the second went for 8.8 million yen (55,000 dollars).

The spiral staircase was removed in 1983 and new segments installed. Most of the pieces were auctioned off in December 1987.

More than half the glass collection was purchased by a "fabulously wealthy Japanese collector," Mr. Tajan said.

LONDON (APRIL 3) - The detention of a Reuters news agency reporter by authorities in Sudan violates international standards of press freedom and he should be released immediately, the International Press Institute (IPI) said here Tuesday.

In a message addressed to Omar Hassan al-Beshir, the leader of Sudan's ruling military junta, director Peter Galliner said the IPI was "most concerned about the detention, without explanation" of Reuters reporter Alfred Taban.

"We urge our colleague's immediate release and ask for your assurance that all journalists in your country are allowed to operate freely without harassment or intimidation," the message said.

Mr Taban, 33, who had been working for Reuters since 1987, was arrested last week and was believed to be held in a Khartoum jail.

INDIANAPOLIS, IN (APRIL 3) - President George Bush hit out Tuesday at Iraqi threats to retaliate with chemical weapons against any Israeli attack.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater issued a statement saying: "The president finds the statements about Iraq's chemical weapons capability to be particularly deplorable and irresponsible.

"Such statements can only exacerbate tensions and further destabilize this already volatile region. What is needed in the Middle East is not inflammatory rethoric, but concerted steps to rid the region of chemical and other non-conventional weapons and to move toward peace."

Iraq's President Saddam Hussein announced Monday that his country possessed chemical weapons and would not hesitate to use them against Israel if that country ever attacked Iraq.

Iraq claims to have binary chemical weapons, sophisticated weapons in which two mildly toxic substances combine during the flight of a missile to produce a deadly gas.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler denied Iraqi claims that the United States had launched a propaganda campaign against the Baghdad government.

"There is no such campaign," she insisted.

DHAKA (APRIL 3) - Storms left 19 people dead overnight in Bangladesh, pushing the death toll in the past nine days to at least 94, local officials and newspapers here said Tuesday.

Hailstorms injured more than 150 people, flattened houses, trees and electric posts and sank river boats in western Pabna and Sirajganj, southeastern Cox's Bazar and Chittagong and central Manikganj districts Monday, local officials and witnesses were quoted as saying.

Three people were still missing after a ferry boat carrying some 80 people sank in the River Jamuna during the storm, the district police chief said by telephone from Sirajganj 105 kilometres (65 miles) from here.

In Cox's Bazar, lightning and flying debris killed three persons, injured 25 people and destroyed 700 houses, Dainik Bangla said.

Earlier, 75 people were reported dead in rain and hail across the country, where storms hit with increasing frequency this time of year.

Hamiduzzaman Khan Chowdhury, chief of Dhaka's weather forecast department, was quoted as saying that some 16 more storms or tornadoes were likely to hit Bangladesh in April and could cause flash floods in northern Bangladesh.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) - The State Department Tuesday welcomed plans by South Africa to grant amnesty to officials of the African National Congress (ANC) returning from exile.

South African President Frederik de Klerk announced Monday he could meet ANC leader Nelson Mandela this week, while his justice minister, Kobie Coetsee, was to introduce legislation to offer amnesty to politically-motivated criminals. The proposal was seen as paving the way for the return of ANC exiles to take part in negotiations.

This was described Tuesday by State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler as "another positive move by President de Klerk toward fostering a climate conducive to beginning the negotiating process."

She added: "We understand that the ANC has sought such a law as reassurance that its leaders will not be subject to arrest if they return from exile for talks with the government.

"We also note that the UDF (United Democratic Front) has reacted positively to President de Klerk's action."

"In this regard, we call on the ANC to re-engage in the peace process by rescheduling the April 11 meeting with the government which it canceled last week as soon as possible," Miss Tutwiler said.

Turning to the bloody fighting between black rival factions in South Africa's Natal province, Miss Tutwiler said it was "extremely serious" and added that Washington understood the decision by the Pretoria Government to deploy addition security forces there "was taken to begin the process of restoring order."

AMMAN (APRIL 3) - King Hussein of Jordan on Tuesday pledged support for Iraq in the face of what he said was "a campaign that masks aggressive intentions."

He denied that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, who on Monday warned that Iraq possessed chemical weapons and could destroy Israel in the event of an Israeli attack, had threatened anyone.

"He was simply stressing his ability to respond to any hidden aggression and his right to self-defense," King Hussein said in a statement carried by the Jordanian news agency Petra.

The king also denounced what he said was an organized anti-Iraqi campaign, which gathered steam following disclosures in Britain and the United States last week of an alleged scheme to smuggle nuclear detonator components to Baghdad.

Iraqi authorities have repeatedly denied they are trying to produce nuclear weapons and have insisted that the components seized were electrical condensers to be used for research.

The campaign against Iraq, according to King Hussein, "reflects an old animosity toward our Arab nation and the agressor's desire to prevent it from progressing and building its strength."

He noted that Iraq has signed the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, unlike Israel.

"This campaign is directed at Iraq rather than Israel, the only nuclear state in the Middle East. That means that the campaign masks aggressive intentions."

SOFIA (APRIL 3) - The supreme council of the Bulgarian Communist Party agreed Tuesday that the party should henceforth be known as the Bulgarian Socialist Party, a spokesman announced here.

The decision, disclosed to some 80,000 party supporters outside the party headquarters here, followed the election of reformer Petar Mladenov as Bulgarian president earlier Tuesday by parliament.

The name-change follows a referendum in which 86.71 percent of the party's 900,000 came out in favor of the change.

Mr. Mladenov, a former foreign minister given extensive powers as head of state, was also freed Tuesday from his responsibilities as Communist Party chairman.

National assembly speaker Stanko Todorov, 69, and Luben Gotsov, 58, head of the party's electoral campaign team, were both elected Tuesday to the party leadership.

The national assembly had earlier Tuesday decided that Bulgaria's first free elections in 45 years will be held on June 10 and 17.

The parliamentary decisions followed round-table talks last week between the government and the opposition. The re-named communist party currently leads the opinion polls.

Demonstrators outside the party buildings here held banners with such slogans as "Democratic socialism is the road to the future!" and "The Bulgarian Socialist Party expresses the people's wishes for democratic renewal!".

Before the Bulgarians, the Hungarian Communist Party transformed itself into a socialist party last October at its latest congress, with backing from more than 80 percent of the delegates.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 3 - Japan agreed Tuesday to open its commercial satellite market to foreign-made orbiters, resolving a key sticking point in trade negotiations with the United States, U.S. and Japanese officials announced.

As part of an "agreement in principle" on satellites reached by U.S. and Japanese negotiators here early Tuesday (eds correct), Tokyo also said it would restrict a controversial government-funded satellite project known as CS4 to purely scientific functions.

The CS4 was originally to be a joint project of the government and the giant Nippon Telephone and Telegragh (NTT) that would include commercially applicable weather and communications capabilities.

The United States wanted the project opened to bids from foreign satellite makers, while Japan contended it needed to bar such involvment in order to protect its infant space technology industry.

"The agreement opens up not only communications and broadcast satellites, but all satellites including weather satellites and others not used for testing of new technologies or for non-sommercial scientific research," U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills said in a statement.

Makoto Yamanaka, a Foreign Ministry spokesman, said Tuesday that under a compromise formula worked out over the past six days, the CS4 project would be produced solely by the government and would be pared down to exclude all commercially usable channels.

In return, NTT and government agencies would be permitted to purchase foreign-made commercial satellites.

While Mr. Yamanaka announced that the two sides had reached a three-point agreement in principle on the satellite issue -- the stickiest of the so-called Super-301 trade disputes between the two governments -- U.S. officials cautioned that the deal was not yet done.

"There's still a final and important point to be ironed out and they're working on it right now," said an official in the office of the U.S. Trade Representative. He would not elaborate.

Mr. Yamanaka described the outstanding issues as "technicalities" and expressed confidence they would be worked out soon.

WELLINGTON (APRIL 4) - International shipping companies may be allowed to trade on New Zealand's domestically protected coastal shipping routes under proposals released here Wednesday.

Only ships with New Zealand survey certificates and with seafarers holding the country's certificates of competency employed under its award rates can currently ply coastal routes.

The Ministry of Transport proposal warned that if New Zealand changed its rules it could expect "a degree of industrial action" over the possible loss of up to 1,100 jobs worth nearly 60 million New Zealand dollars (34.7 million U.S) a year.

New Zealand's maritime and waterfront unions are among the country's oldest and at times most militant.

But, the ministry said, permitting passing ships or transit carriers to compete in the coastal trade would result in lower costs.

New Zealand would benefit through getting some part of the subsidies available to national flag carriers of various countries and access to open registry vessels, the spread of costs over more than one trade range, a share in the economies of scale of large deep-sea vessels, and the small management and agency costs of servicing the coastal trade from an established shipping operation.

"Competition from transit vessels would encourage dedicated carriers to be more efficient and lessen to a small degree the consequences of disruption to dedicated inter-island liner services," the paper said.

Transport Minister Bill Jeffries said in a statement Wednesday that the paper was "not a Trojan horse to advance a predetermined position in favor of opening up the trade."

Submissions on the paper are open until the end of May, after which the government is likely to make a decision on the question.

NEW YORK, (APRIL 3) - When he was vice president, George Bush urged Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos to invest in U.S. real estate instead of an oil deal with Libyan leader Moamer Kadhafy, Mrs. Marcos's defense attorney said Tuesday at her racketeering trial.

Defense attorney Gerald Spence said he would call the U.S. President to testify about an alleged 1981 meeting in which Mr. Bush supposedly urged the Marcoses to invest their money in the United States instead of Libya.

"They (the Marcoses) abandoned any further attempt to invest in Libya and began to put their money into New York real estate," said Mr. Spence, who added that the Philippines' former first couple "saw themselves as children of America."

He also said the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) "was aware of every transaction" which led to the indictment of Mrs. Marcos, her husband and several co-defendants.

Mrs. Marcos, 60, is accused of racketeering, conspiracy, fraud and obstruction of justice, and faces up to 50 years in jail and a one million dollar fine if convicted.

Her husband, the ex-president of the Philppines who also was named in the 1988 indictment, died in exile in Hawaii last September. They and several followers fled the Philippines in February 1986 after a popular revolt ousted him and brought Corazon Aquino to power.

In Washington, White House spokesman Steve Hart declined to comment on Mr. Spence's allegations that Mr. Bush and U.S. intelligence officials were aware of the Marcoses' financial dealings.

Earlier in the day, U.S. Attorney Debra Livingston told the 12-member jury the Marcoses allegedly syphoned more than 160 million dollars from their country's treasury to buy posh New York real estate and defrauded U.S. banks of another 165 million dollars to finance the purchases.

Miss Livingston said Mrs. Marcos used the New York branch of the Philippine National Bank as her "own personal piggy bank."

"This is a case of theft, fraud and deceit on an incredible scale," the prosecutor said.

Miss Livingston said that under the Marcos regime, anything was fair game -- bribes to the first couple from Philippine construction firms, bank accounts under fake names, ultra-fast money laundering and easy access to cash at the Philippine National Bank in New York.

"Every time she descended on New York ... she cracked it open, (taking) bundles and bundles," Ms. Livingston said.

The Marcoses "grabbed from a dollar-poor country to satisfy Imelda Marcos's voracious appetite for real estate, jewelry and art.

"They were not small appartment buildings. They were three huge skyscrapers and a large shopping center. One building was a gold encrusted skyscraper on Fifth Avenue," Miss Livingston said.

In response to the prosecutor's opening statement, Mr. Spence said Mrs. Marcos had vowed to fight in court to defend the Marcos name.

"This is a woman who lived with her beloved husband for 35 years. She was with him in sickness and in health and when he took his last breath," Mr. Spence said of Mrs. Marcos. "It is her position: 'I am going to defend my husband.'"

He said Mrs. Marcos did not fully understand her late husband's business dealings.

She "ignored the intricacies of finance. She would say over and over again 'Ferdinand, what is happening here ? What are you doing in this situation " Mr. Spence told the jury.

The prosecution alleges that both Marcoses placed embezzled funds from the Philippines Treasury in secret bank accounts -- primarily in Hong Kong and Switzerland -- before being transferred to a dozen front companies that acted as legal owners of the New York real estate.

One of Mrs. Marcos' co-defendants, Saudi financier Adnan Khashoggi, is accused of helping the couple hide ownership of the Manhattan real estate. He is charged with mail fraud and obstruction of justice and faces up to 10 years in prison and a 500,000 dollar fine.

SEOUL (APRIL 3) - South Korea suffered a trade deficit during the first quarter this year for the first time in four years, registering 1.88 billion dollars in the red, the Trade and Industry Ministry said Tuesday.

Commodity exports for the first three months to March dropped 1.3 percent to 13.89 billion dollars on a customs clearance basis, while imports soared by 12.7 percent to 15.77 billion dollars, leaving a 1.88 billion dollar deficit.

During the same period of last year, South Korea earned a 59 million dollar trade surplus.

Exports of footwear, machinery and ships expanded, but other major export items such as electronics and automobiles and textiles performed badly. Automobile exports plunged 38.5 percent, while electronics products and textiles dipped 3.8 percent and 2.4 percent respectively.

The South Korean government is to announce a new package of measures to help stimulate the country's sagging economy and exports on Wednesday, including loosening reins on credit lines.

Analysts cautioned, however, that any measures to increase money supply would in turn fan inflation at a time when the economy shows signs of stagflation.

The government Economic Planning Board said the inflation rate for the first quarter was 3.2 percent, compared with 1.2 percent during the same period of last year. The rate is calculated at more than 10 percent on a year-to-year basis.

Inflationary pressures are also gaining steam from the weakening South Korean won as consumers have to pay more for imports.

The won has depreciated by 1.15 percent to 704 to the dollar as of Tuesday since the country allowed 97 local and foreign banks to trade in foreign currencies early last month.

Many analysts predict it will continue sliding to around 740 won to the dollar.

GUATEMALA CITY (APRIL 3) EFE - Leftist Guatemalan guerrillas will hold talks with political parties in the Spanish capital next month, a step toward eventual peace negotiations with the government, a spokesman for a government-backed peace commission said Tuesday.

Representatives of the Guatemalan National Revolutionary Movement (URNG) guerrillas will meet with Guatemalan politicians in Madrid in the first week of May, peace commission leader Leopoldo Sandoval said.

On Friday, the URNG signed an accord in the Norwegian capital with the independent Guatemalan peace commission, known as the National Reconciliation Commission (CNR).

The agreement calls for the rebels to also meet with delegates from religious, business and other groups in May.

At these meetings, a date is to be set for representatives with full decision-making powers from the Armed Forces, the government and the URNG to negotiate an end to the 30-year-old war.

Human rights groups say more than 100,000 people have been killed during the war, most of them civilian victims of Army counter-insurgency sweeps.

Jorge Serrano Elias, a government representative on the CNR, met with Spanish officials Monday to set the next round of talks in Madrid, according to Sandoval.

Both Cerezo and the Armed Forces have said they back the talks, held under a 1987 regional peace accord signed by the five Central American presidents.

Madrid was the venue for talks held under terms of the accord in October 1987, in which the government and URNG failed to reach any agreement.

Rebel and CNR representatives met in 1988 in Costa Rica in another failed bid to end the insurgency which began in 1960.

BOGOTA (APRIL 3) EFE - Editions of the crusading Colombian newspaper El Espectador appeared Tuesday with the editorial comment section blanked out in protest at the government's alleged silence over threats to the daily from drug traffickers.

A statement in the newspaper said editorials would be omitted until "the paths towards guaranteeing freedom of expression had been fully secured", adding that the country's drug lords "had pronounced a death sentence on judges, politicians and journalists".

On Saturday, "The Extraditables", as the cocaine cartel chiefs call themselves, said it would resume its self-declared war on judges, politicians, journalists and all supporters of the crackdown on the cartels initiated by President Virgilio Barco last August.

The group charged that the government had failed to carry out undertakings it allegedly gave during secret negotiations since The Extraditables suspended their attacks last January to persuade Barco to stop extraditions of top drug suspects to the United States.

El Espectador's editor Alfonso Cano warned that if the government did not confront the threat from the drug barons the 103-year-old paper, which has campaigned vigorously against the cartels, would close.

Last September, a 300 kg car bomb demolished the paper's offices and printing plant, and a number of journalists and administrative staff have been killed.

Meanwhile Cano and the paper's co-editors met governmennt officials Tuesday to discuss the threat from The Extraditables, who promised to explode 5,000 kg of bombs in waelthy Bogota neighborhoods in retaliation for some 5,000 drug traffickers detained by police.

The company said that proceeds from the sale of Freeman, received yesterday, were approximately $65 million, reflecting certain working capital and other adjustments. Those proceeds will reduce borrowings necessary to effect the company's previously announced proposed plan of recapitalization, Georgia Gulf added.

Separately, the company stated that it welcomed the announcement and decision of NL Industries (NYSE: NL) to allow its tender offer for Georgia Gulf to expire and to support the company's plan of recapitalization. In light of NL Industries' disclosure, the board of directors has extended indefinitely the distribution date for the company's preferred share purchase rights which had been scheduled for distribution on April 2.

In reporting progress on the plan of recapitalization, the company noted that a proxy statement has been mailed to stockholders. The board has asked stockholders to approve the plan as recommended at a special meeting to be held in Atlanta on April 19. In anticipation of stockholder approval of the recapitalization plan and the subsequent April payment of the recapitalization consideration, which in part includes $30.00 in cash, the company said the board has determined not to declare the regular quarterly dividend of $.25 which would have been payable this month.

ROCKVILLE, MD (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Advanced amorphous silicon- based solar electric technology developed by Solarex Corporation, an Amoco Company (NYSE: AN), has achieved a world-record 10 percent efficiency in the conversion of sunlight to electricity in a one-square foot format.

The advances are the result of research conducted in a cost-shared government and industry partnership program with the Solar Energy Research Institute (SERI) in Golden, Colo. SERI has independently confirmed the sunlight-to-energy efficiency record.

Commercially-produced amorphous silicon devices are approximately 4 to 5 percent efficient.

Solarex is a world leader in the development of amorphous silicon- based solar cells, and owns key patents to the technology. Solarex uses advanced computer and laser processing to deposit and pattern micron- thin layers of silicon and other space-age materials onto a plate of glass. The resulting "module" produces direct current electricity when exposed to sunlight.

David Carlson, vice president for the Solarex Thin Film Division and inventor of the amorphous silicon solar cell, underscores the importance of the 10 percent efficiency achievement. "With this development, we begin to meet the requisite for market penetration into certain large-scale applications, such as utility-based electrical generation."

Carlson attributes the improved performance to important research and process engineering breakthroughs. These include improvement of the device's light trapping capability, and the development of an advanced Solarex laser patterning process.

Solarex Corporation is the leading U.S.-owned manufacturer of both semicrystalline and amorphous silicon photovoltaic systems and components. Its amorphous silicon research and manufacturing operations are located in Newtown, Pa. SERI is operated by the Midwest Research Institute, Kansas City, Mo., under a prime contact with the U.S. Department of Energy.

PARSIPPANY, NJ (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - General Public Utilities (NYSE: GPU) registered record financial results in 1989 while beginning to evolve from a traditional electric utility into a business ready for the competitive environment of the 1990s, the utility said in its recently released annual report.

"We want GPU to be viewed as one of the best managed, most efficient, progressive and profitable utilities in America. Our annual report's theme -- 'Entering a New Era' -- reflects our aggressive initiatives to position GPU for the future," said Standley H. Hoch, GPU chairman, president and chief executive officer.

In the report, he outlined GPU's core business strategy emphasizing that the company continues to work to reduce costs.

"In 1989, we reduced expenses by streamlining our organization through consolidation and elimination of duplicate functions. Operation and maintenance expense declined by 5.4 percent, reflecting GPU's continued commitment to cost containment. We are focused not only on improving operational efficiency and staff productivity, but also on providing the safest possible environment for our employees and the communities we serve.

"The strategies we are employing to manage our business and the cultural changes taking place within our organization will foster our continuing evolution from a traditional electric utility to a customer- oriented and environmentally sensitive company of the 1990s."

In 1989 GPU earnings per share increased 5.5 percent to $5.01 from $4.75 in 1988. Hoch attributed the increase to growth in the number of customers, reduction in operation and maintenance expense and a decrease in the amount of common stock.

The report summarizes 1989 operating highlights including cleanup of Three Mile Island Unit 2 which was essentially finished with the early 1990 defueling of the plant.

GPU is a registered electric utility holding company with three operating subsidiaries: Jersey Central Power & Light, Pennsylvania Electric and Metropolitan Edison. It has two service subsidiaries, GPU Service, which provides integrated system plans and services, and GPU Nuclear, which operates the subsidiaries' nuclear plants. DETROIT (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Omron Electronics, Inc., Schaumburg, Ill. demonstrated here today a prototype "fuzzy logic" controller that "thinks" like humans. It enables programmers to deal easily with imprecise qualities like "most," "many," "few," "slightly," "about," and so on that typically accompany human descriptions of real- world situations. More flexible than currently used computer logic, the Fuzzy controller can draw correct conclusions from vague information, an Omron spokesperson explained.

The prototype FZ-5000 "Fuzzy" controller, said Tom Morrow, Omron's marketing services manager, "may represent the next great breakthrough in advanced control technology."

Unlike traditional logic-based systems, which require precise modeling -- such as "true or false," "black or white," "on or off," "zero or one" -- fuzzy logic can control operations using the operator's or expert's knowledge expressed in ordinary language. Using fuzzy technology, programmers now can model subjective concepts such as "bright red," "a long time" or "very hot."

Fuzzy logic, still in its infancy, is being applied to a wide range of applications, from programmable controllers and sensors to office automation, electronic fund transfer and medical electronics, Morrow noted. It is particularly well suited for artificial intelligence applications such as expert systems, which it can simplify programming and significantly improve system performance.

"It has the unique ability to observe its own performance, treat some rules as more important or disregard some altogether -- in effect, learn to optimize system objectives," said Morrow.

The new technology, based on the concept of fuzzy sets, uses subjective knowledge to control applications that could not be automated effectively with conventional controls. The fuzzy controller "thinks" like humans, utilizing an operator's "sense" of the control system; e.g., "if the strawberry is red, it is probably sweet." Its thinking is based on rules linguistically expressed and a new high speed analog hybrid IC chip to handle the math, processing the rules at the rate of 100,000 per second.

Morrow said fuzzy control can best be applied where human supervision and intuition play a major role, such as in color perception; complex control systems where the extensive math processing using conventional logic is too slow, and where it can quickly focus in on an area of concentration for conventional ditigal control.

The demonstration here at the 1990 International Programmable Controller Conference in Cobo Hall is the first for the FZ-5000 fuzzy controller outside Japan. It combines a high speed analog bus for inference processing with a conventional digital bus for rule setting, to sample fuzzy inference data and communicate to external systems, such as computers.

Fuzzy logic is an inference method based on fuzzy sets and membership functions that offers an alternative to strict digital logic and probability calculations to model non-linear systems. Unlike traditional sets, whose elements are either in the set or not with no in-betweens, fuzzy set elements can have only partial membership. For example, in the set of tall persons, a human being measuring 6 feet, 1 inch might have a membership value of 0.3, while a 7-foot person might have a membership value of 0.9.

Omron does not expect to have a commercial product for North America for at least a year, said Morrow. The company's world sales of automation products were about $3 billion in 1989. It pegs sales for its fuzzy control products at $500 million by 1995.

(NYSE: GVF), of Edina, Minn., and James River Corporation (NYSE: JR), of Richmond, Va., in a joint announcement today, said they have reached an agreement covering the cross-licensing of existing patent rights in North America for microwave reactive packaging technology held by each company.

The agreement also settles a lawsuit between the two companies involving James River patents that was pending in Federal District Court in Minnesota.

Each company will receive royalties from the other consistent with their respective licensing programs already available to other manufacturers. James River will pay royalties on its sales of microwave reactive popcorn packaging, while receiving a royalty-free license to other food packaging, with the exception of honeycombed french fry packaging for which Golden Valley retains exclusive patent rights. Golden Valley will pay royalties on its products, with the exception of its popcorn and honeycomb french fry packages.

It is expected that the net financial impact of the royalty payments will not be significant to either company in the near future, as payments by each will largely offset one another.

James D. Watkins, chairman of Golden Valley, and James A. Toney, senior vice president of James River, said in a joint statement, "This agreement between two technological leaders will allow both companies to provide consumers with the best in high-quality food packaging."

Golden Valley Microwave Foods, Inc., is headquartered in Edina, Minn., and markets foods that have been developed and produced specifically for preparation in microwave ovens. Product lines utilize proprietary packaging technology, manufacturing processes and formulations and are distributed both domestically and internationally to the vending industry, mass-merchandise outlets and grocery stores.

"Increased major competition was the primary reasons for the decline in the performance of the home-improvement operations in fiscal 1990. Economic conditions and increasing competition also effected the performance of the shoe and apparel operations.

"The disappointing profit performance in the final quarter of the year was exacerbated by a number of items of no-recurring nature or arising in part from earlier periods.

ROCHESTER, NY (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - In a major announcement, Kodak (NYSE: EK) president Kay R. Whitmore has established a clear policy for environmental management. According to the new company-wide announcement "Environmental sensitivity towards each element of the total product life cycle must be factored into business unit strategic planning."

Whitmore stressed the potential environmental impact of the entire product life cycle from design through manufacturing, distribution, and customer use to disposal of products, product components, and packaging.

"Waste handling options should be considered according to the following priority:

1. Source reduction. Greater environmental acceptability must be achieved through the use of less, different, or fewer materials or components in products and packaging, including recycled secondary materials.

2. Recycling, recovery, or re-use. Environmental impact should be minimized through designs and systems which allow elimination of waste through recovery or re-use or facilitate recycling of material after the producvts or packaging have served their intended use.

3. Treatment. Products and packaging should be made compatible with waste treatment facilities when discarded.

4. Disposal. Products and packaging should not cause environmental concern when landfilled directly or when residues from treatment are landfilled."

"Legislative and regulatory activity is moving rapidly toward mandating increased recycling of components that enter the municipal solid waste stream. Eastman Chemical Company (in Kingsport, Tenn.) is in the forefront of new technological approaches to this issue. Units in the Photographic Products Group and the Health Group also have active projects. All business managers must be alert to this developing trend," Whitmore said.

JACKSONVILLE, FL (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - A year ago, First Union would not have been able to give the City of Okeechobee, Fla. the kind of service the company is offering today -- underwriting for virtually all types of revenue bonds.

But around Christmas, First Union provided the underwriting for a $4.8 million water and sewer bond for Okeechobee. It was the first such bond underwriting for First Union Securities Inc., the newest subsidiary of the Charlotte-based bank holding company.

First Union had received approval from the Federal Reserve Board to underwrite municipal revenue bonds and mortgage-related securities in August 1989. First Union Securities, Inc., was created to accomplish this type of underwriting and other expanded securities activities. It was in place and operating by this past November.

"The improvements that will be possible in Okeechobee as a result of this bond issue are precisely the kinds of work needed to update the infrastructures of cities and counties all over the United States. At First Union, we look forward to handling more of this kind of underwriting in the future," said John P. Evans, president of First Union Securities, Inc.

Evans pointed out that First Union National Bank of Florida, a primary subsidiary of the North Carolina-based holding company, is the second largest commercial bank in Florida.

"Okeechobee benefits from First Union's full-range of investment banking capabilities as well as the bank's commercial banking expertise," said Doug Carter, First Union vice president and manager of the Public Finance Division.

Prior to the August 1989 ruling by the Federal Reserve, First Union had for many years been a dealer in "bank-eligible" securities, such as U.S. Treasury Bonds, Federal Agency and municipal bonds. But bonds such as Okeechobee's, restricted by Section 20 of the Glass-Steagall Act, would not have been among those the bank was allowed to underwrite.

So until the Fed's ruling, First Union's Securities Dealer Division served only as agent, linking buyers and sellers for municipal revenue bonds (issued by governmental bodies) and mortgage-related securities (secured by residential real estate); it could not underwrite these securities.

First Union Corporation (NYSE: FTU), based in Charlotte, N.C., completed its acquisition of Florida National Banks of Florida, Inc. on January 29, 1990, and now has assets of approximately $40 billion.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - The Tribeca Corporation, a New York based investment firm, announced today that it has acquired Xtras, a 76-store national women's accessory chain, from Parklane Hosiery, Inc.

Tribeca plans to merge Xtras with its 84-store Accessory Place chain, to create the largest moderately-priced accessory chain in the United States with 160 stores. It is Tribeca's intention to convert most of the Xtras stores to Accessory Place stores.

Lynda Davey, senior vice president of The Tribeca Corporation, said:

"Xtras, whose focus and store size is very similar to Accessory Place, will give us the opportunity to almost double the size of the chain at substantially less than it would cost us to build new stores. This will be a big step toward our overall goal of opening more than 350 stores around the country within the next few years.

"Although Accessory Place already consisted of 41 stores when we acquired it last year, the chain has proven extraordinary successful as it has grown."

With average sales per square foot of close to $500, Accessory Place has merged as one of the leading companies in the industry. With the addition of Xtras, Accessory Place expects its annual sales to jump to more than $80 million.

Accessory Place, which first opened in 1986, specializes in moderately-priced women's accessories, including jewelry, handbags, belts, sunglasses, hosiery and socks. The award winning store design and fashionable merchandise have attracted a wide range of fashion conscious customers primarily in the 17-35 year old age group.

A Tribeca affiliate purchased Accessory Place, which had been a division of Federated Department Stores, in February 1989. In June 1989, it acquired another direct competitor, the 25-store Etage chain, from the Brown Group and converted them to Accessory Place stores. Among the Etage stores, same store sales versus the previous year have increased by more than 50 percent since their conversion to Accessory Place.

Paula Rogers, president of Accessory Place, said that, "based on this performance, the company has similar expectations for Xtras."

For Parklane Hosiery, the sale of the Xtras division will enable them to focus on their primary business, which is hosiery. Parklane is a major women's legwear and bodywear specialty retailer in the country, operating over 300 stores in 38 states.

WHITE PLAINS, NY (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Codenoll Technology (NASDAQ: CODN) and NYNEX Science & Technology, the research and development arm of NYNEX Corporation (NYSE: NYN), today jointly announced that they have signed a five-year agreement to cooperate in the development of high speed fiber optic-based products and other local area network (LAN) products and technology.

"Linking NYNEX Science & Technology's expertise in communications software with Codenoll's technical leadership in fiber optic LANs will result in a high speed Fiber Distributed Data Interface (FDDI) product line that meets our customers' needs," said Casimir Skrzypczak, vice president for Science & Technology at NYNEX.

"We are entering an era when data communications will ultimately change the way people work together," said Ted Michelfelder, director of LAN Integration Services for NYNEX. "What we are developing goes beyond 'desktop' and 'workgroup' computing to a concept we call 'global inter-networking,' where people in different workgroup networks will be able to communicate directly with one another."

Commenting on the agreement, Michael H. Coden, president of Codenoll, said "This agreement is exciting because Codenoll and NYNEX share the vision of high speed fiber optic connectivity. Codenoll's development of fiber LANs has run parallel with the NYNEX development of SONET (Synchronous Optical Network, CCITT SONET) and Metropolitan Area Networks (IEEE 802.6 MANs). Networks will continue to grow larger and become faster, developments which can only be supported by fiber optic and integrated network management technologies. This alliance shortens the time it will take to bring the appropriate network products to market."

The cooperative effort will focus product development in three areas: (1) A multiport modular network bridge that will provide connections across current international local area networks including FDDI, Ethernet and Token Ring networks, and support for Wide Area Networks (WANs) to remote locations over telecommunications services such as T1 and new high speed communications standards including Switched Multimegabit Data Service (SMDS) and SONET; (2) a comprehensive network management system based on Simplified Network Management Protocol (SNMP) capable of managing Codenoll and other manufacturers' local area network components and links to non-local facilities; (3) continued enhancement of Codenoll's FDDI Concentrator System. These products will conform to the NYNEX LANPATH(TM) architecture for local area networks.

Work under this agreement has already begun and specific details will be released in the near future as products become market ready. Codenoll and NYNEX Information Solutions Group, a subsidiary of NYNEX Corp., are currently finalizing terms of an agreement for the joint marketing and sale of LAN-related products, including the already developed NYNEX LANPATH Fax Server.

NYNEX Corporation, based in New York, is the fourth largest telecommunications company in the United States on ranking by sales.

HOUSTON (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Seagull Energy Corp. (NYSE: SGO) announced plans today to sell a portion of its proved domestic oil and gas reserves. The reserves to be sold total about 8.3 billion cubic feet of natural gas and 1.5 million barrels of oil, but represent only a small percentage of the reserves Seagull purchased in two related acquisitions dating back to late-1988.

"A reserve sale may seem inconsistent with our continuing effort to expand our gas and oil reserve portfolio by an active and aggressive exploratory program," conceded Seagull Chairman Barry J. Galt. "The reserves being sold, however, are generally mature and non-strategic to our ongoing production operations. Those operations are very focused. We can accomplish some operating economies and also look to the sales proceeds as an additional means of funding the continuing exploration program."

The properties will be grouped for sale into three packages -- onshore Gulf Coast, Texas state waters and West Texas/Wyoming. Specifically, the reserves are located offshore Texas and onshore in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and the Rocky Mountain area. They are largely company-operated and consist of large interests in each individual property.

Sales efforts are scheduled to begin in late-April and be concluded before the end of 1990.

In addition to its exploration and production activity, Houston-based Seagull is engaged in the transportation, distribution and marketing of natural gas, liquid products and petrochemicals, and natural gas processing.

CHICAGO (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Vehicle sales are expected to fall about 6 percent in 1990 which will negatively affect parts manufacturers' sales, says an analyst with Duff & Phelps Inc., the investment research and financial consulting firm headquartered here.

"We expect vehicle sales to fall about six percent in 1990 to 13.7 million units from 14.5 million units in 1989," said Edwin C. Ciskowski, who follows the industry for Duff & Phelps. "Importantly, the more sizable decline in U.S. auto production will adversely affect parts manufacturers' sales."

Given Duff & Phelps' near-term outlook for a slowing economy, replacement parts suppliers are expected to outperform the general economic market due to more stable industry fundamentals when compared with other economically sensitive sectors. Longer-term, the industry should benefit from the growth in older vehicle populations and continued manufacturer/distributor consolidations.

"In recent years, the replacement parts market has been sluggish. However, new automobiles are increasingly more expensive and financing periods have lengthened from three to five years, leading more owners to keep their existing cars longer," Ciskowski said. "The result is an increase in the 4-10 year-old vehicle population which should provide a solid demand base for auto parts in the future."

In an effort to contain costs and widen profit margins, domestic auto makers are all but eliminating expensive in-house part production. instead the big three are opting to utilize cost-effective outside replacement part producers.

"The result is an environment that favors the auto parts replacement specialists," said the analyst. "Ominously, the Japanese are increasing their capacity of U.S.-based manufacturing and assembly facilities. The result will be a future used car population less reliant upon American parts for replacement."

Major risks for the industry include quality improvements by domestic manufacturers, which increase component wear-time; market share losses by domestic manufacturers to the Japanese; and lack of U.S. manufacturing of Japanese auto part components, Ciskowski said.

CHICAGO (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Duff & Phelps today lowered the long term deposit rating of Columbia Savings and Loan Association to 'CCC' (substantial risk) from 'B' (single-B). The subordinated debt rating remains 'CCC.'

"The downgrade reflects the severe erosion of the equity base over recent months which has resulted in Columbia's insolvency. A fourth quarter loss of $379 million reduced stockholders' equity to $78 million and losses over the first two months of 1990 of about $200 million resulted in a deficit equity position of about $121 million at Feb. 28, 1990. The large fourth quarter, and full year 1989 loss of $591 million, was mainly due to a $390 million lower of cost or market adjustment on its portfolio of high yield securities and building loss reserves against the portfolio. Further lower of cost or market adjustments produced the loss for the first two months of 1990. It is anticipated that significant additional asset write-downs will occur in march which will increase the deficit equity position. As a result of its insolvency, a takeover of Columbia by the office of thrift supervision is likely," stated a D&P spokesman.

The financial institution's reform, recovery and enforcement act of 1989 requires Columbia to divest of its high yield portfolio. These securities have been designated as "held for sale" and are valued at the lower of cost or market.

Columbia is a California-chartered savings and loan headquartered in Beverly Hills, Calif. Columbia operates 22 branches and seven lending offices in southern California. With $12.7 billion in assets at Sept. 30, 1989, it ranked among the top 20 thrifts in the U.S.

NEW HAVEN, MI (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Margate Ventures, Inc. (NASDAQ: CGUL) today announced financial results for the fourth quarter and year ended Dec. 31, 1989, along with new and additional business, including a four-year purchase order from Chrysler Corporation (NYSE: C).

A fourth-quarter net loss of $1,488,987, or about 7 cents per share, resulted in a year-end net loss of $1,782,453, or about 8 cents per share. The loss is attributed to drastic reductions in customer orders because of the lack of demand for American-made vehicles. For the fourth quarter of 1988, a net loss of $204,693, or about 1 cent per share, was reported, with year-end net income totaling $1,118,279, or about 6 cents per share. Sales for the fourth quarter and year end in 1989 were $5,535,275 and $30,034,059, respectively, as compared to $10,351,480 and $35,731,754 for the same periods in 1988. However, a recent four-year purchase order from Chrysler Corporation is estimated to generate approximately $5 million per year in new revenues.

Margate's subsidiary, New Haven Foundry, received the four-year purchase order, beginning with the 1992 model year, from Chrysler Corporation for its new 5.2-liter cylinder head in support of Margate's sale of 55 percent of New Haven Foundry stock to Delbert W. Mullens. New Haven Foundry will be "single source" on this part. In addition, Chrysler issued New Haven Foundry a purchase order, also beginning with the 1992 model year, for the new 3.9-liter cylinder head which replaces an existing cylinder head that New Haven Foundry currently supplies.

New Haven Foundry recently received purchase orders from new customers, including Toshiba International Corp., Vogel Industries, and World Products, Inc., which are expected to increase revenues by approximately $3 million per year.

Margate's subsidiary, Michigan Casting Corp., also began cleaning operations for National Castings, Inc., which is anticipated to generate $1 million per year in new revenues.

Margate President William Hopton said, "We are very encouraged by the industry's actions and feel the sale of 55 percent of New Haven Foundry to Mr. Mullens will enhance and solidify our relationship with existing customers, as well as with our new customers." (A Margate Ventures shareholders meeting to vote on the sale of New Haven Foundry stock to Mullens will be held on or about April 30.)

Margate Ventures, Inc. is a holding company whose active subsidiaries include New Haven Foundry, Michigan Casting Corporation and Brown City Casting Corporation; all manufacturers or finishers of gray iron castings for the automotive industry. Shares of Margate's common stock are traded publicly in the NASDAQ Over-The-Counter system under the symbol CGUL.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Angeles Corp. (AMEX: ANG) announced that the initial cash distribution from its newly issued Angeles Corp. Units (AMEX: ANGE) will be paid April 30, 1990, to unitholders of record as of April 16.

The payment of $.3056 per unit is for the short period from the date of issuance of the units, March 3, 1990, through April 15.

The Angeles Corp. Unit is a hybrid security with both equity and debt components, which is listed and trades as an equity on the American Stock Exchange. Because the unit certificates were still being distributed to their owners, and the AMEX rules prohibit the setting of a distribution record date while the underlying equity security is trading on a "when-issued" basis, the record and payment dates of this initial distribution were set back in order to comply with Exchange regulations.

Subsequent distributions will be paid semiannually on schedule at Oct. 15 and April 15 during the four-year lifetime of the units. At the end of that period, April 15, 1994, or earlier if Angeles chooses to fulfill certain additional requirements, the units will break apart and the common stock and debenture components will be separately transferable.

Each Angeles Corp. Unit consists of one-half share of Angeles common stock one-fiftieth of a new $1,000 Angeles 12 1/2 percent subordinated debenture maturing in 2005, and the cash payment of a total of $1.00 of principal to be paid over four years.

Cash payment on the $1.00 of principal will be made semiannually beginning in October, in addition to the interest paid on the debentures. There has been no cash dividend paid on Angeles common stock since 1982, when the board of directors instituted a growth- company policy of retaining earnings rather than paying out taxable cash dividends. The Angeles Corp. Units were issued in completion of Angeles' purchase of the remaining assets of certain affiliates.

Angeles Corp. is a diversified investment management company whose subsidiaries manage in excess of $4 billion of securities, real estate, mutual fund and leased equipment assets for corporations, institutions and more than 130,000 individual investors.

DAYTON, OH (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Emery Worldwide has begun the year by improving on-time performance, adding new pick-up and delivery vehicles, and enhancing its management information systems in its effort to make the company the dominant air cargo carrier in the 1990s.

In a briefing today for transportation editors at the company's international "Starbase" sortation hub here, John Zarras, vice president - system operations, said these actions position the carrier for continued growth and a return to profitability.

One of the keys to Emery's resurgence is its ability to move all size and weight shipments in a single "air-haul" system, which gives the company "a competitive advantage in marketing its air freight product to the business customer," Zarras said.

Emery Worldwide's single-system handling includes pick-up and delivery by a dedicated groundcraft fleet, and direct airlift with its own planes into the "Starbase" hub. The facility, which can handle seven million pounds of cargo a day, is the only one in North America able to process envelopes packages and heavy industrial freight in one sort operation.

"We are the only air freight company that can pull up to your dock and, in one visit, take not only your heavy freight, but your envelopes and parcels, too," said Zarras. "That kind of all-in-one service provides one-company control and enormous efficiencies for the business customer."

Zarras said Emery Worldwide's service system differs markedly from the competition's. "Our competitors often have to move their envelopes and heavy freight through separate sortation facilities. We, however, can handle a company's entire shipping needs in one, efficient operation."

Despite this capability, Zarras noted that Emery Worldwide has not been widely perceived as a major carrier of business envelopes and small packages during its first year of operation.

"There has been a misconception about Emery Worldwide's business strategy " Zarras said. "While we remain the leading carrier of heavy industrial freight, let me assure you that we also have the ability to move any size or weight shipment -- including envelopes and parcels -- to any business address in the world. One of our main goals is reclaiming that small-package business and making it grow."

Emery Worldwide, based in Palo Alto, is a subsidiary of Consolidated Freightways, Inc. (NYSE: CNF), a $4-billion diversified transportation company with businesses in long-haul and regional trucking, air freight, ocean container freight and intermodal rail service.

MINNEAPOLIS (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Honeywell Inc. (NYSE: HON) said today that an announcement regarding the divestiture of its Defense and Marine Systems Business was likely by mid-year and that it is pursuing both sale and spin-off alternatives for the business.

"The environment for defense properties has changed since we announced our divestiture plans last July," said James J. Renier, Honeywell chairman and chief executive officer. "While we continue to negotiate with prospective buyers, we are also pursuing other options, including spin-off. This dual path will provide maximum shareholder value in the event we are unable to negotiate an acceptable sale price."

In considering its alternatives, Honeywell will evaluate the total value to shareholders of a sale, which would likely result in a taxable gain, versus a spin-off, which would probably result in neither a gain nor a loss and could be structured on a tax-free basis to shareholders.

In July 1989, Honeywell announced a five-point plan to increase shareholder value, including the reduction of its dependence on weapons markets. The company further indicated that in divesting its Defense and Marine Systems Business, the company would choose an alternative that produced optimum value for Honeywell shareholders.

Defense and Marine Systems is a leading supplier of lightweight torpedoes and precision and conventional weapons to the U.S. Armed Forces and U.S. Allies.

Honeywell is a global controls company that provides products, systems and services for homes and buildings, industry, and aviation and space. The company had 1989 sales of $6.1 billion and employs 64,000 people worldwide.

ATLANTA, (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - "Our financial results through February of this year have fallen below the levels we achieved in 1989, reflecting higher costs for producing and delivering electricity and mild temperatures across the region that slowed the growth of energy sales," Southern Co. President Edward L. Addison said today.

The Southern Co. (NYSE: SO) is the parent firm of five electric utilities: Alabama Power, Georgia Power, Gulf Power, Mississippi Power, and Savannah Electric. The Southern Co.'s stock is one of the 20 most widely held corporate stocks in America.

Addison announced that earnings for the first two months of 1990 totaled $87 million or 28 cents per share -- down $50 million or 15 cents per share from the corresponding period last year.

For the 12 months ending Feb. 28, net income was $797 million or $2.52 per share -- down $67 million or 24 cents per share from the comparable 12 months a year ago.

Addison noted that the Georgia Public Service Commission issued a key decision last fall related to Georgia Power's investment in unit 2 of Plant Vogtle. Georgia Power had asked for a rate increase of $413 million. The commission recognized a need for $218 million of additional revenues to be recovered over a phase-in period. The order calls for a first-year increase in base rates of $75 million. But the impact of this increase on customer bills is being offset by $68 million of fuel cost reductions and other one-time credits. The remainder of the increase -- some $143 million-- is to be recovered within 10 years as other costs associated with Plant Vogtle decline.

The commission may accelerate the phase-in plan to assure that Georgia Power's projected earnings on its retail business for the 12 months beginning May 1990 do not exceed the authorized rate of return. Customer rates will not be affected by any adjustment to the phase-in plan. The commission also has ordered the company to file a conventional rate case in 1991.

Georgia Power has appealed an earlier commission decision disallowing a portion of the construction costs for Vogtle unit 1. If that decision is not overturned by the courts, The Southern Co. will have to take an additional charge against earnings -- now estmated at some $200 million after taxes for both Vogtle units. A ruling by the Georgia Court of Appeals is expected during the first half of this year.

In other rate developments, Addison noted that Gulf Power filed a request in December 1989 with the Florida Public Service Commission to increase retail rates by $26.3 million annually. An interim increase of $5.8 million -- subject to refund with interest if the permanent rates are less than the interim amount -- was approved in February. The commission is expected to issue a ruling on the full request in August.

Addison also noted that in March, the Alabama Public Service Commission completed a review of a ratemaking plan used to set Alabama Power's rates and voted to continue it until at least November 1994. This ratemaking concept -- which was adopted by the commission in 1982 -- provides for small, periodic adjustments based on Alabama Power's rate of return and the commercial operation of new generating facilities. Under the plan approved this year by the commission, the company will be allowed to earn between 13.0 percent and 14.5 percent on end-of-period stockholder investment in facilities that serve retail customers.

Reviewing system operations, Addison said that electricity use by retail customers in the four-state service area rose less than 1 percent during the first two months of 1990. In-home electricity needs were up 2.3 percent to 4.8 billion kilowatthours. Electricity use by commercial customers -- offices, stores, and other nonmanufacturing firms -- gained 2.0 percent to 4.2 billion kilowatthours. Industrial energy use declined nearly 1 percent to 6.9 billion kilowatthours.

Energy sales under long-term contracts with neighboring utilities totaled 3.2 billion kilowatthours during the first two months of this year -- an increase of 10.5 percent over the corresponding period a year ago.

ATLANTA (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Georgia-Pacific Corp. (NYSE: GP) said today it will locate its newly formed Communication Papers Division at Atlanta.

Nekoosa Paper's research and development facility, along with Great Northern Nekoosa's (NYSE: GNN) corporate data center, will remain at their present Port Edwards, Wis., location. Georgia-Pacific met today with Nekoosa Paper employees about the relocation.

"We have not yet determined how many employees will move to Atlanta," said James G. Crump Jr., currently chief operating officer for Great Northern Nekoosa, who will head the new Communication Papers Division at Georgia-Pacific.

"Unfortunately, this relocation will result in some job losses due to duplication. At this time, however, we have not completed the indepth inventory of available talent and available jobs, which means we are evaluating the job to be done and looking at the qualified employees within both Georgia-Pacific and Great Northern Nekoosa. As quickly as possible we will begin to tell people exactly what their status is -- whether they are being offered employment in Atlanta, whether they can expect to continue in their present position, or whether their job will be eliminated.

"We know how disquieting this period of uncertainty is, and it is our goal to complete this process as expeditiously as possible to help minimize these disruptions to our employees and their families," Crump said.

Crump also announced the following appointments for Georgia-Pacific's Communication Papers Division, which has operations at Crossett, Ark.; Kalamazoo, Mich.; Port Hudson, La.; Reading, Pa.; Taylorville, Ill.; Woodland, Maine; Ashdown, Ark.; Port Edwards and Nekoosa Wis., and the Inveresk subsidiary in the United Kingdom.

WASHINGTON, NC (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - On March 30, 1990, Fountain Powerboat Industries, Inc. (AMEX: FPI) announced the filing of Form 10-K with the SEC, reporting sales of $19,102,000 for the year ended Oct. 1, 1989 compared with $20,137,000 for the prior fiscal year. For fiscal 1989, the company reported net income of $130,000 or $.03 per share compared with net income of $426,000 or $.10 per share for the year earlier.

Those reported 1989 sales include $3,612,000 in 100 percent financed floor planned boats, which in the opinion of its auditors, KPMG Peat Marwick, should not be recognized as sales during 1989, but should be deferred and recorded as consignment sales. If 1989 sales were reflected as such, the result would be a net loss of $701,000 for the 12 month period ended Oct. 1, 1989.

Fountain's position is that the accounting treatment should be consistent with the previous two years as audited by KPMG Peat Marwick, and the overwhelming majority of the marine industry, which is to recognize a sale when the shipment is made and legal title to the boat passes from the manufacturer and payment to the manufacturer is made by the third party floor plan company. It is Fountain's contention that there is no justification or precedent in the marine industry for a different treatment of revenue recognition than that used by Fountain and the majority of the marine industry for the last ten years.

The difference of opinion on the treatment of floor planned sales resulted in a qualification in the auditor's report and the matter has been referred to the SEC for their review.

First quarter results are incomplete at this time, and are delinquent in being reported. Sales for the first quarter of fiscal 1990 were $2,791,000, $7,331,000 for the second quarter, and $10,122,000 for the six months ended March 31, 1990. This compares with $3,959,000 for the first quarter, $3,689,000 for the second quarter, and $7,648,000 for the six months ended March 31, 1989. Form 10Q is expected to be filed with the SEC within the next two weeks.

Although sales for the second quarter of the 1990 fiscal year were at an all time high, the dealer network has shown a reduction of inventory at the retail level. This indicates that sales at retail are at a rate higher than production, and the company is increasing production to meet the demand for more boats by the dealers. The program of 100 percent floor planning of boats through third parties by some of its dealers is continuing as in the past.

Fountain also reported that the company plans to expand its product line during the 1991 model year by adding six new models.

Fountain Powerboat Industries, Inc., through its wholly owned subsidiary, Fountain Powerboats, Inc., designs, manufactures, and markets high performance deep-water sport boats and sport fishing boats noted for style performance and quality construction.

BALTIMORE (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Baltimore Gas & Electric Co.'s (NYSE: BGE) Calvert Cliffs Nuclear Power Plant received passing grades in an important Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) inspection report released today.

The NRC report examined the work done by BG&E in sampling prior commitments made to the NRC. The NRC agreed that BG&E has identified, implemented and maintained commitments made to the NRC that are important to the safe operation of Calvert Cliffs.

NRC inspectors were on site at Calvert Cliffs from March 5-9, 1990, verifying results presented in BG&E's Commitment Implementation Assessment (CIA) project report. NRC inspectors studied 138 commitments identified by BG&E, as well as 41 additional commitments.

In a letter to BG&E, the NRC stated that no violations were identified and the inspection results provide reasonable assurance that prior commitments of safety significance have been adequately addressed.

BG&E's CIA project consisted of four separate tasks with the goal of providing an assessment of BG&E's ability during the years since initial licensing to identify, implement and maintain commitments to the NRC. The four tasks were: representative commitments review; quality assurance audits review; NRC inspections review and; industry experience review.

"We're extremely pleased with the NRC's assessment of our CIA project report," said BG&E Vice President of Nuclear Energy George C. Creel. "Our people have worked hard to make sure we have met all NRC commitments, and we will continue to do so in the future."

Located in Lusby, Md., Calvert Cliffs consists of two 840-megawatt nuclear reactors. Both units have been out of operation since May 1989 when cracks were discovered in Unit Two's pressurizer during a refueling. BG&E immediately shut down Unit One to check for similar cracks, but none were discovered.

JERICHO, NY (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Getty Petroleum Corp. (NYSE: GTY), today reported earnings for the quarter and fiscal year ended Jan. 31.

Leo Liebowitz, president and chief executive officer, reported that revenues for the fiscal year and quarter ended Jan. 31 were approximately $1.18 billion and $325 million as compared to $1.04 billion and $298 million, respectively, during the same periods last year.

Net income for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31 was $23.0 million or $1.75 per share as compared with net income of $28.4 million or $2.13 per share for last year. Net income for the quarter ended Jan. 31 was $6.1 million or $.47 per share as compared with $9.8 million or $.73 per share for the comparable period last year. The decrease in net income for the year was primarily due to the effect of tight margins experienced during the second quarter of the current fiscal year, a LIFO pre-tax charge of $2.1 million recorded in the fourth quarter, and the reduction in the company's share of earnings of Slattery Group Inc. The earnings per share amounts have been adjusted to give retroactive effect to the 5 percent stock dividend declared at the board of directors meeting held today.

BRIDGEWATER, NJ (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - AT&T (NYSE: T) today announced a new hands-free speakerphone module for businesses that automatically answers and disconnects calls.

The new product, called the S203 Speakerphone Module, is designed for users who can't stop what they're doing to turn a speakerphone on and off.

It's ideal for use in health care environments, such as operating rooms, laboratories, and nurses' stations; in high-tech manufacturing companies' clean rooms; or by any customers who find it inconvenient to manually operate speakerphone units.

When a call comes in, the S203 Speakerphone Module emits a brief tone to alert the user and the caller that the call has been answered. And it terminates the connection as soon as the caller hangs up.

The S203 module is the latest in AT&T's line of "intelligent" speakerphone products. Designed to give users clearer voice transmission than ever before, the module "listens" for room noise, such as fans, air conditioners, or motors, and automatically calibrates itself to compensate for extraneous sounds.

It also "analyzes" the volume of the speaker's voice, the type of equipment used, and possible noise in the network connection, and adjusts its own performance automatically. If a third party is conferenced into the call, the unit adjusts itself again to maintain the high level of clarity.

It can be used with AT&T's DEFINITY(R) Communications System, System 75, System 85 and Dimension(R) PBXs, and the Horizon(R) Communications System.

The S203 Speakerphone Module is intended to receive calls. It does not require an integrated terminal, or telephone, in order to function. However, users who want to place calls as well as receive them can connect the module to an analog, or "tip-ring" phone set.

The S203 Speakerphone Module will be available in April at a price of $270.

ROCKVILLE, MD (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Sage Software, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: SGSI) today announced a joint marketing agreement with IBM (NYSE: IBM) for Sage Software to be an IBM Business Partner under IBM's new Cooperative Software Program (CSP).

Under the terms of this agreement IBM will market SAGE-PVCS/Make, for use with IBM's new RISC System/6000 running AIX. In addition, the agreement enables IBM to market SAGE-PVCS/Make on IBM's PS/2, AT, XT, and RT systems running OS/2, PC-DOS and AIX2.

SAGE-PVCS/Make provides storage and retrieval of multiple versions of text or code in a space-efficient manner. The most up-to-date version is instantly available, and its genesis is completely auditable. Conflicting module changes from two or more developers are eliminated. The build management component, Make, automatically rebuilds the complete software system after any module is changed. SAGE-PVCS/Make offers high performance, low resource utilization, automatic dependency generation, conditional constructs and the ability to define corporate standards for building systems.

Configuration management and version control capabilities are also essential components in taking the first logical step toward implementing CASE solutions as part of the full application engineering life cycle. MINNEAPOLIS (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Propelled by a 14.6 percent rise in fourth quarter earnings, Super Valu (NYSE: SVU) reported record sales and earnings for its recently concluded fiscal year.

"We're most pleased with the way the year finished," said Super Valu Chairman and CEO Michael W. Wright. "Our retail support divisions met their profit goals and ShopKo's second half performance was particularly gratifying. We're looking forward to the coming year."

Sales for the fourth quarter were $2.6 billion dollars, a 5.4 percent increase from the previous year. Net earnings reached $43.5 million, up 14.6 percent. Earnings per share were 58 cents, an increase of 13.7 percent. For the year, sales totalled $11.1 billion, 8.2 percent over last year; the full year's net earnings increased 7.5 percent to $147.7 million, which translated to $1.97 per share, up 7.1 percent. Implementation of FASB 96 added 1 cent to fiscal year 1990 earnings and 3 cents to fiscal 1989.

In its retail support (wholesale food) operations, the company pinpointed several key accomplishments: The successful assimilation of the Red Owl acquisition added volume to four of the company's retail support divisions; the company's J.M. Jones division (Champaign, Ill.) attained $1 billion in sales, the second division of the company to reach that plateau; and significant progress was made toward replacing the business lost when Albertson's, a major customer, converted to self distribution. The most significant factor in the company's success in its retail support business is, according to Wright, constant efforts on the part of its independent retailers to upgrade their retail stores.

"We owe it to our customers to provide them with the opportunity to operate the best, most contemporary stores possible," said Wright. "Last year we added more than 3.6 million square feet of new or remodeled retail space, which generated more than $750 million in new sales. In the past three years we have added in excess of $2 billion to our retail support business in this manner. What's more important is that in each of those years our independent retailers enjoyed record sales and earnings growth."

Wright credited the company's aggressiveness in developing and expanding new retail concepts for the company's continuing sales growth. Cub and County Market, the company's discount food retailing formats, generated more than $4 billion in retail sales for the year. The company said it plans to add 12 new Cub Foods and 14 County Markets in the current year.

Wright also said that Newmarket, a format designed as a conventional retail store upgrade, has met with excellent response and would be a focus for the repositioning of many of the company's independent retail stores.

Wright indicated particular satisfaction with the performance of ShopKo, the company's discount general merchandise division. "ShopKo consistently performs with the best operators in its industry," said Wright. He indicated that a move to more competitive everyday pricing, while it impacted second quarter performance, had resulted in strong sales during the holiday period and that fine tuning of margins in the second half had brought full year results in line with expectations.

Wright also lauded ShopKo for its launch of Twin Valu, the company's first combination food and general merchandise supercenter. Wright said that the 180,000 square foot store had "substantially exceeded" sales expectations and was expected to be profitable in the first half of this year. The second Twin Valu will open in April in Euclid, a suburb of Cleveland, Ohio. Wright indicated that the experience in the first store had already resulted in improvements in the second unit. A third store is on the drawing boards for spring of 1991. While the strategy is still considered in the experimental stage, Wright said the company is "very enthusiastic" about its potential.

"This past year contained a significant number of challenges," said Wright "a sizeable new acquisition to assimilate, a major customer's business to replace, and strong competition at retail. It is most pleasing, therefore, to be able to report another record year."

MINNEAPOLIS (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - International Multifoods Corp. (NYSE: IMC) announced today that it has completed the sale of its Mister Donut franchising operations in the United States and Canada. Terms were not disclosed.

The U.S. operation was sold to Dunkin' Donuts Incorporated, a wholly owned subsidiary of Allied-Lyons PLC, London; the Canadian operation was sold to Allied-Lyons Canada Limited, Toronto.

"In the United States, we are primarily in food manufacturing and specialty distribution for the foodservice industry," said Tony Luiso, Multifoods chairman, president and chief executive officer. In a ruling March 27, Judge Franklin S. Van Antwerpen, U.S. District Court of Eastern Pennsylvania, denied the motion for the preliminary injunction and vacated the temporary restraining order.

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - A 21 percent increase in new work booked, substantial growth in revenue workoff, plus a record number of new projects and clients are among the highlights of Bechtel's 1989 annual report released today.

New projects signed up during 1989 will bring in $5.4 billion, which represents a six-year high for the privately-held engineering and construction organization. The comparable figure for 1988 was $4.5 billion.

Bechtel is very pleased with "this healthy improvement, particularly when you consider today's market," said Chairman Stephen D. Bechtel Jr., in his report to employees. "These are exciting times to be in the engineering and construction business."

Bechtel Group Inc.'s revenue workoff -- the amount of work performed and billed -- during 1989 was $5.1 billion, up 14 percent from 1988's total of $4.5 billion.

With both of these barometers expanding during the last year, Bechtel's non-manual workforce increased 7 percent and now totals 19,200. Combined with 8,600 manual employees, the organization's overall workforce is now 27,800.

The annual report also points out that Bechtel has more first-time clients and a broader mix of projects today than at any time in the company's 92-year history. Bechtel currently is working with 950 clients on nearly 1,600 projects and studies.

Bechtel also is playing a role in several other major projects around the world including Jubail, a new industrial city of 275,000 developed from the desert in Saudi Arabia; the channel tunnel connecting Great Britain and France; and the Central Artery Project in Boston.

"The outlook for the '90s is bright," Bechtel said, "and we are forecasting an overall increase in new work booked and continued growth in workoff," for this year.

A substantial growth in international work also is noted in the report. During 1989, 48 percent of new work booked by the organization was international and 33 percent of the work performed during the year came from international projects. This compares to the previous year when 43 percent of new work booked and 23 percent of revenue were from international projects.

MINNEAPOLIS, (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Richard D. McFarland, chairman of Inter-Regional Financial Group, Inc. (NYSE: IFG), announced today that Irving Weiser has been named president and chief executive officer of Dain Bosworth Incorporated, one of IFG's two brokerage firm subsidiaries, effective immediately. Weiser remains president and chief executive officer of IFG.

"The board of directors is obviously pleased that Irv is taking on these additional responsibilities," said McFarland. "The board has utmost confidence in Irv."

As previously announced, IFG's board had formed a search committee to identify a new CEO for Dain Bosworth. Lawrence Perlman, president and chief executive officer of Control Data Corporation and a member of both the IFG board and the search committee, said that Weiser was the committee's and the board's unanimous choice.

Perlman noted, "IFG has emerged from a particularly difficult period, culminating in the company's return to profitability in 1989. The board feels that Irv is the right person to take IFG and Dain Bosworth forward in the 1990s."

In accepting the additional post, Weiser said, "My top priority is to build on Dain Bosworth's considerable strengths as a regional brokerage firm. My emphasis will be on making sure that Dain provides superior levels of service that exceed our clients' expectations. This can be achieved by extending responsibility throughout the organization, giving all Dain employees a sense of empowerment and accountability for their work."

Weiser said, "Dain Bosworth is in a strong position to grow and prosper. In contrast to many national brokerages, Dain has been profitable for 23 consecutive quarters. Moreover, the company was in the top 25 percent of investment firms in 1989, based on return on equity."

Stated McFarland, "This appointment ends a period of uncertainty for Dain Bosworth. It was good business logic to name Irv CEO. He has the vision and leadership ability that the company needs to compete in the fast-changing financial services marketplace."

Weiser said that being successful in today's securities industry involves keeping a tight lid on costs. "We have restructured senior management and have consolidated several upper-management positions within Dain and IFG," stated Weiser. "We have streamlined the organization for success."

Weiser, 42, joined IFG as president in 1985 and became CEO in January 1990. His relationship with IFG dates back a dozen years, when he began attending board meetings as the company's outside legal counsel, while with the law firm of Dorsey and Whitney. He joined that Minneapolis-based firm in 1973 and rose to become a partner. Weiser earned his law degree at Brooklyn Law School and was adjunct professor at the William Mitchell College of Law, St. Paul. Weiser is active with several Twin Cities-based organizations including the United Way, Children's Home Society of Minnesota, The Guthrie Theater Foundation and Temple Israel. SANTA ROSA, CA (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - The Oxford Energy Company (AMEX: OEN) and CMS Energy Corporation (NYSE: CMS) announced today that they have reached an agreement in principle to create a partnership to provide project development and equity capital for waste tire-to-energy projects currently under development or in construction by Oxford Energy affiliates.

When the agreement is finalized, Oxford Energy will transfer and contribute to the partnership substantial economic interests in four tire-to-energy projects, including its 30 megawatt Exeter Energy Project in Sterling, Conn., which is in construction, as well as three other projects now under development. While Oxford will retain operating management control of these projects, CMS Energy will receive substantial general and limited partnership interests in the new entity. CMS Energy will contribute cash to the development partnership sufficient to pay Oxford approximately $10.5 million in installments over the next 20 months and during that period will make additional payments of approximately $6.5 million to the partnership to provide funding for ongoing project development expenses.

CMS Energy will also provide additional funds for equity commitments for tire-to-energy projects. A portion of CMS Energy's returns from the partnership will be in the form of tax benefits which Oxford Energy would otherwise not have been able to utilize.

"The formation of this new partnership will significantly accelerate our waste tire-to-energy projects," said Oxford Energy President Robert D. Colman. "It will make available the resources needed to maintain our leadership in this field and should help us to achieve profitability faster through revenues generated by new operating projects. Since Oxford's stock price has been depressed for some time, and in our opinion undervalued, we believe that we can create greater long-term benefits for our shareholders through this project-related financing than would be possible in the equity markets at this time," Colman said.

CMS Energy said that the proposed partnership demonstrates its continuing strong support of Oxford Energy's tire-to-energy technology and project development strategies, and will serve as a vehicle for bringing the strengths of the two companies into better coordination. CMS Generation Co., the independent power production subsidiary of CMS Energy, owns approximately 49 percent of the common stock of Oxford Energy.

"This technology is needed to help solve our growing waste tire disposal crisis in a manner consistent with national environmental and energy goals " said Eric O. Fornell, president and chief operating officer of CMS Enterprises.

The agreement in principle to form the partnership, of which affiliates of Oxford Energy and CMS Energy Corporation will be the sole partners, is subject to the execution of a definitive agreement, the approval of the Oxford Energy Board of Directors and the receipt of a fairness opinion from an investment banking firm retained by Oxford Energy.

The Oxford Energy Company is a developer, owner and operator of resource recovery and alternative energy facilities, with projects in operation or development throughout the United States.

CMS Energy Corporation is a $3 billion (sales) diversified energy company with businesses engaged in the distribution of electricity and natural gas interstate storage and transmission of natural gas, oil and gas exploration and production, independent power generation and utility services. CMS Energy Corporation's principal subsidiary is Consumers Power Company, Michigan's largest utility and the nation's fourth- largest combination utility.

BOSTON (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Recognizing the potential for established product suppliers and service industries, as well as "information entrepreneurs" to profit from the burgeoning 1-900, Pay-Per-Call industry, Instant Information, a Boston-based information service company, today introduced its 1-900-FAX-IT-BACK Network, offering those interested in establishing a 1-900 information service business an integrated Voice and FAX network through which to operate.

Targeted at virtually any individual or company with important product -- or service-related information to share -- in actual hardcopy -- Instant Information's 1-900-FAX-IT-BACK Network provides all that is necessary to establish and operate a pay-per-call information business. "We're really looking for individuals who want to benefit from the overwhelmingly successful 900-number craze by offering information via FAX to telephone callers willing to pay for it," said Alan Phillips, vice president of sales and marketing for Instant Information and a developer of the 1-900-FAX-IT-BACK system.

FAXed-BACK Hardcopy Provides Permanent Information Record Through Instant Information's 900-FAX-IT-BACK system, companies or individuals interested in setting up a pay-per-call information business receive a 1-900 number that callers respond to -- and are charged for on a per-minute basis -- when they are in need of that particular information set. The caller is greeted by a digitized voice, and can, in some cases, select from a menu of specific information. Once the caller has made his information choice, it is automatically "FAXed back." Unlike current 900 information numbers that require the caller to record any and all voice-offered information, the caller is provided with a permanent, referenceable hardcopy information record in a matter of minutes.

Phillips noted that his company's value-added is its computerized information database input, retrieval and dissemination system, made available through the business relationship with Instant Information's FAX-IT-BACk service. Individuals or companies with information to sell through 900 number solicitation provide that data to Instant Information, which digitizes, stores and makes ready that information for potential callers.

Instant Information provides information gathering and dissemination services to companies and individuals. It engages in information gathering through database searching, on-line information retrieval, database management, list brokering, primary market research and information dissemination through personalized letter services, facsimile transmission, and facsimile broadcast. The company's corporate offices are located at 66 Long Wharf, Boston, MA 02110.

MELBOURNE, FL (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Harris Corporation (NYSE: HRS) today told some 600 representatives from 276 hand-picked electronic-component companies that it is looking for "a few good suppliers" to provide quality parts on a long-term, preferred-supplier basis.

The companies selected from 2,500 candidates for the first time heard details about the strategic business relationship Harris Electronic Systems Sector intends to form with each of them at a one-day Harris forum at the Maxwell King Performing Arts Center.

"This meeting sets the stage for a new age of quality procurement and manufacturing at Harris," said John T. Hartley, Harris chairman and CEO, in his address to the suppliers. "A slimmed roster of efficient, responsive and dedicated suppliers is a major factor enabling Harris to bring innovative and high-quality products to market quickly and at a competitive price."

The forum was an extension of Harris' corporate-wide quality program that establishes suppliers as one of five "stakeholders" groups who have a vested interest in the company's success.

According to John G. Johnson, vice president of the Electronic Systems Sector's Palm Bay operations, the preferred-supplier forum will help send a signal to suppliers that they are a crucial link in Harris' product-development and production cycle.

"We want our suppliers to know that delivering high-quality products to the market must start with high-quality raw materials and components," he said. "Today we told suppliers that we and they must meet stringent customer expectations for delivery, performance and cost-effectiveness."

Phil Farmer, president of Electronics Systems Sector, outlined the measures Harris will take in developing strategic relationships with its preferred suppliers. They include:

Harris' effort started with several "commodity teams" -- interdisciplinary workgroups of procurement, quality assurance, and engineering professionals. The teams were charged with nominating several preferred suppliers in a specific field, such as microcircuits, power supplies or connectors. The teams identified companies that shared Harris' commitment to quality, cost effectiveness, and service.

The teams evaluated about 2,500 companies against the required attributes and selected 276 candidates. Harris believes the special status will benefit the suppliers as well. "In their advertising to other customers, they can use the fact they were selected as a Harris preferred supplier, which will be a good reflection on their business conduct," Johnson said.

Candidate companies also were addressed by Major Gen. Edward R. Bracken, director of logistics plans and programs for the U.S. Air Force. Since the USAF is a major purchaser of Harris electronic products, Bracken represented Harris customers' interests.

Harris Electronic Systems Sector develops, manufactures and markets advanced electronic products with annual sales approaching $1 billion. ESS is a major supplier to the U.S. government, state and local governments, commercial organizations and international customers.

Harris Corporation, with worldwide sales of more than $3 billion, is focused on four major businesses: advanced electronic systems, communications, semiconductors and an office-equipment distribution network.

CHICAGO (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Hartmarx Corp. (NYSE: HMX) today reported record sales and earnings for the quarter ended Feb. 28.

Sales for the quarter were $342,183,000 with earnings of $2,365,000 or $.12 per share, compared to sales of $327,379,000 and earnings of $9,750,000 or $.50 per share in 1989. This year's results include the 13-store Raleighs business acquired as of Jan. 1, 1989 and The Biltwell Co., a manufacturer of men's and women's apparel, acquired as of March 1, 1989.

Harvey A. Weinberg, chairman and chief executive officer of the apparel manufacturer and retailer, stated:

"Higher first quarter sales resulted from acquisitions. The slowdown in menswear retail sales and the highly promotional retail environment that adversely affected our fiscal 1989 results have continued into 1990, and we are now experiencing the impact on the wholesale side of the business. Sales in comparable businesses during the quarter declined 2 percent overall. Excluding Biltwell, manufacturing shipments to wholesale customers declined 10 percent from last year due to lower advance orders and in-stock business, offset in part by a 9 percent increase in retailing. The gain in retailing was from the Raleighs acquisition, new stores and higher sales in comparable locations. Sales in comparable locations declined 2 percent in the month of December but were ahead of last year by 4 percent in January and February, so the increase for the quarter was almost 1 percent.

"Earnings declined in both our wholesale and retail segments, and interest expense was higher. Lower shipments in comparable manufacturing businesses affected the wholesale segment and retailing had lower margins. First quarter interest expense was $7.3 million compared to $4.7 million in 1989 from higher borrowings to finance acquisitions, new store openings and higher working capital."

Weinberg added, "The retail environment shows some signs of improvement. Sales for the month of March were ahead of last year by 10 percent overall and 4 percent in comparable locations. Actions in our specialty stores to lower opening price points, speed up the transition of seasonal goods and broaden assortments to appeal to a larger customer base are fully in place so we are positioned to gain market share. Manufacturing advance unit orders for fall are down 7 percent, but wool costs have abated, so prices for fall will not increase. We will begin shipping Henry Grethel merchandise to the J.C. Penney stores this fall, continue to open Kuppenheimer tailored clothing shops in Sears stores and introduce the J.G. Hook tailored clothing line later in the year. Although fiscal 1990 will be a transition year, we are well positioned to take advantage of the expected increase in consumer spending."

Hartmarx, headquartered in Chicago, is the nation's largest manufacturer and retailer of quality apparel with over 500 stores and sales of $1.3 billion.

MIAMI (APRIL 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Atlantis Group, Inc. (AMEX: AGH) announced today that it has filed an amended complaint against Rospatch Corporation (NASDAQ: RPCH), certain of its present and former officers and directors, and its general counsel, Warner, Norcross & Judd. The original complaint was filed in federal court in Miami on March 14, 1990, alleging that Atlantis had purchased its Rospatch stock in reliance upon financial statements and other information which was false and misleading.

In 1989, Rospatch disclosed that the sale of its Technical Products Group had produced a loss of almost $19 million. In 1988, Rospatch had stated that the sale would proudce a profit. The original complaint alleged claims for federal and state securities fraud, violations of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, breaches of fiduciary duty, breach of trust, common law fraud and misrepresentation.

The amended complaint adds allegations of recent wrongful conduct by the defendants, including paying former CEO Joseph A. Parini $500,000 in termination benefits, and former CFO William E. Malpass, Jr. $75,000 in termination benefits, even after independent special counsel to the Audit Committee of Rospatch had concluded after an extensive investigation that they should be fired for cause. The amended complaint also seeks to compel Rospatch and its defendant directors to hold a shareholders' meeting within 60 days. On March 12, 1990, the majority of the Rospatch Board, who are all defendants in the lawsuit, set the meeting for Oct. 29, 1990. The Rospatch shareholders' meeting has been held in late April for many years. In an unusual move, Rospatch postponed the meeting last year until July, and is trying to postpone it even further this year, according to the amended complaint.

Atlantis, the largest shareholder of Rospatch, owns approximately 19.7 percent of the company's stock. Earl W. Powell, chairman and CEO of Atlantis, pointed out that the four defendant directors collectively own only about 1.4 percent of Rospatch. Powell stated that in postponing the meeting until the end of October, the defendant directors "were continuing their scheme of entrenchment and preventing shareholders from exercising their rights to vote out directors who had been responsible for the enormous losses at Rospatch in 1989."

The amended complaint also seeks to prohibit Rospatch from indemnifying the defendants against the expense of the litigation, claiming that the fraudulent conduct of the defendants precludes such indemnification.

Rospatch, headquarted in Grand Rapids, Mich., is a manufacturer of ready-to-assemble furniture. Atlantis Group, Inc. is a diversified manufacturer of plastics and furniture based in Miami.

SAN DIEGO (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - In a March 30 hearing before United States District Court Judge Judith N. Keep, attorneys for Imperial Corporation of America (NYSE: ICA) (ICA), parent of Imperial Savings Association (ISA) until it was placed into conservatorship Feb. 23, obtained an agreement from the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) and Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC) that no receiver would be appointed for ISA except upon prior written notice received at least 24 business hours prior to such action.

Upon receipt of such a notice, ICA's lawyers would be able to seek an emergency restraining order in federal court preventing the government from taking Imperial Savings into receivership. Friday's hearing sought to prevent the appointment of a receiver for ISA based upon constitutional infirmities in the Financial Institution Reform Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA). One such infirmity is that FIRREA itself is unconstitutional because it retroactively applied new rules to ISA which reduced its capital, leading to government seizure of the institution. The agreement, similar to that stipulated by the OTS in the Franklin Savings Association case pending in federal court in Kansas, prevents the imposition of a receiver for ISA which could otherwise occur without notice to ISA or its lawyers.

In separate actions on Friday, two complaints were filed in the ICA bankruptcy case against the RTC; the first seeking a declaration of ownership of ICA's rights to a tax refund valued at approximately $93 million, and the second complaint for recovery of a "preference" payment by ICA to ISA shortly before the filing of the ICA bankruptcy for approximately $18 million which was made at the instruction of OTS regulators in January 1990.

Bankruptcy schedules and statements of affairs for ICA were also filed in bankruptcy court here on Friday. Friday's filing occurred two days in advance of the filing deadline established by the United States Trustee and ordered by the bankruptcy court. ICA listed in its schedules, assets of $47,224,577.90 and liabilities of $39,795,093.81. These amounts did not include "contingent assets" such as recovery on the lawsuits against Resolution Trust Corp.

"It is likely that the schedules will require amendment," said ICA attorney Patrick Shea, "because information in the possession of ISA has not yet been delivered to ICA."

According to Shea, recovery of the $18 million paid in January and a recovery on the tax case would significantly increase the dividend offered through any plan of reorganization to creditors and equity security holders of the company.

OAK BROOK, IL (APRIL 4) PR NEWSWIRE - Dick Starmann, senior vice president of McDonald's Corp. (NYSE: MCD), issued the following statement today in response to a full-page advertisement from an Omaha- based special interest group, scheduled to appear April 4 in several U.S. newspapers:

"Let's start with the obvious: this ad is reckless, misleading and intended to scare rather than inform.

"McDonald's food is nutritious. Our hamburgers, which are the focus of the ad, are leaner and have less fat than the ground beef most people buy in supermarkets. In fact, our ground beef qualifies for the USDA standard for 'lean' beef.

"The truth is, McDonald's has a long history of making changes to our menu which have improved the nutritional value of the food we serve, particularly in the area of reducing fat. We converted to 100 percent cholesterol-free vegetable shortening for chicken and fish products four years ago. We have introduced several varieties of salads, changed from whole milk to 2 percent or skim milk, and removed the chicken skin from Chicken McNuggets.

"This month we've introduced no-fat, no-cholesterol Apple Bran Muffins, and Cheerios and Wheaties cereals to our breakfast menu. Next month, we will be rolling out low-fat milk shakes, low-fat frozen yogurt and fruit sorbets, and we are currently involved in a 500-restaurant test of a break-through process that allows us to cook our french fries in 100 percent vegetable shortening -- reducing saturated fat by nearly 50 percent, eliminating cholesterol entirely, and still guaranteeing the same great-tasting fries that 22 million customers a day have come to expect at McDonald's.

"To ignore McDonald's nutrition record was not only reckless, it was a gross disservice to our customers around the world. Are we mad about that? As Ed Rensi, president of McDonald's USA said, 'Yes, we're mad as hell!'"

DENVER (APRIL 3) UPI - Anderson Hunt struck for 29 points and Nevada-Las Vegas played crackling defense to hit college basketball's jackpot Monday night, defeating Duke 103-73 in the biggest rout in an NCAA championship final.

With a commanding show of strength, discipline and sparkle, the Rebels set a record for most points scored in the championship final and left no doubt as to the premier team in college basketball.

''This is what it's all about,'' UNLV All-America Larry Johnson said. ''It was a great team victory.''

The Rebels shredded Duke during an 18-0 run in the second half, silencing any prospect the Blue Devils had of winning their first NCAA title in four championship game appearances.

Such was the one-sidedness of the contest that by the last few minutes, the players on the Nevada-Las Vegas bench donned T-shirts in tribute to their coach, Jerry Tarkanian.

''Shark Takes a Bite,'' the shirt read on the front. ''They Just Couldn't Run with the Rebels,'' read the back of the shirt.

All too true.

''I'm just so proud of this team,'' Tarkanian said. ''They have played all season with such intensity.''

Before this bombardment, the biggest margin of victory in a championship game came in 1968 when UCLA beat North Carolina 78-55.

This also marked the first time the winning team reached 100 points as history caught up to Duke on that count. In 1964, UCLA scored 98 points in beating the Blue Devils, a record for points by a winning team that stood until Monday night.

Hunt, whose 3-point shooting carried the Rebels in the semifinals against Georgia Tech, was 12 of 16 from the floor and 4 of 7 from 3-point range.

He backed by Johnson, who delivered 22 points and 11 rebounds. Greg Anthony had 13 and Stacey Augmon 12 as the Rebels shot 61 percent from the floor.

The game was billed as a man-to-man showdown between two of the country's best defensive teams. But this was no showdown. This was strictly a massacre.

UNLV, which played in two previous Final Fours without advancing to the championship game, finished at 35-5 and gave the season a sense of symmetry, having been voted the No. 1 team in preseason.

Duke, 29-9, was led by Phil Henderson with 21 points, while Christian Laettner added 15 and Alaa Abdelnaby 14.

Duke did more than most expected this year, but this game made for another case of Final Four futility for the Blue Devils. They have now played in the Final Four three straight years and in four of the last five. And every time they have come up empty.

This was the third straight game in which Duke faced a killer defensive team. And the strain appeared all too clear.

Nothing was more telling than the 18-0 burst that began with Duke trailing 57-47 and 16 1-2 minutes to go. Then Hunt went to work, scoring 12 points in the run. On consecutive plays he teamed with Augmon to sink layups off the break. His 3-pointer put the Rebels up 75-47 with 13:17 left.

The outcome was sealed. It would not be long before Rebel players were wrestling in jubilation at mid-court.

A sellout crowd at McNichols Sports Arena saw UNLV leave its signature early on with no-nonsense defense that put Duke in an early hole.

The Rebels led 47-35 at the half and in one sequence that lasted some 30 seconds UNLV gave Duke's wisecracking cheering section something to consider.

With Duke down by 5 points, Hunt swooped in from the right side for a jam. Fifteen seconds later he drove in on a break and hit a foul shot. Augmon completed the burst with a dunk off a steal and the Rebels led 21-11. Defense, pure and simple, triggered the spree.

The Rebels had the luxury of going to their bench early, and the results were impressive. Barry Young buried a 10-footer and came right back for a 3-pointer. Stacey Cvijanovich dove for a loose ball. Duke was encountering problems where it least expected them.

Augmon's alley-oop dunk put the Rebels up 41-25 and it was left to Laettner and Abdelnaby to draw Duke within 10. But UNLV had the last word of the half when it was ruled Anthony's closing jumper beat buzzer.

UNLV, ranked No. 2 in the country, defeated Arkansas-Little Rock, Ohio State, Ball State and Loyola Marymount to win the West Regional. The Rebels then knocked off Georgia Tech in the semifinals.

Duke, ranked No. 14, beat Richmond, St. John's, UCLA and Connecticut to win the East Regional. Then the Blue Devils beat Arkansas in the semifinals.

BY DAVID BUTTS - UPI

TOKYO (APRIL 3) UPI - Japan helped put the brakes on the New York stock market crash in October 1987 and now wants the United States to return the favor, but Washington shows few signs of coming to the aid of its chief economic competitor.

The apparent lack of support in Washington for Tokyo's collapsing stock market could be a harbinger of more difficult times ahead as Japan and the United States reassess their relationship in the post Cold War era.

The Tokyo stock market, which has been on a skid since the first of the year, suffered its second-worst day Monday, losing nearly 7 percent of its value, while the Japanese yen fell to a 39-month low against the U.S. dollar.

The Japanese want Washington to support the yen and ease off trade pressure for the time being to stop the market hemorrhaging, but U.S. policy makers appear content to watch quietly as Japan's economy bleeds.

Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto met with Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady last month in Los Angeles to ask for U.S. support of the sinking Japanese yen. But Brady ended the meeting without giving any indication that he would help.

''Some people may be happy to see the Japanese market do so poorly,'' said Richard Koo, a senior economist with Nomura Research Institute. ''It will remove some of the competitive edge Japan had.''

This glee over Japan's economic troubles is a symbol of the change in U.S. attitudes toward Japan.

Americans once viewed Japan as a friendly Asian nation helping in the fight against world communism and were eager to give it a hand economically.

But now Japan is seen as an economic Godzilla bent on buying America piece by piece.

''Japan's strategic significance for the United States has been diminishing over time and ... there is no widespread international constituency interested in Japan's continuing economic welfare,'' said Chalmers Johnson, a University of California professor and one of the United States' leading Asia experts.

President Bush has put Japan at the top of a list of unfair trading partners while he talks of granting the Soviet Union most favored nation trade status.

Bush's goal is to reduce the nearly $50 billion annual trade deficit with Japan. Some analysts think Washington is withholding help in the financial markets to pressure Tokyo to cut the deficit.

This attitude has mystified many Japanese, who feel they have gone the extra mile to help the United States and have gotten nothing but grief in return.

Japan deserves more credit for pulling the United States back from the edge of the abyss after the ''Black Monday'' stock market crash of Oct. 19 1987, says David Hale, chief economist for Kemper Financial Services.

The Japanese government used moral persuasion to stop Japanese investors from abandoning the New York market.

And when the dollar was collapsing in the late 1980s, the Finance Ministry bought nearly $60 billion of dollar securities to prop it up.

''The overwhelming priority of Japanese public policy has been to promote international economic harmony by helpling America to cope with the financial tensions created by her large deficits, low private savings and permissive financial regulations,'' said Hale.

It would seem that Washington would return the gesture in Japan's time of need.

But the United States' mixture of anger and jealousy toward the Japanese may be blocking any offerings of goodwill.

Americans also seem secure in the belief that Japan is much more dependent on America than the United States is on Japan.

Some Japanese say it is time to show Americans how difficult things might get if Japan stopped supporting the United States.

Japan has been a key financier of the American budget deficit through its purchase of U.S. bonds. Soichi Enkyo, a senior economist with the Bank of Tokyo, says the Japanese government should use this leverage to force the United States to start supporting the yen and back off of trade issues.

''Such an implied threat will produce a more cooperative mind in the United States,'' said Enkyo.

(APRIL 3) UPI - Convicted double-murderer Robert Alton Harris responded with an ''oh, thanks'' Monday to news he has won a reprieve from the gas chamber. The Supreme Court voted to uphold a lower court's stay of Harris's execution, which had been scheduled for tomorrow. Harris can now expect months of legal battles over whether his defense was competent.

Commuters in Buffalo, New York, are expected to wake up Tuesday to a working transit system after a two-day shutdown. Area transportation officials Monday night accepted a new funding plan for the bankrupt system. The plan raises the basic fare ten percent, and includes city, state, and county funds.

The Education Department says its 1988 test of elementary and high school students found they have a ''Trivial Pursuit'' knowledge of history and civics. For example, 56 percent of fourth graders could name Columbus's ships, but only 36 percent knew why he sailed. Officials in Washington, D-C, Monday noted that these children are the country's future leaders.

Police in Nepal prevented about 75-thousand pro-democracy demonstrators from entering Katmandu Monday. At least three people died when police opened fire on protesters just outside the capital. Protesters called for a multi-party system although parties have been banned by the monarchy for two decades.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Pictures of women appeared on front pages of U.S. newspapers more frequently this year than last, according to a limited study Tuesday. The study also reported that Page 1 stories included more women sources and female bylines.

The study was commissioned by the American Society of Newspaper Editors' Human Resources Committee and the University of California's Media Watch: Women and Men.

It examined the front pages of 20 newspapers in the United States during February 1990. Last year's study looked at 10 newspapers during the same month.

The 1990 study used the same 10 general-interest papers included in last year's report, but researchers this year examined 10 more papers from markets with daily circulations between 20,000 and 50,000.

The study drew no conclusions, but did include comments from editors.

The 1990 study found:

-More women are featured in front page photos, an average of 32 percent, compared with 24 percent in 1989.

-Females quoted as sources in stories averaged 14 percent, compared with 11 percent in 1989.

-Female bylines appeared on an average of 28 percent, compared with 27 percent in 1989.

According to the study, the Albuquerque Tribune averaged the highest number of women quoted as sources, with 22 percent. The New York Times ranked the lowest, with women representing 5 percent of its quoted sources.

The Albuquerque Tribune also averaged the highest number of female bylines with 51 percent, beating USA Today's study-high average last year of 41 percent.

This year the Findlay (Ohio) Courier had no female bylines on Page 1 during the one-month study period. Last year's lowest byline average was 16 percent in The New York Times.

The Washington Post had the highest average photo coverage of females, 42 percent. Lowest was the Lewiston (Maine) Sun-Journal, with 19 percent.

Reactions from top editors of the 20 papers were almost as diverse.

''I am damned if I can see what conclusions should be drawn from your findings,'' said Ben Bradlee, executive editor of The Washington Post.

Janet Chusmir, executive editor of The Miami Herald, called the survey ''quite interesting'' and said she hoped it would ''lead to a vigorous dialogue.''

''At the Miami Herald, we aren't happy with the representation of women in our news pages, bylines or supervisory positions,'' she added. ''Frankly, no newspaper in this country should be.''

But she said the Herald has ''a continuing daily effort to recognize that women and women's issues and stories and photos of interest to women need to have an increasing role in our content mix.''

Tom Kelsch, executive editor of the Lewiston Sun-Journal, said that photographs reflected the news, which mostly encompassed men: President Bush, Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, Nelson Mandela, Secretary of State James Baker, and the leaders of Eastern Europe, none of whom are women.

''If you're going to try to cover the top wire stories on the front pages - as we do - you are going to run a lot of male photos,'' said Kelsch, noting that Nicaraguan President-elect Violeta Chamorro made Page 1 for her upset election victory over Daniel Ortega.

Max Frankel of The New York Times called the survey ''bizarre and unworthy.''

Newspapers included in the survey were The Atlanta Journal and Constitution, The Chicago Tribune, The Houston Chronicle, The Los Angeles Times, The Miami Herald, The New York Times, The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, The Seattle Times, USA Today and The Washington Post.

Also included were the The Albuquerque Tribune/Journal; The Beacon-News of Aurora, Ill.; The Courier of Findlay, Ohio; Daily Camera of Boulder, Colo.; Enid (Okla.) News and Eagle; The Joplin (Mo.) Globe; The News-Times of Danbury, Conn.; Pine Bluff (Ark.) Commercial; The Sun-Journal of Lewiston and The Tuskaloosa (Ala.) News.

DENVER (APRIL 3) UPI - All weekend the Duke Blue Devils dismissed the inevitable comparisons to the Denver Broncos, but after Monday night their national title futility grew by another game.

Maybe there's something in the Mile High city's air because in the shadow of the Broncos' home field, Duke suffered the worst loss in NCAA Championship game history.

Duke, making its fourth championship game appearance, could do nothing but watch as they were beaten 103-73. Nothing worked. Nothing. It was so bad you wanted to hide your face.

When pre-game comparisons were made to Denver's NFL franchise, who had lost four Super Bowls, Alaa Abdelnaby laughed and said his team wasn't the Broncos because they had ''never been beaten 55-10.''

How's 103-73, Alaa?

Duke Coach Mike Krzysewski had never seen anything like it.

''We couldn't function out there tonight,'' he said. ''I think its the best any team has ever played against me in all my years of coaching.''

''They were everywhere,'' said Abdelnaby. ''It seemed like everything for them was clicking. They dominated every facet of the game. It was like there were six or seven guys out there.''

There were only five out on the floor at time for the Runnin' Rebels. It looked like they could have won with four.

Duke trailed by 12 points at halftime and after trading baskets with Nevada-Las Vegas in the opening minutes of the second half the Blue Devils looked ready to make a run.

''To get back from a 12-point deficit you can't trade baskets,'' said Abdelnaby. ''We came out strong in the second half, but they played a better second half than their first half.''

Duke, which takes pride in its poise and ability to handle pressure, suffered a complete collapse in the jaws of UNLV's tenacious defense.

''I think they picked up their defensive intensity a little more in the second half,'' said Duke guard Phil Henderson. ''They were just so great.''

Duke committed a 23 turnovers and had any thoughts of making it a game stolen right out from under them. The Runnin' Rebels made 16 thefts - a championship game record.

The Blue Devils are now winless in four championship games and Krzyzewski is now 0 for 2 in title games.

''They gave me an incredible year,'' said Krzyzewski. ''I'm sorry we couldn't give them a better challenge. We win and lose together, and they won so much. I think they came closer to reaching their potential than any team I've ever had.''

So now Duke and its fans will have to endure another offseason having come close again.

And as they know so well in Denver, there's always next year.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Arguing the ''sin of sexism'' has corroded civilization, a new draft of a pastoral statement on women by the nation's Roman Catholic bishops calls for greater secular equality for women, but said ordination to the priesthood remains impossible.

The 99-page document, which declares ''the basic equality of all'' persons praises the work of Christian feminists who work to ''liberate women from attitudes and actions that stand in the way of women using their gifts and talents for the good of society and the church.''

Released Monday, the statement also cautions feminists not to advocate ''abberations'' such as ''liberation'' from the church's teachings on sexuality or ''acceptance of abortion as a legitimate choice for women under pressure.''

''Fidelity to the example of Christ and to the practice of the apostles requires the church to stand by this tradition'' of an all-male priesthood it said, arguing that exclusion from the priesthood is not ''rooted in a view that women are inferior as persons.''

And it appeared to back off from a promise in the first draft to ''foster a dialogue'' in the church with ''those who find prohibitions against artificial contraception unacceptable,'' dropping its call for ''a spirit of compassion towards those who in good conscience ... have not lived in accord with the ideals set forth by the church.''

Instead, the bishops pledge to promote an awareness of natural family planning and ''birth regulation in the light of gospel values and a prolife stance.''

In preparation for almost seven years, the new draft, styled a ''pastoral response to the concerns of women,'' was written by a commiteee of six bishops headed by Bishop Joseph Imesch of Joliet, Ill. It is greatly pared down from a 164-page first draft released in 1988. The new draft is expected to be debated and voted on in November.

''The one clear and universal sentiment that arose in consultations

(between the bishops and Catholic women) was this: women want to be treated as persons,'' the draft said. ''They want to be accepted as equals in a world that has been dominated by men, not relegated to 'second class' cizitenship.

''They want full participation and inclusion, not just in view of particular 'feminine' gifts and experiences, but in the whole business of life,'' it said.

In denouncing sexism, the proposed pastoral said women suffer from the ''sexism resulting from sin'' and that sexist attitudes ''can and do foster sins of rape, prostitution, adultery, emotional and physical abandonment and the exploitation of women through pornography.''

''The corrosive sin of sexism has seeped into the fabric of our civilization, invading economic and governmental systems as well as social and ecclesiastical structures,'' the statement said.

Like the first draft, the new statement calls for expanding a number of ministries inside the church - short of the priesthood - to women, including the diaconate (one step below the priesthood) and allowing women to serve as lectors and altar girls. It also said theologically trained women should be allowed to preach.

The new draft also called on each diocese to form a ''commission for women that will assure the rights of women on a continuing basis.''

The bishops also said they support changes in economic structures ''to stem the rising tide of poverty among women,'' would back legislation ''that respond to the needs of women,'' condemned pornography and urge establishment of affordable day-care centers.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Sen. John Warner, R-Va., urging Senate confirmation of Timothy Ryan as the nation's top thrift regulator, said Ryan's admitted casual drug use in the early 1970s should not bar him from the job.

Warner, the first senator to publicly mention Ryan's experimental use of both cocaine and marijuana in floor debate, said Monday the nominee and the men and women of his generation should not be denied public office for long-ago casual use.

The conservative lawmaker said he was convinced that Ryan was ''never again tempted'' by drugs, adding it would be a serious mistake for ''the United States of America today to say in a blanket way (that persons) who used controlled substances are not qualified to move on in the private, the public sector.''

''We should examine each case individually and not write many of them off because they made a mistake ... particularily if they have been up front, voluntarily disclosed it,'' Warner said.

The Senate is tentatively scheduled to take up Ryan's nomination to oversee the regulation of the troubled savings and loan industry on Wednesday.

Ryan told the FBI and the administration during his background check that he has used marijuana and cocaine, and that information was available to the Senate Banking Committee when it conducted its confirmation hearing last week.

Although the topic was never raised during the hearing, Warner said he was certain that committee members, who approved the nomination 11-10, were aware of the FBI information.

The report was first aired by NBC and, Ryan, once a special counsel to President Bush's presidential campaign, said in a statement:

''Prior to my nomination, I disclosed both on my FBI forms and verbally to the White House and Treasury and FBI that early in the 1970s, I smoked marijuana on a few occasions and tried cocaine once, perhaps twice.''

''I regret this mistake,'' Ryan said. ''I don't regret having voluntarily disclosed this information.''

Ryan was approved by the committee, to the surprise of committee chairman Don Riegle, D-Mich., when two Democrats, Sens. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., and Richard Shelby, D-Ala., joined all the panel's Republicans in recommending his approval.

The stated opposition on the part of the Democrats was centered totally on his lack of experience for the job.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, according to Warner, called senators over the weekend urging Ryan's confirmation and Warner said that the Senate should place heavy weight on Brady's backing.

The administration wants the nomination approved this week before the Senate recesses for a week.

An appeals court judge is scheduled to rule April 11 on whether the interim Office of Thrift Supervision director, never confirmed by the Senate, has the power to seize insolvent savings and loan institutions and carry out other duties dealing with the thirft bailout.

MONTELIMAR, Nicaragua (APRIL 3) UPI - Central American leaders spent the first day of a two-day summit discussing an appeal for Contras to disband by April 20, even as the rebels were announcing in Honduras they would formally turn in their arms April 18.

Costa Rican President Oscar Arias said at the end of the opening day's session that he expected the Central American leaders to wind up their summit Tuesday with a call for the Contras to disband by April 20.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, who is hosting the summit at the tourist resort of Montelimar, 35 miles southwest of Managua on the Pacific coast, said Monday night the meeting was going well and that he expected a ''nice statement to come'' Tuesday.

Ortega said during a lunch break Monday that Nicaragua will insist the Contra rebels adhere to their March 23 agreement, known as the Toncontin Declaration, to disband before Chamorro takes office April 25.

''We have a formal commitment and we will insist on it to achieve a balance in the reasonable reduction of forces,'' Ortega said. ''The demobilization must be carried out immediately and we will insist on it.''

In Honduras, Contra spokesman Alejandro Acevedo said in a statement that the rebels would formally turn in their arms April 18. He said the weapons included Soviet-made AK-47 rifles, 60mm machine guns, 60mm, 82mm and 81mm mortars and RP6-7 and RP6-2 grenade launchers.

Acevedo said the Contras will demand a simultaneous cease-fire on the part of Nicaragua's Popular Sandinista Army, verified by observers from the United Nations and the Organization of American States.

At the summit, Arias said the five presidents - who also include Rafael Callejas of Honduras, Alfredo Cristiani of El Salvador and Vinicio Cerezo of Guatemala - were in agreement about the need for the U.S.-funded Contras to disband.

''We have spent much of our time trying to firm up what we have been talking about - that the demobilization of the Contras must be as soon as possible, before the 20th of April,'' Arias told reporters.

Callejas met Chamorro Monday morning and told her that Israel Galeano, the Contra military chief known as Commander Franklin, assured him that the rebels are willing to disband.

''I expressed to Chamorro the satisfaction with which the Honduran government has received the assurances of the Contra general staff and Commander Franklin that they will demobilize,'' the Honduran president said.

Arias said the five presidents ''must ... back the Toncontin accord.''

A special mission of U.N. peacekeeping troops ''will be the ones to who have the difficult task of getting them (the Contras) to hand over their weapons,'' he added.

Arias also said he would recommend that the weapons be destroyed to symbolize a triumph of dialogue over violence.

Also included in summit discussion are negotiations between Salvadoran leftist rebels and Cristiani's government aimed at ending a decade of civil war in El Salvador.

Cristiani confirmed that the five leaders would back the Toncontin accord, but said ''sometimes what is desired is not the same as what is possible.''

Cristiani said he had received a letter from rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front proposing topics for a yet-to-be scheduled round of peace talks.

''I think we may well reach agreement on some of the points,'' Cristiani said. Earlier, Cristiani decined to comment on U.N.-mediated talks to be held Wednesday in Geneva between rebels and a Salvadoran government delegation.

Ortega and Arias said they had also discussed economic issues, and that future summits could dwell more on the need for development in Central America and international aid for the region.

Arias said before the meeting that he would ''propose that the goal is to seek resources for the development of Central America.''

TOKYO (APRIL 3) UPI - Tokyo stock prices rebounded sharply Tuesday on late bargain hunting, lifting the key Nikkei indicator above 28,000 yen with the seventh-biggest one-day rise.

Despite the recovery, the Nikkei still was 26 percent lower than its Dec. 29 high of 38,915.87 yen.

The U.S. dollar, after briefly breaking 160 yen Monday, declined 1.00 yen Tuesday to close at 158.95 yen in quiet trading.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which suffered the second-worst drop Monday, recovered 757.65 yen, or 2.7 percent of its value, to close at 28,759.72 yen. The recovery was the Nikkei's seventh-best one-day gain.

TOPIX, or the TSE Index of all listed major shares, gained 41.78 points to 2,111.11. Trading was quiet with turnover estimated at 650 million shares.

Brokers said investors returned to the trading floor and engaged in bargain hunting capitalizing on Monday's second-steepest fall of 1,978.38 yen.

The brokers said the market bounced up after the Nikkei avoided dipping below 27,600 yen.

''Investors have started to cooperate to save the market,'' said Yutaka Nakai, a department deputy head at Daiwa Securities Co. ''The situation had worsened to an extent where people were taking the decline more seriously. Investors now are making solid purchases to save the market.''

Recovery of the yen's value against the dollar also encouraged investors, the brokers said.

''Optimists are hoping the market has bottomed out, but it still lacked confidence,'' said a trader, who declined to be identified.

Monday's fall was triggered by a report in the top economic journal, Nihon Keizai Shimbun, that leading insurance companies, which are major investors in the market, were selling shares to cut their losses. The report was later denied by the Finance Ministry.

''With the market so weak, bad news like this could lead to panic selling '' a trader at Daiwa Securities Co. said.

Foreign exchange dealers said currency trading was calm Tuesday. Most market players waited to see the outcome of a meeting of the Group of Seven industrialized nations in Paris Saturday.

But Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto said, ''The meeting is not intended to support the Japanese markets.''

Hashimoto later told Parliament the foreign exchange market should be stabilized through coordinated intervention.

''Speculative trading is responsible for the dollar's recent rise against the yen because Japan's economic fundamentals remain strong. Excessive intervention should be avoided, and the government will try to regain confidence in the market,'' Hashimoto said.

His remark indicated that the central bank will continue active intervention to stabilize dollar-yen exchange rates.

SEATTLE (APRIL 3) UPI - The National Labor Relations Board Monday dismissed a petition filed by employees at Nordstrom stores in Seattle seeking a special election to oust their union.

NLRB officials, who last week dismissed a similar petition filed by Nordstrom employees in Tacoma, Wash., said organizers of the anti-union effort could ask that the petition be reinstated.

But Nordstrom first must defend itself successfully against several unfair labor-practice complaints brought by Local 1001 of the United Food and Commercial Workers Union, which has been battling the Seattle retailer since July 31 when a contract covering about 1,800 Nordstrom workers in six Seattle-area stores lapsed.

Nordstrom has been ordered by the NLRB to appear before an administrative law judge to answer allegations that the company violated labor laws when it:

-Bypassed the union and negotiated contract issues directly with several employees at the company's display center in Tukwila, Wash.

-Failed to provide the union with information pertinent to contract negotiations, specifically information surrounding allegations that the company forced some workers to perform duties without pay, or off-the-clock.

-Tried to negotiate back-wage settlements with nine union-represented employees for work performed off-the-clock.

-Implemented a new policy in all 60 stores reducing the length of employment needed to qualify for three weeks of annual paid vacation time from eight years to five.

The union complained the company was bound to negotiate with it any changes in benefits for union members. The union already had made simliar proposals in contract negotiations.

Jim Nordstrom in a radio interview last week called the allegations pending before the NLRB ''nuisance charges.''

However, Joe Peterson, president of Local 1001, said the company's actions are ''consistent with their desire to eliminate the union contract and (union) representation of their employees.''

A hearing date has not been set.

BUCHAREST, Romania (APRIL 3) UPI - The brother of executed dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, saying he only shot in the air, denied murder and genocide charges at the opening of one of the most high-profile trials since the December revolution.

Gen. Nicolae Andruta Ceausescu, who faces a maximum sentence of life imprisonment if convicted, is the closest Ceausescu relative to stand trial for crimes stemming from the communist dictator's near quarter-century rule.

The former chief of a security police training unit is accused of fatally shooting seven people Dec. 21 during some of the heaviest fighting between loyalist forces and anti-government demonstrators. Ceausescu's regime fell the next day and the dictator and his wife were executed Dec. 25.

He also is charged with inciting others to commit genocide, attempted murder and weapons offenses.

Prosecutors said they would produce witnesses who saw General Ceausescu shoot seven people in the crowd outside the Intercontinental Hotel in central Bucharest. The defendant maintained he only fired into the air.

''I fired five or six bullets - a whole magazine - into the air,'' Ceausescu said, adding he could not have killed anyone because he was behind the security forces and could not have shot through them.

The defendant, who closely resembles his executed brother, was dressed in a brown-and-gray striped prison uniform. He appeared nervous during the court appearance, grinding his teeth, rocking in his chair and shaking slightly.

As he entered the courtroom he began to cry on seeing his daughter, who has not been permitted to visit her father since his Dec. 23 arrest.

''How can you defend that hyena?'' the mother of one of his alleged victims shouted at Ceausescu's attorney during a break.

The defendant's lawyer, Vaile Soroceanu said he was hopeful his client could get a fair trial, which was expected to last at least three more days.

The main reason for his optimism, Soroceanu said, was the fact the trial judge is young and never ran a court during the Ceausescu regime.

Several other Ceausescu family members are still awaiting trial, including the dictator's son, Nicu. In the western city of Timisoara, a trial has been under way for more than a month for 21 former leaders of the dictator's former secret police.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (APRIL 3) UPI - The city that had previously been known for being shut down by weather-related catastrophes Tuesday recovered from a manmade one with the agreement on an aid package that left the transit system intact.

The two-day shutdown of Erie County's mass transit system ended with an agreement on a $10.2 million funding package that, while raising fares and some taxes, averted a threatened gutting of the system and a loss of 125 jobs.

Transit officials said buses and light rail rapid transit cars would resume normal operations Tuesday.

An earlier plan that had been tentatively approved and then quashed called for severe service cuts that would include an end to weekend bus and rail service. Along with that, 125 jobs were threatened.

Members of the Amalgamated Transit Union spent all of Monday handing out flyers to protest the threatened cutbacks and loss of jobs.

The new plan approved by the Niagara Frontier Transportation Authority's Board of Commissioners provides $10.2 million in total aid in its first year and promises to be less painful to the city known for its snowbound image.

''Despite all the chaos, people did unify at the final juncture,'' NFTA spokesman Daryl Rasuli said.

The spokesman said the near-bankrupt authority would raise an estimated $1 million by increasing cash fares by 10 cents to $1.10 and hiking the price of transfers from a nickel to 20 cents. The price of tokens would remain at $1.

The bulk of the revenue would be made up by $5.95 million in real estate transfer taxes, which would increase by $5 for every $1,000 in valuation, Rasuli said.

Erie County Executive Dennis Gorski said the plan also included an ''infusion'' of $1 million from the city government, and $750,000 from New York state from a gross receipt tax.

He said an estimated $900,000 would come from the county's 8 percent sales tax and a ''rearrangement of certain other monies for the NFTA so they could be stable.''

According to the plan, which is to last through 1993, Niagara County also would contribute about $600,000 annually, the equal of their contribution last year.

The $750,000 contribution from the state was a reversal by Gov. Mario Cuomo, who originally said New York had no money to help restore bus and train service.

With NFTA buses and light-rail cars parked since early Sunday, about 135,000 commuters used bicycles, car pools or their feet on Monday, the second day of the transit shutdown.

The biggest problems were reported in city high schools, where absentee rates soared to near 60 percent.

''You don't see a lot of disruption here because we've got a great police force,'' Mayor James Griffin said. ''They kept the traffic rolling.''

Although the rush hour was a relative breeze, some commuters still grumbled.

''Let me think of a way to say this politely,'' said Sheila Addison, who walked 3 miles to work. She then spit out an expletive. ''I just don't understand this at all,'' she said.

The NFTA had expected to reap about $9 million annually from Erie County through a new tax on utility bills, but county legislators dumped the idea late last week.

NFTA commissioners had complained that an earlier deal worked out Sunday night left the authority about $4.7 million short under a fiscal 1990-91 budget it approved last week.

The long-troubled NFTA had twice threatened to shut down in March because of money problems.

(APRIL 3) UPI - President Bush continues his Midwest travels... the John Poindexter jury resumes deliberations... AIDS victim Ryan White is hospitalized in critical condition... and a study says women are making more news. Those stories and more, next from U-P-I.

President Bush, the self-proclaimed ''environmental'' president, today ends a two-day, four-state whirlwind tour that has emphasized a clean air bill his administration helped draft.

As the Senate prepares to vote later today on the clean air legislative package... Bush will plant a tree in Indianapolis during a special ceremony.

Bush will also use the stop to boost the Republican party now preparing for national and local elections. Bush plans to attend an Indianapolis fund-raiser in behalf of Senator Dan Coates.

Next stop on the Bush schedule is a Michigan G-O-P fund-raiser in Detroit.

Bush began his whirlwind trip with a stop yesterday in Atlanta and an Ohio fund-raiser in Cincinnati.

Jury deliberations will begin again today in the Iran-Contra trial of John Poindexter.

The NON-sequestered 12-member panel received instructions from U-S District Judge Harold Greene yesterday. Greene told the seven women and five men to ignore the political tone that characterized the proceedings.

Greene also included in his 58-page set of instructions a directive to NOT... in his words... ''decide whether President Reagan's commitment to assist the Contras in Nicaragua was the correct policy for the United States.''

Greene's directions dealt a blow to Poindexter's defense. Poindexter's lawyers based their strategy on the idea that Poindexter was a pawn in a power struggle between the Reagan White House and Congress.

Poindexter's attorney also argued that his client acted on direct instructions from Reagan, a point that Greene yesterday said has NO bearing on whether Poindexter can be convicted of deliberately lying to Congress as charged.

(APRIL 3) UPI - America's Roman Catholic bishops have issued a call for greater equality for women... but the church's 99-page draft of a pastoral statement on women refused to approve ordination of females as priests.

In continuing to refuse women access to the altar, the bishops cited the tradition of an all-male priesthood begun by Jesus Christ.

The bishops also distanced themselves from feminist positions sucha as abortion and use of contraceptives.

The statement warned women NOT to pursue courses of behavior that deviate from the church's opposition to abortion.

The statement also back off of an earlier promise to seek a dialogue on the issue of contraceptive use. The statement dropped the previous call for ''a spirit of compassion'' for those who do NOT adhere to the church's ban against contraceptive use.

The bishops have worked on the ''concerns of women'' for the past seven years. The present draft, which denounces sexism as a ''sin,'' is expected to be voted on in November.

A study has determined that women are making their mark on the news... showing up on the front pages of the nation's newspapers, both as newsmakers and as by-line reporters.

The study was commissioned by the American Society of Newspaper Editors' Human Resources Committee. It reviewed the front papes of 20 papers in the United States during February this year. A similar report done last year examined only 10 newspapers during the same month.

The report drew NO conclusions... but determined that more women are featured in front page photographs than the year before.

It also determined that women were quoted as sources on average 14 percent compared with 27 percent in 1989... and women were by-line reporters an average of 28 percent compared with 27 percent the year before.

The Albuquerque Tribune averaged the highest number of female by-lines... 51 percent, beating U-S-A-Today's high average last year of 41 percent.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - An arrest warrant was issued last year for the owner of the Happy Land social club building, but he was never picked up because police put a low priority on the matter, The New York Times reported Tuesday.

The newspaper pointed out that while city officials are now calling for tougher laws against social clubs, they failed to enforce existing laws applying to the Happy Land, where 87 people died in an arson fire March 25.

The warrant for the arrest of Alex DiLorenzo III, a realty investor with more than 200 buildings in the city, was issued Feb. 3, 1989 by Judge James E. Robinson in Criminal Court in the Bronx. The Times noted that DiLorenzo owns 11 social club sites, including three that have been ordered closed.

The order was issued after DiLorenzo failed to appear for a court hearing on notices of violations of four building-code provisions intended to reduce risks to life in a fire, the newspaper said.

The city's Social Club Task Force inspected the Happy Land on Nov. 20, 1988, and ordered the illegal nightspot closed, the newspaper reported.

The Times said that several days later, the Building Department mailed a copy of the vacate order and four summonses to DiLorenzo's office.

He was ordered to appear in court on Feb. 3. A return receipt for the summonses was dated Dec. 2, 1988. When DiLorenzo didn't show up in court, a bench warrant was issued, the Times reported.

The Times quoted a police spokesman saying that with more than 100,000 warrants issued a year, some have a higher priority than others, and that building violations were among those with the lowest priority.

''We are interested in all warrants,'' said Lt. Raymond O'Donnell, ''but we are more interested in going after the guy who has committed a murder over a guy who has violations in a building.''

Victor Kovner, the city's corporation counsel, said the Social Club Task Force was now reviewing the possibility of giving social-club warrants a higher priority.

Meanwhile, a special police task force has issued vacate orders to a total of 346 illicit clubs since a sweep by the city began last Sunday. The task force has visited 1,251 suspected social clubs, of which 172 were open, police said. One person has been arrested, while 339 notices of violations and 202 summonses have been issued.

Julio Gonzalez, accused of setting the Happy Land fire - the worst mass slaying in U.S. history - was charged with 87 counts of second-degree murder for showing ''depraved indifference to human life'' and 87 counts of felony murder for arson.

He was being held in the Bellevue Medical Center prison psychiatric ward.

ANN ARBOR, MI (APRIL 3) UPI - Voters approved a charter amendment to create a "zone of reproductive freedom" where abortions can be performed if future laws make them illegal, and upped the fine for marijuana possession from $5 to $25.

Proposal C to create the zone of reproductive freedom was passed 15,698 to 11,419, complete but unofficial returns showed Monday night. Under the amendment, a doctor convicted of performing an abortion in the city or a woman convicted of having an abortion would be fined $5 if such action violates a more restrictive state or federal statute.

Advocates said the proposal amends the charter to designate the city a reproductive freedom zone to give local authorities an alternative to criminal prosecution should state or federal laws change to outlaw abortion.

"I'm just thrilled!" said Karen Piehutkoski, a supporter of the measure. "I'm proud they made the choice to give people a choice on abortion." "This makes Ann Arbor the first (city) in the nation to have a zone of reproductive freedom," she said.

Barbara Listing, the president of Right to Life of Michigan, said abortion foes in Ann Arbor, where the University of Michigan was located, rather than fighting the $5 plan, are concentrating on a statewide petition drive to require parental consent for anyone under 18 to have an abortion.

Opponents of keeping the $5 marijuana fine said it had created a perception of the city as a haven for drugs, a perception reinforced by the annual April 1 "Hash Bash" - a marijuana party - on the U-M campus.

The City Council first adopted the $5 pot fine in 1972 as a form of de facto decriminalization of marijuana sale, possession and use. The measure was approved by a 12,901 to 11,419 margin. Possession of marijuana, under the charter, remains a misdemeanor.

When Republicans replaced the Democratic-Human Rights Party majority on the council in the 1973 election, they repealed the law, but voters reinstated it a year later after a petition drive by the student-back Human Rights Party. Officials said some 25,000 voters, or 33 percent, went to the polls to cast ballots.

(APRIL 3) UPI - Snow fell on lower Michigan early Tuesday, while thunderstorms drenched the Deep South and rain soaked parts of Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia.

The National Weather Service said the Michigan cities of Grand Rapids, Lansing and Detroit all reported snow and temperatures in the low 30s. Skies were generally clear in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

Elsewhere throughout the Midwest and Upper Great Lakes, skies were variably cloudy. Green Bay, Wis., was clear and 27 degrees. Chicago was cloudy and 34. Kansas City was clear and 35.

In the Middle Atlantic states, rain pounded parts of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, where overnight lows dipped into the 30s.

Rain became heavy and fog thickened across New England early Tuesday as a low-pressure system drifted in from the Great Lakes. Temperatures were climbing across most of the region.

A cold front pushed heavy rain and thunderstorms through the South as it moved toward the Atlantic. Blustery winds swept across much of the region, and temperatures dipped, with Knoxville, Tenn., falling to 42 degrees. Atlanta dipped to 52; Charleston, S.C., 63; Jacksonville, Fla., 65.

Light rain moistened sections of southwest and west Texas, especially northeast of Del Rio to just south of Rocksprings and in a 25-mile area between Rankin and Fort Stockton. Neighboring New Mexico also was splashed with rain between Grants and Chaco Canyon but skies cleared.

Strong winds also swept into Arkansas and Oklahoma.

In the West, early morning clouds and fog shrouded California from the Golden Gate to the Tijuana. Clouds in Oregon and Washington began clearing late Monday, and almost completely vanished over Oregon, where temperatures rose into the 70s.

TAIPEI, Taiwan (APRIL 3) UPI - Chinese student movement leader Chai Ling and her husband have escaped to Europe after living in hiding in China for 10 months, the China Times said in a report Tuesday from Hong Kong.

Chai, one of the three key leaders of the pro-democracy student movement in China, arrived in Europe Sunday with her husband Feng Cong-de, 22, the mass-circulation daily said.

''Freedom is so good, but the road to freedom is really too hard and too long,'' Chai was quoted as saying from Europe. ''In the end, we will attain freedom with the loving assistance of God and brave and kind people.''

Chai has been hospitalized in an undisclosed location after a grueling journey with her husband to escape Chinese authorities, who had put the couple on a new wanted list of dissidents last November, the Times said.

The semi-official Free China Relief Association, which aids Chinese dissidents, was unable to confirm the Times' report.

The student leader disappeared after the military crackdown on the pro-democracy movement in Tiananmen Square in Beijing June 3-4. Of the movement's three main leaders, she was the only one whose whereabouts remained unknown.

Wuerkaixi escaped to the West via the ''underground railroad'' through Hong Kong, while Wang Tan was captured by police a month after the crackdown.

Hundreds, and perhaps thousands, of students and civilians were killed in the military suppression of the pro-democracy movement. Following the crackdown, the government began massive arrests of student leaders and other dissidents.

The Times said Chai most likely took a different escape route than the ''underground railroad,'' which has reportedly been infiltrated by the central government.

Chai was expected to make a public appeareance Thursday to support planned protest activity in Beijing to mark the pro-democracy movement, which began about a year ago this time.

SINGAPORE (APRIL 3) UPI - The number of mysterious deaths of Thai workers grew Tuesday with two victims discovered in Malaysia and another in Singapore, bringing the toll to 16 in the two southeast Asian nations this year.

In Singapore, Somchit Buachoom, 33, was sleeping before dinner when he apparently had difficulty breathing shortly before dying, police said.

In neighboring Malaysia, Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad said his government will cooperate with Thailand in investigating the deaths of Nee Krabatthong, 34, a sugar cane plantation worker, and fellow worker and countryman Srinu Sitabachu, 42. They also died in their sleep.

''(Once) we know the cause of death, we will take preventative measures,'' Mahathir said.

Most of the 2,000 other Thai workers at the plantation in the northwest state of Kedah quit their jobs in alarm and headed back to their homeland, citing low wages and deplorable living conditions.

The cause of the deaths has eluded health officials so far. All were reported to have been healthy.

Along with the 14 deaths in Singapore and two in Malaysia this year among Thai laborers, unexplained Thai fatalities also have been reported in Saudi Arabia, where some 600 workers died in their sleep over the past 14 years. Eighteen have died in Brunei in similar circumstances since last year.

So far, researchers have only uncovered a few similarities among the Singapore victims. They had all eaten rice and many appeared to have been suffering from depression. Many took amphetamines to help them cope with long working hours.

A four-member Thai medical team arrived in Kedah to collect information on the two deaths and compare it with data on the equally baffling and sudden deaths of Thai workers in neighboring Singapore, where more than 200 Thais between ages 21 and 45 have died under similar circumstances since 1983.

An autopsy on Somchit performed at the Singapore General Hospital Mortuary recorded the cause of death as cardiac failure.

All the other autopsy reports revealed the workers from northeast Thailand suffered breathing difficulties before dying in their sleep, and heart failure was listed as the cause of death.

''The circumstances surrounding the death of Somchit appear similar to the other deaths here involving Thai workers,'' said Dr. Chao Tzee Cheng, a senior government pathologist investigating the deaths. Chao said authorities have been in contact with medical experts in the United States to try to determine if a virus was responsible.

The Health Ministry has set up a special committee comprising medical experts from Singapore and Thailand to investigate the deaths, which have alarmed the 10,000 Thai employees in Singapore.

''It's like going to bed at night and not knowing when a bullet will hit '' one employee said.

Health officials are considering the possibility acute stress caused by adapting to a new environment or a lack of Vitamin B1, absent from the daily menu of rice and vegetables, were responsible for the deaths. A deficiency of Vitamin B1, or thiamine, could result in certain nervous disorders.

In Bangkok, a statement from Thailand's Public Health Ministry said an analysis of blood samples taken from 50 Thais in Singapore showed no abnormalities.

TAIPEI, TAIWAN (APRIL 3) UPI - Fire destroyed a seven-story building in Taoyuan City in northern Taiwan Tuesday morning, killing 15 people and injuring five, police said.

Witnesses said they saw several youths throw gasoline bombs into the building. Police were investigating the cause of the blaze.

Fourteen people were burned to death in the four-hour blaze, which started at 6:23 a.m. on the second floor of the building, police said. Another seriously injured man died in the hospital, and five other people were listed in serious condition.

The building housed a barbershop on the second and third floors and apartments on the upper floors, police said.

In February, fire gutted a five-story shopping complex in Taoyuan City, killing 28.

GENEVA (APRIL 3) UPI - U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar will make an ''important announcement'' after meetings Wednesday with Salvadoran government and guerrilla delegates on new peace talks, the United Nations said Tuesday.

U.N. and Salvadoran diplomats said the statement would concern a resumption of U.N.-mediated peace negotiations with some form of cease-fire the first order of business.

A U.N. spokesman said Perez de Cuellar scheduled separate sessions with delegations led by Salvadoran Justice Minister Oscar Santa Maria and by Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front commander Shafik Handal.

''Around the middle of the day there will be a public meeting of all participants ... at which the Secretary General will make an important announcement,'' the spokesman said.

The meeting Wednesday will take place in the Council Chamber of the Palais des Nations, seat of the pre-World War II League of Nations and post-war European Office of the United Nations.

There were two rounds of peace talks between the U.S.-backed Salvadoran government and leftist guerrillas last September and October, but the FLMN called off a third round in November because of a major rebel offensive.

U.N. mediator Alvarro de Soto, acting as Perez de Cuellar's personal representative at the request of five Latin American presidents, has shuttled between the two sides in Mexico City since the beginning of the year.

An estimated 72,000 people have died in 10 years of fighting between forces of the Salvador government, which receives about $1.5 million in U.S. aid daily, and the FMLN, whose main supporters had been the ruling Nicaraguan Sandinistas before the Sandinistas lost an election this year.

SOFIA, Bulgaria (APRIL 3) UPI - Peter Mladenov, the communist reformer who led the bloodless Nov. 10 coup against hard-line leader Todor Zhivkov, was elected Tuesday to the newly created post of Bulgarian president.

The National Assembly, in its final session before dissolving itself, chose Mladenov for the post by unanimous vote and also ratified sweeping political and economic reforms approved last week during round-table talks between government and opposition leaders.

The package of laws sets the rules for Bulgaria's first free parliamentary election in 69 years and maps out the course for a transition to democratic rule and a market-oriented economy.

Mladenov was elected president after his old position, president of the communist-dominated State Council, was scrapped by the legislature. He was the only candidate for the job.

His term is expected to last about 18 months, or until the constitutent assembly chosen in the forthcoming June 10 polls completes the task of drafting a new constitution and calls fresh elections.

''The most complex and difficult task we now face is guaranteeing the peaceful transition from totalitarianism to democracy,'' Mladenov told the National Assembly after his election.

He appealed to Bulgarians for patience and calm in the months ahead as leaders attempt to address serious economic and environmental problems.

After Mladenov's election, the National Assembly dissolved itself, ending a mandate that began under Zhivkov, who appointed most of its members.

Since Zhivkov's ouster in November, the National Assembly has cast off its image as a rubber-stamp legislature to take a leading role in implementing political and economic reforms.

The parliament's action Tuesday comes four days after delegates to round-table talks between the government and opposition groups agreed on the creation of the new post of president and scheduled elections for June 10 and June 11.

Mladenov, 53, a member of the ruling communist politburo under Zhivkov, replaced his former boss as communist party leader Nov. 10. He relinquished that post and was elected president of the State Council two months ago during an extraordinary party congress.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 3) UPI - Emergency officials and residents along the Allegheny River were relieved Tuesday as a dissipated 200,000-gallon fuel spill crept into the Ohio River, enabling water plants to open intake valves and replenish supplies.

Eight of 10 pumping stations reopened their valves late Monday and early Tuesday after tests showed the water was clear enough to begin resupply, said John Kaus, Allegheny County's deputy director for emergency management. He said he doubted water conservation would be needed in Ohio River towns, saying they could treat the water with added carbon.

''We're real pleased with how it's breaking up,'' Kaus said. ''We're a lot more comfortable today than yesterday. We feel we've come through the worst of it and now we're on the downhill side.''

Kaus said the end of the oily trail could be seen just south of Freeport, about 30 miles northeast of Pittsburg, where about 200,000 gallons of fuel leaked from a ruptured pipeline Friday night. It stretched about 40 miles to the Ohio River town of Sewickley, about 10 miles south of Pittsburgh's unaffected treatment plant at Aspinwall.

Meanwhile, mandatory and voluntary water restrictions remained in effect for some 1 million people in the region. The fuel slick sped up to slightly more than a half-mile an hour and is expected to take at least four days to move through the Pittsburgh area, where the Allegheny joins the Monongahela River to form the Ohio River.

The Harrison Township Water Authority, the northernmost authority below the point of the spill, went into operation at 9:30 p.m. Monday. Oakmont, about 12 miles north of Pittsburgh and the last to begin operating, started filling its supply tanks early Tuesday.

Emergency officials said water plants at Brackenridge and Fox Chapel remained out of service early Tuesday but water was being supplied through other systems. Thousands of residents relied on water buffaloes and trainloads of water since Sunday.

Local officials have been sharply critical of the Buckeye Pipe Line Co., whose conduit ruptured Friday in Freeport, releasing ''transmix'' - diesel fuel, gasoline and oil - into an Allegheny tributary and from there into the river.

Allegheny County Commissioner Pete Flaherty said he asked the state to investigate Buckeye's pipeline, saying, ''There are not enough shutoff valves in that area of pipeline,'' referring to the section that ruptured. ''I feel a pipeline serving an urban area should be better protected.''

The pipeline company has promised to accept full responsibility for the spill and the undetermined clean-up costs.

Emergency officials said fuel that had been seeping from soil at the leak site was stopped late Monday with makeshift dams.

The ruptured pipeline, apparently broken by a landslide, was discovered when control-room workers from Buckeye noticed a drop in pressure about 11 p.m. Friday, the company said.

But County Commissioner Tom Flaherty said indications were ''there may have been a leak before the landslide, and I want that investigated.'' He said the state also should review the company's emergency response procedures.

Kaus said that despite the seriousness of the spill, ''There doesn't appear to be a massive fish kill. (Fish deaths) are very minimal, from what the state Game Commission tells us.''

He said waterfowl for the most part were also spared, saying he could

''recall only about half a dozen'' instances of birds being affected by the goo. They were all taken to the Pittsburgh Zoo for cleaning.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - A plunge in the number of building permits led to a 1 percent decline in the index of leading economic indicators for February, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

The downturn followed revised increases of 0.2 percent in January and 0.4 percent in December, but was anticipated after an earlier government report showed a decline in February building permits.

A total of seven of the 11 indicators that track the pulse of the American economy dropped in February, while three edged up and a single category - average workweek - remained unchanged, the government said.

The index itself finished at the 144 level in February.

On the downside:

-Building permits dived .82 percent.

-Vendor performance, which tracks delivery of products, fell .17 percent.

-Stock prices were off .16 percent.

-Contracts and orders for plant and equipment dropped .13 percent.

-The change in manufacturers unfilled orders, the change in sensitive materials prices and the index of consumer expectations were all down .08 percent.

On the increase in February:

-Manufacturers new orders surged by .26 percent.

-Weekly initial claims for unemployment insurance and money supply were up by .08 percent.

The department's Bureau of Economic Analysis also said the composite index of coincident indicators, a monthly approximation of aggregate economic activity, increased 0.8 percent in February to 133.7.

That index fell by 0.8 percent in January and increased by 0.1 percent in December, the department said.

The composite index of lagging indicators, meanwhile, increased by 0.9 percent in February to 121 after decreasing 0.4 percent in January. The government said it was unchanged in December.

BEIJING (APRIL 3) UPI - Communist Party chief Jiang Zemin was elected chairman of the state Central Military Commission to replace elderly Deng Xiaoping in what was the senior leader's last official but largely ceremonial post, news reports said Tuesday.

Despite Deng's ostensible retirement, the 85-year-old leader is still seen as wielding ultimate power behind the scenes and has managed to balance rival elements within China's fractious leadership.

Jiang's election to the largely ceremonial chairmanship was expected. Two weeks ago, the National People's Congress - China's nominal legislature - formally accepted Deng's request to retire from his last official post as chairman of the commission.

''Jiang Zemin was elected chairman of the Central Military Commission of the People's Republic of China here today at the third session of the seventh National People's Congress, the highest legislature in China,'' said a report carried by the official Xinhua News Agency.

Jiang, 63, already chairs another military panel, the Communist Party's Central Military Commission - the party's most powerful post. Deng hand-picked Jiang as his successor as chairman of both the state and party military panels despite Jiang's lack of military experience and limited clout in the ranks.

The state military commission is largely a ceremonial body and most of its members belong to the more powerful Communist Party Central Military Commission.

That party commission effectively has control over the People's Liberation Army. Real military power is held by President Yang Shangkun, a seasoned veteran second in the military commission line of command, and Yang's younger brother Yang Baibing, a commission member and army political commissar.

Analysts believe Deng appointed Jiang to both military posts to curb the influence of the Yang brothers, referred to by Chinese in private as the ''Yang family clique.'' But Deng's health appears to be failing and his death could touch off a power struggle in which Jiang would be quickly shunted aside.

Deng stated his desire to retire from both party and state military commission posts in a letter to the party's ruling Central Committee last September, saying he wanted to make way for a ''younger generation'' of leaders.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - A plunge in the number of building permits led to a 1 percent decline in the index of leading economic indicators for February, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

''This index has been bouncing up and down for over a year now and not going much of anywhere,'' said economist Cynthia Latta of DRI/McGraw Hill in Lexington Mass. ''The message it's still giving is the prospect of sluggish growth.''

The downturn followed revised increases of 0.2 percent in January and 0.4 percent in December, but was anticipated after an earlier report showed a decline in February building permits in the wake of January's warm spell.

The index suggests ''the economy is still struggling,'' said Robert Dederick, chief economist for Northern Trust in Chicago. ''It's still an economy that has not broken out of its slowdown.''

A total of seven of the 11 indicators that track the pulse of the American economy dropped in February, while three edged up and a single category - average workweek - remained unchanged, the government said.

The index itself finished at the 144 level in February, after hitting 145.5 in January.

''The indicators do point to a continued slowdown,'' Dederick said.

Indicators on the downside:

-Building permits.

-Vendor performance, which tracks delivery of products.

-Stock prices.

-Contracts and orders for plant and equipment.

-The change in manufacturers unfilled orders.

-The change in sensitive materials prices.

-The index of consumer expectations.

Indicators showing an increase in February:

-Manufacturers new orders.

-Weekly initial claims for unemployment insurance.

-Money supply.

The department's Bureau of Economic Analysis also said the composite index of coincident indicators, a monthly approximation of aggregate economic activity, increased 0.8 percent in February to 133.7.

That index fell by 0.8 percent in January and increased by 0.1 percent in December, the department said.

INDIANAPOLIS (APRIL 3) UPI - Surgery was being considered only as a last resort for hemophiliac Ryan White, the pioneering teenage AIDS victim who was in critical condition with an unspecified respiratory ailment.

White, now 18, who gained national attention during his successful court battle to be admitted to school, was taken to Riley Hospital for Children on Thursday.

At a news conference Monday, Dr. Martin Kleiman - who has treated White since he contracted AIDS from a blood treatment for his hemophilia in late 1984 - would neither disclose details of the infection nor speculate on his chance of survival.

White, who was receiving round-the-clock supervision in the intensive care unit, is hooked up to a chemical ventilator to aid his breathing and is heavily sedated, Kleiman said.

While White apparently is "experiencing no discomfort ..., this is clearly the most critical infection that he's ever had," said Kleiman, director of infectious diseases and professor of pediatrics at the Indiana University Medical Center, which includes Riley Hospital.

Kleiman said White's hemophilia ruled out surgery except as a last resort because of the possibility of severe bleeding. Carrie Jackson Van Dyke, a spokeswoman for the Indiana State Board of Health who is representing White's family during his illness, said White has been suffering internal bleeding.

At the request of White's family, no other details about his condition were released. Van Dyke said Jeannie White, the patient's mother, has been "holding up remarkably, considering the circumstances."

President Bush, who last week called for compassion for AIDS victims, was to go to Indianapolis Tuesday for a tree-planting ceremony and to address a GOP fund-raiser. There had been speculation Bush might try to visit White's mother.

However, deputy White House press secretary Alixe Glen said the president is not planning to visit Ryan's bedside, saying it would be inappropriate. "However, he is in our thoughts and prayers," Glen said.

Ryan White has been in and out of hospitals since he contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome. He reportedly had staph infections late last year. He was one of the first students in the country to be banned from school for having AIDS, a virus that robs the body's immune system of its ability to fight off infections and diseases.

White's battle with AIDS and the Western School Corporation near Kokomo gained wide attention shortly after he contracted the disease from a tainted blood-clotting agent used to treat his hemophilia. He eventually was allowed to return to school in early 1986 after a yearlong court battle.

The next academic year, parental concern about his condition subsided in the Kokomo area, and White's eighth grade year at Western High School passed virtually without incident.

The Whites in early 1987 moved from Kokomo to Cicero, where students at nearby Hamilton Heights High School welcomed White and expressed little concern about being around a classmate with AIDS.

The Whites filed a $2 million suit in March 1985 against Hyland

Therapeutics Division of Baxter Travenol Laboratories, a California-based pharmaceutical company that supplied the AIDS-tainted clotting agent called Hemofil. Nine months later, U.S. District Judge Allen Sharp dismissed the suit, ruling that the company was immune from such action.

White was the subject of an ABC television movie, "The Ryan White Story," that was broadcast Jan. 16, 1989, and he appeared with Ronald and Nancy Reagan during a March 1990 event in Los Angeles during which the Ryan White National Program for AIDS Education was established by Athletes and Entertainers for Kids.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - French department store Galeries Lafayette, hoping to open its first store in the United States, has offered to buy the lease of Bonwit Teller's flagship store in Manhattan, news reports said Tuesday.

A Galeries Lafayette representative told a federal bankruptcy court Monday it would pay $4 million plus the value of inventory to buy the lease of the Bonwit store in Trump Tower, according to The New York Times.

The bid was one of several submitted to Bonwit's parent, L.J. Hooker Corp. which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection from creditors last August. Hooker is the U.S. arm of Australia's Hooker Corp., which was placed in the hands of a provisional liquidator last year.

Representatives of Hooker and Bonwit did not immediately return phone calls Tuesday.

Galeries Lafayette said it wanted a license for a 4 1/2 month clearance period to operate the store under Bonwit's name. After that, it would place its own name on the store, re-stocked with its own merchandise.

Bonwit currently operates 16 stores.

Also Monday, a consortium including real estate developer Donald Trump bid $21.75 million for five Bonwit stores in Manhattan, Boston, Buffalo and Manhasset, N.Y. and Short Hills, N.J., it was reported.

The group said it would forgive $269,000 is debts owed by the stores in Trump Tower and Short Hills.

Last month, Pyramid Cos., a Syracuse, N.Y.-based mall developer, made an offer for the same five stores for $16.5 million and the assumption of some debts. Under Chapter 11 proceedings, other bidders could submit offers, which must be considered by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Tina Brozman.

Ralph Hibbard, a Canadian real estate developer, offered nearly $7 million Monday for five stores in Bal Harbour and Palm Beach, Fla., Troy, Mich., Philadelphia and Jenkintown, Pa.

Hibbard wants the use of the Bonwit name, which lawyers have may be sold separately if Bonwit's is eventually liquidated.

Last year Hooker liquidated B. Altman & Co., a carriage trade department store, after failing to find a buyer.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (APRIL 3) UPI - The U.S. Embassy said Tuesday a U.S national implicated by a Filipino general in the December uprising against President Corazon Aquino did meet with coup plotters but did not represent the U.S. government.

U.S. Embassy spokeswoman Victoria Middleton said in a statement that Harold Maglio, who was introduced to Brig. Gen. Alejandro Galido as a U.S. Air Force officer with the Defense Intelligence Agency, was a civilian employee at Norton Air Force base in California.

Galido, who was assigned by the Philippines military to infiltrate the coup plotters, said in a sworn statement that Maglio met with the coup plotters in July 1989 and offered to supply them with anti-tank weapons for $20 million.

''Mr. Maglio has never had any connection with the Defense Intelligence Agency nor was he ever a colonel in the U.S. Air Force,'' Middleton said.

''He has no responsibility for policy, intelligence or political matters within the U.S. government and his work does not involve the Philippines. Mr. Maglio was traveling on vacation to the Philippines as a private individual.''

Middleton said Maglio was a employed with the Norton Air Base as a ''civilian quality assurance manager.'' She said his meeting with Galido took place in April 1989.

Galido's statement drew a storm of protest in the Philippine Congress, media and among ordinary Filipinos who resent any implication of U.S. meddling in the Southeast Asian nation's often-chaotic civilian-military relations.

The United States provided air cover for loyal government troops during the Dec. 1-9 coup attempt, saving Aquino from the sixth and gravest challenge in her four years as president.

Middleton said Washington ''does not support any activity aimed at destabilizing the Philippine government. Any representation that there is such official support is false.''

She said the Philippine government was aware of the meeting with Galido and reported it to U.S. law enforcement officials, who ''immediately investigated and advised the Philippine government of the results.''

Analysis By: Rebecca Kolberg

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - The sun is warm. The birds are singing. And once again, the garden beckons. Watch out! Puttering around the garden may endanger your health - and the health of others - if you throw caution to the wind, no matter how balmy it may be.

Marc Cathey, director of the National Arboretum, said gardening can pose an array of hazards, most stemming from carelessness or ignorance on the part of people intent on exercising their green thumbs.

Top on Cathey's list of concerns is the practice of putting pesticides into unlabled containers and then discarding the containers in places where people or pets may come in contact with the toxic chemicals.

Gardeners should always wear surgical-style masks and long-sleeve clothing when spraying pesticides or herbicides, or applying dusty material like lime or fertilizers, Cathey said.

"Although you don't see too many gardeners in bikinis, on a hot day there are a lot of tank tops. If you are using pesticides, that is an absolute no-no," Cathey said, adding that covering up also guards against overexposure to the sun, which can cause skin cancer.

Rubber gloves and other protective clothing should be used when applying herbicides that block the root growth of unwanted plants, he said. Clothes worn when working with garden chemicals should be washed twice on the hot cycle before they are worn again, he added.

Pesticide instructions should be carefully followed and it is best to select products that do not harm butterflies or fish, he said. Whenever possible, a gardener should select plants that require little or no chemical help for healthy growth, Cathey said.

Thoughtful plant choice can also head off other hazards, especially in gardens where children have easy access. Two plants that Cathey would prefer barred from household gardens are castor bean and lily-of-the-valley, plants that he says "are quite toxic" if eaten. Other plants, while edible in certain conditions, may be poisonous or at least irritating in other forms.

Lima beans should never be eaten uncooked because the raw beans have cyanide in their skins, Cathey said. Rhubarb leaves and big, old radishes also contain substances that if eaten, can make a person "really sick," the expert gardener said.

Full of thorns, wire plant cages and rusty tools, gardens constitute a potentially serious health threat to people who have not kept their tetanus vaccinations up to date. Tetanus is an often fatal disease caused by certain soil-dwelling bacteria. The bacteria enter the body through a wound made by a thorn, nail or other sharp object.

"Tetanus shots are simply essential because you are always using wires to hold something into place, something is always jabbing your hand," said Cathey. He added that using clean work gloves and dipping garden tools in bleach can also reduce health risks.

But bugs, plants and chemicals are not to blame for the biggest health hazard facing gardeners: injured backs and joints. "The most common problem is low back injury. People go out on the first nice weekend day in spring and spend two to six hours on their hands and knees, squatting - and they they try to get up and are stuck," said Ira Silverstein, a physical therapist in Washington.

Reckless shovelers who strike hidden stones may end up with twisted shoulders, knees, ankles or backs - "depending on what happens to the shovel and which way it throws you," Silverstein said.

Even the garden store is not totally safe. Gardeners may throw out their backs by hefting 50-pounds bags of peat moss, mulch or white stone. "Everybody overestimates their capacity. They don't realize they've been basically sedentary all winter and now all of a sudden they want to get out there and work hard to make their gardens look nice," Silverstein said.

To avoid unnecessary lifting, Silverstein suggests people use wheelbarrows or push-carts to haul gardening supplies. And if you must lift heavy objects, bend at the knees, rather than the waist - keeping the back straight, he said.

Kneepads or foam cushions are also a good idea, Silverstein said, noting prolonged kneeling can aggravate a potentially disabling condition caused by the roughening of cartilage behind the kneecap.

He advises people to increase their physical activities prior to gardening season. Once in the garden, he said they should change their stance every 15 to 20 minutes to prevent the risk of getting "locked" in one position. Should a joint lock and not eventually loosen up, he recommends seeing a doctor, because cartilage may be wedged in the joint and forcing it open may cause further damage.

The American Physical Therapy Association suggests that before entering the garden, people follow a stretching and limbering regimen that includes rotating the head and upper body, raising knees above the waist, clenching and unclenching the hands and rotating the wrists in circles.

Although gardening is better than sitting around, Silverstein said that as exercise it is about the same as housework, ranking "on the bottom rung of aerobic and caloric expenditure."

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - The after-tax profits of manufacturers averaged 4.5 cents per dollar of sales in the fourth quarter of 1989, a decline of 0.4 cents from the third quarter, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

That totaled $30.4 billion for October, November and December, down $3.1 billion, or 9.2 percent, from $33.5 billion in July, August and September, the department's Census Bureau said in a quarterly report.

For the year, manufacturers profits after taxes totaled $137.7 billion, a decrease of 12 percent from $154.7 billion in 1988.

The figures were adjusted to reflect seasonal factors.

The after-tax profits of manufacturers of durable goods - expensive items made to last three or more years - fell by $4.9 billion in the fourth quarter to $9.1 billion because of a $1.9 billion, or 84 percent, fall in transportation equipment.

There were also significant declines in the profits of producers of stone, clay, glass, primary metals and fabricated metals, while machinery and electrical machinery makers showed modest increases, the department said.

After-tax profits for non-durable manufacturers climbed by $2.1 billion in the fourth quarter to $21.3 billion, an increase of 11.5 percent, primarily on the sales of subsidiaries in the food and printing industries the report said.

But the textile and paper industries reported sharp declines in profits, and the chemical and petroleum industries also reported a downturn during the fourth quarter, the Commerce Department said.

In the retail sector, fourth-quarter after-tax profits climbed to $4.5 billion after - a 73 percent surge over $2.6 billion in the third quarter of 1989, the report said.

The annual rate of return on tax stockholders' equity for manufacturing, after taxes, was 11.5 percent in the fourth quarter, compared with 13.5 percent in the third quarter, the report also said.

(APRIL 3) UPI - The government says the index of leading economic indicators plunged one percent in February, due to a drop in the number of building permits. The downturn follows revised increases of two-tenths of one percent in January and four-tenths of one percent in December. The February decline was generally expected after an earlier government report showed a drop in February building permits.

President Bush hopes to live up to his self-proclaimed title as ''the environmental president'' by pushing a clean air bill up for a Senate vote later today. The Bush administration helped draft the measure. Bush plans to attend an Indianapolis tree planting ceremony where he's expected to plug the clean air bill.

Doctors say surgery is being considered only as a last resort for 18-year-old hemophilac Ryan White, the AIDS victim whose court battle to return to school drew public attention to his plight. White is listed in critical condition in the intensive care unit of an Indianapolis hospital, where he is being treated for an UNspecified respiratory ailment.

Eight of 10 pumping stations along the Allegheny River in Pennsylvania resumed operations after tests showed that the water is clear enough to begin re-supplying customers. The fuel leaked from a ruptured pipeline Friday night.

Chai is one of three key leaders of the failed pro-democracy student movement in China.

The United Nations says Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar will make an ''important announcement'' after meetings tomorrow in Switzerland with Salvadoran government and guerrilla delegates on new peace talks. Diplomats say the statement will likely concern a resumption of U-N mediated peace talks with some form of truce as the first order of business. Two rounds of peace talks broke off last fall after a major rebel offensive.

Two bombs believed planted by Sikh extremists went off today in two districts of India's strife-torn Punjab state, killing at least 14 people. Police say the bombings occurred as Hindus across India were celebrating a religious festival. The second blast occurred at a vegetable market as Hindus marched by in a procession, igniting clashes between Hindus and Sikhs.

PARIS (APRIL 3) UPI - U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said in an interview published Tuesday he is opposed to widening the permanent membership of the U.N. Security Council to include Japan or a re-unified Germany.

''There are people who say the right of veto is unjust. So why should we increase the number of countries who can exercise it?'' Perez de Cuellar said in an interview with Le Figaro newspaper.

He was responding to a question posed by the newspaper on whether Japan and Germany should become permanent members of the U.N. Security Council ''in order to reflect the reality of the world in which we live'' and ''so that they can better assume their responsibilities with regard to the international community?''

The five permanent U.N. Security Council members are the United States, Soviet Union, Britain, China and France. In addition, there are 10 non-permanent Security Council members elected for two-year terms.

Perez de Cuellar said, ''We already have great difficulty in coordinating the five'' permanent U.N. Security Council members.

''It would be even more difficult to coordinate with seven. In any case, in that way one would open the door. The Latin Americans would say, 'And why not us?' The Africans as well.

''One must not universalize the right of veto. It would be better to suppress it.''

Commenting on another thorny global issue, the U.N. chief executive also refused to acknowledge the self-proclaimed independence of the Lithuanian republic.

''It would be impossible for me to make a public declaration saying that I am a partisian of the independence of Lithuania - for the simple reason that this country is one of the republics of a state that is a member of the U.N.,'' he said.

But he added, ''There is national democracy and there is international democracy. What is important is respect for the will of the people.''

The interview with Perez de Cuellar was published shortly before he was to meet with President Francois Mitterrand. The U.N. chief then was to attend a ceremony endowing him with associate membership of France's Academy of Moral and Political Sciences.

In the interview, Perez de Cuellar said he believed Europe has a future role to play within the United Nations as a champion of the Third World.

''Europe already is playing a capital role because it is at the origin of everything that exists in the world - you are the great source of Western civilization.''

''Europe could play an even bigger role still if it made itself the spokesman of the Third World. It has been the inspiration and the creator of the Third World,'' Perez de Cuellar said.

''If you turn toward Asia, toward Africa, toward Latin America, you see that neither the Soviets nor the Americans are present there. It is Europe that has led civilization in these three continents,'' he said.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (APRIL 3) UPI - Heavily armed soldiers and police Tuesday patrolled strife-torn areas of Natal province where a week of fighting has left 55 people dead, scores wounded and thousands homeless.

In the ravaged area of the Edendale Valley on the outskirts of Natal's provincial capital of Pietermaritzburg, witnesses reported a high level of army troops, some leaving their armored personnel carriers to chat with residents and take snacks at food stalls.

African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela gave a measured reaction to President Frederik de Klerk's response Monday to a wave of violence in the country but lashed out at Minister of Law and Order Adriaan Vlok as the worst in South Africa's history.

The police in the Natal area have been accused by the ANC and other anti-apartheid groups of supporting the rival Zulu movement, Inkatha, of Mangosuthu Buthelezi in the Natal conflict, which has left some 3,000 dead since 1987.

In the past week at least 55 people have been killed and 13,000 temporarily homeless in the internecine strife.

''We have as head of the police a minister who is probably the most uncooperative in the history of our country,'' Mandela told a news conference on the second day of his visit to Natal.

''Vlok has no interest in black aspirations and does not wish an opposing voice to be heard. We can't hope for solutions while the department is headed by such a man,'' he said.

Mandela is scheduled to meet de Klerk on Thursday to discuss the ANC's decision to suspend April 11 talks that had been scheduled to discuss obstacles to formal power-sharing negotiations.

He denied reports of a split in the leadership of the ANC as ''incorrect'' and insisted the talks were suspended to protest the deaths of 11 anti-government demonstrators eight days ago in police gunfire in the black township of Sebokeng.

''The killing of between 7 and 14 whites would cause a national uprising '' Mandela said. ''But because its blacks, whites think it is not important.''

He declined to say whether he would raise the issue of Vlok during the talks with de Klerk but indicated the incident at Sebokeng would be central to their meeting.

''We won't allow the government to negotiate on the one hand and conduct war with the other,'' he said.

The 71-year-old Mandela also defended his decision not to attend a joint peace rally scheduled to have been held with Buthelezi on Monday in an Inkatha-stronghold in Natal and said the ''climate is not right'' for a private meeting between the two men.

De Klerk Monday ordered a high profile nationwide deployment of troops to support police in halting a wave of unrest, particularly in Natal, but stuck to his reform agenda and unveiled proposed legislation to grant indemnity from prosecution to exiled ANC leaders to allow them to return to South Africa for talks.

De Klerk's measures included aerial patrols of highways, roadblocks, stricter enforcement of security laws, and deployment of additional troops and police in Natal.

Mandela said it was ''encouraging that see that de Klerk is concerned about the violence in the country'' but criticized him for failing to consult black leaders on the program.

''The government must move away from taking decisions without consulting experienced black leaders,'' Mandela said. ''Any measures taken were bound to be ineffective without acknowledged black leaders.''

Vlok, the law and order minister since 1986, has frequently come under criticism for police activities. Following the Sebokent incident, Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu accused Vlok of being unable to control his ''trigger-happy force.''

PARIS (APRIL 3) UPI - Libyan-backed Chadian rebels launched hit-and-run raids on government garrisons at two eastern Chadian cities despite the recent deployment of French troops to back government forces, diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

Motorized columns from the ''Islamic Legion'' rebels led by renegade Chadian army chief of staff Idriss Deby overran Iriba some 36 miles west of the Sudanese border, but Chadian troops repelled them in a similar assault on nearby Guereda, the sources said. The rebels later pulled out of Iriba.

The challenges to the pro-Western government of Chadian President Hissene Habre came 12 days after rebels raided the Chadian towns of Baha and Tine.

A statement released in Paris by a Chadian opposition group claimed ''several hundred'' Chadian government troops were killed in the latest surge of fightingat Tine, Baha and Iriba. It said rebels took 1,000 government troops prisoner.

France on Friday sent 15 combat aircraft to Eastern Chad and flew 146 more paratroopers from France to the West African nation in what the French Defense Ministry described as a ''limited reinforcement'' of its forces there and an ''implicit warning'' to Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi not to challenge the Habre government.

The latest fighting took place only 120 miles northeast of the main French army and air force base at the Eastern city of Abeche that was reinforced last week.

The French contingent in Chad, called ''Epervier,'' was deployed there Feb. 15, 1986, in response to a Libyan offensive in the north of the country. Before last week's reinforcement, French troops had been reduced to some 1,000 in Chad with only 100 of those at Abeche.

Chad, a former French colony, has fought an on-again, off-again war with Libyan forces since 1973, mainly over control of the mineral-rich Aouzou Strip in the north of the country.

Libyan support for the rebels dates back to at least 1979 and many of the ''Islamic Legion'' are believed to be mercenaries paid by Gadhafi.

In August 1989 Chad and Libya agreed to settle their territorial diffrences within a year. Chadian and Libyan Foreign Ministers met at Libreville, Gabon, last week as part of the accord, apparently without making progress.

The Paris statement by the Chadian opposition ''Patriotic Salvation Forces'' claimed rebels ''pushed back the aggression by the Chadian National Armed Forces and launched a counter-offensive of great vigor that allowed them to re-enter Chadian territory, notably in the areas of Tine, Iriba and Baha.''

''One thousand government troops were taken prisoner and several hundred dead were counted. An important quantity of military material was recovered or destroyed, notably eight T-55 tanks,'' said the opposition statement.

HARTFORD, CT (APRIL 3) UPI - The new owners of Colt Firearms have announced plans to produce a modified version of the controversial AR-15 semi-automatic rifle for target shooters and hunters.

The announcement Monday brought concern from state officials who provided state funds to take over the company, ending a four-year strike against the former owners last month.

State Treasurer Francisco Borges, who helped engineer the buy-out plan with $25 million in state pension funds, said he was opposed to assault rifles.

He said he had been assured by Colt Manufacturing Co. President Richard F. Gamble that the new rifle, called the Sporter, would not be an assault rifle, a type thought by many to serve no legitimate purpose in civilian use. But, Borges said, "if that's what it turns out to be," he will do his best to see it is not produced for sale to civilians.

The Hartford gun maker stopped making the AR-15 for the civilian market in March 1989 after the federal government imposed a temporary ban on imports of dozens of similar foreign-made weapons. Colt still makes the AR-15 rifle for use by police.

As a result of the buyout plan, the state has a direct interest in Colt with an investment in 47 percent of the company. The United Auto Workers Union, which began the strike on Jan. 24, 1986, a group of former managers of the plant and some private investors are also owners of the new company named Colt Manufacturing Co.

Colt's parent company, Colt Industries Inc. of New York, had decided to sell the operation in the latter part of the strike.

Gamble said the new version of the rifle eliminates many of the features thought to be dangerous and it cannot be altered to become an automatic weapon. "The modifications make it a safe hunting and target shooting shooting rifle," said Gamble.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - A federal prosecutor Tuesday described former Philippines first lady Imelda Marcos and arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi as "partners in crime" who conspired to hide millions of dollars plundered from her homeland during Ferdinand Marcos' reign.

"This is a case about theft, fraud. and deceit on an incredible scale," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Debra Livingston in her opening statements in U.S. District Court.

The defense, which contends that Mrs. Marcos is being wrongfully prosecuted for her late husband's crimes, was scheduled to begin its opening statements Tuesday afternoon.

The long-delayed trial opened in a rain-drenched circus atmosphere. Marcos arrived in a blue van that was quickly surrounded by a pushing and shoving crowd waving banners and carrying red, white, and blue balloons.

Marcos, still dressed in widow's black with no raincoat, was handed a bouquet of flowers as U.S. marshals forced a path for her through the mob of reporters, photographers, supporters and critics.

The air was filled with shouts and curses and someone yelled, "Imelda is a beast!" Supporters held up banners reading: "Now the Greatest Circus on Earth at the Expense of Imelda and the U.S. Taxpayers," and, "Let the Philippine Courts Judge."

Marcos is charged with racketeering, conspiracy, fraud, and obstruction of justice. Khashoggi, once described as the richest man in the world, is charged with obstruction of justice and fraud.

Standing before the jury of seven women and five men, Livingston scoffed at the idea Mrs. Marcos was an innocent bystander to her husband's crimes.

"Imelda Marcos was not just his wife," she said. "She was a ranking Cabinet minister ... together, Imelda Marcos and Ferdinand Marcos were partners in crime."

Livingston said that when the Marcoses were forbidden by the courts to dispose of their New York property, they arranged a deal with Khashoggi. "Enter Adnan Khashoggi, Imelda Marcos's newest partner in crime ... they devised a scheme to obstruct justice and commit fraud," she said. She said the two made up documents "false from corner to corner and from top to bottom to show Khashoggi owned the buildings.

The trial before U.S. District Judge John Keenan was expected to last until July. Prosecutors said they will use documents to detail holdings linked to Marcos and financial transactions around the world, from Swiss accounts to Hong Kong.

The first 90-page indictment handed up against Marcos and Khashoggi includes the transfer of $103 million of illegally obtained funds into the United States in order to purchase New York real estate. It also charges the defrauding of U.S. financial institutions of more than $165 million in connection with the purchase and refinancing of those properties. A later indictment charges an additional $77 million was obtained from the Philippines and the banks.

The Marcoses also are charged with participating in a scheme to buy a New York City apartment and its contents, known as the "Samuels collection" for $5.9 million.

PORTLAND, OR (APRIL 3) UPI - Commercial Securities (USA) Ltd. has filed for bankruptcy, capping more than a year of financial trouble for the real estate company that owns several office buildings in downtown Portland.

The company filed for Chapter 11 reorganization in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Portland late Friday, listing assets of more than $32.5 million and liabilities of almost $36 million.

The subsidiary of Auckland, New Zealand-based Commercial Securities Ltd. has been trying to sell its downtown Portland office properties since last summer. Attorney Ernest Bonyhadi, representing the company, said the bankruptcy should not interfere with the sales effort.

Bonyhadi said Commercial Securities (USA) took the bankruptcy route to protect itself from a judgment obtained by David Davies, former head of the New Zealand company.

A corporation controlled by Davies, Parkview Holdings (Oregon) Ltd., advanced $640,000 to Commercial Securities (USA). Davies claimed the loan was in default and filed a foreclosure suit last October in Multnomah County Circuit Court.

Last month, Davies obtained a judgment for almost $700,000 covering the loan balance and accumulated interest. Davies' judgment essentially was a lien that Commercial Securities (USA) would have had to pay off as its buildings are sold.

"It was either cut a deal with him or go into Chapter 11 in order to liquidate in an orderly manner," Bonyhadi said. Now Davies is in line with other unsecured creditors for a share of what is left after mortgages are paid off, said Portland attorney Ken Novack, who represented Parkview.

Commercial Securities spent $31.5 million to acquire the older office buildings during an 18-month span starting in late 1986. Bonyadhi said none of the buildings has been sold and none is in escrow.

The company's troubles became known in January 1989 when Italian International Bank, an English financial concern, filed suit against the New Zealand company, claiming Commercial Securities (USA) defaulted on a $20 million loan. The suit was settled last summer.

Commercial Securities has had ongoing problems due to a downturn in the real estate market. A consortium of lenders, mainly Australian and New Zealand banks, took control of the company in February 1989.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (APRIL 3) UPI - The chief of the Christian Lebanese Forces militia Tuesday openly recognized Elias Hrawi as president of Lebanon, apparently intending to tighten the isolation of rival Gen. Michel Aoun.

''A solution in Lebanon lies in the recognition of President Hrawi as head of state'' militia leader Samir Geagea said in a statement published by the east Beirut-based Ad Diyar newspaper.

Meanwhile, security sources said the two opposing forces loyal to Aoun and Geagea appeared poised for more violence as troops and militiamen were seen beefing up fortifications along frontlines in east Beirut and the mountainous district of Kesrouwane northeast of the city.

It was the first time Geagea, whose 10,000 militiamen have been engaged in ferocious warfare with Aoun's 15,000-strong army since Jan. 31, has publicly recognized last year's election of Hrawi.

The militia leader also expressed readiness to negotiate the peace accord that was worked out in Taif, Saudi Arabia, last October by the Parliament.

Geagea's stand, observers said, puts further pressures on Aoun, who has been shunned by most of the country's political and militia forces.

Aoun rebuffed the Taif agreement on grounds it did not ensure a speedy and complete withdrawal of Syria's 35,000 troops sent to stop the sectarian wars that have torn the country apart since 1975.

The 54-year-old general - who is also a Maronite Christian - has waged a bloody war against the Christian militia after accusing Geagea of implicitly backing the Taif accord.

''Geagea is the cause of the inter-Christian and inter-Lebanese conflicts '' Aoun said in an interview with Ad Diyar that was also published Tuesday. ''He cannot take part in any solution.''

Aoun said his rival has ''a big record in the northern, eastern and southern areas in addition to his personal record.''

In 1978, Geagea and several gunmen stormed the residence of former President Suleiman Franjieh in the northern town of Ehden, killing Franjieh's son Tony, his wife and 2-year-old daughter and 31 others. Geagea also commanded bloody battles in the Shouf mountains against Druze militiamen in 1983 that included random killings of women and children and led to the driving out of all Christians from the region southeast of Beirut.

''Can any one believes that Geagea wants to participate in the building of the state and dissolve his militia?'' Aoun said.

The clear political stand by Geagea followed reports that Aoun has recently sent letters to the Arab League, which sponsored the Taif accord, calling for fresh activity by Arab governments to resolve the Lebanese crisis.

The Kuwaiti Al Qabas newspaper last week said Aoun expressed readiness in these letters to recognize the Taif accord without pre-conditions. Aoun did not emphatically deny the report later.

''After the two rivals failed to improve their stands through military means, they have resorted again to diplomacy to try gain political cards '' an independent analyst said.

The rivals engaged in a particularly vicious battle last week, killing more than 50 people and adding to the massive destruction in the 310-square-mile enclave.

More than 900 people have been killed and 2,820 have been wounded since the violence for the control of the Christian region started.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - Bank Brussels Lambert of Belgium said Tuesday it was setting up a new aircraft lease company with International Aircraft Services, based in Ireland.

The Brussels-based bank, which ranks among the world's 100 largest with assets of about $50 billion, said it was setting up the company with its airline partner Airlease Finance Ltd to be based in Shannon, Ireland.

International Aircraft Services, also based in Shannon, already owns Shannonair, another aircraft leasing company.

''The new company plans the acquisition of $500 million of commercial jet aircraft in the near future,'' the bank said without disclosing the type of passenger jets it will acquire.

''The joint venture company intends to expand its portfolio significantly to meet growing demand for aircraft on operating lease to airlines,'' the bank said.

It estimated that ''demand by world airlines for aircraft on operating lease will exceed $100 billion by the end of the century.''

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (APRIL 3) UPI - Philippine's military will help beef up security at the U.S. and Japanese Embassies in response to communist guerrilla threats against American and Japanese personnel, the country's military chief said Tuesday.

But Gen. Renato de Villa told a news conference it is possible the rebels would indiscriminately attack soldiers and government workers who travel outside the embassy compounds.

Romulo Kintanar, the commander of the 19,000-member communist New People's Army, said in a statement Sunday that the rebels ''will certainly intensify attacks against U.S. imperialism as long as it increases intervention and control of our country.''

The NPA, the armed wing of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines has been battling the Manila government for 21 years.

Kintanar said the guerrillas would not target American civilians but aim for U.S. and Japanese personnel working in the Philippines.

De Villa said the Philippine military was working with Japanese and U.S. officials to tighten security at the embassies before the threat.

''We share information gathering and improved the physical security coverage of specific personalities who can be the subject of attacks,'' he said.

''Our difficulty, however, lies in the fact that they can be indiscriminate for purposes of what they call delivering a political message.''

Communist guerrillas have been blamed for killing eight Americans - including three soldiers, one retired soldier and two civilians - in the past two years.

Officials at the U.S. Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Station, 50 miles north of Manila, last week restricted travel and forbid servicemen from visiting the capital except on official missions.

Kintanar said the guerrillas would target Japanese government workers because he had information that Japanese development aid was being used for Manila's counter-insurgency campaign and for projects that he said deprived farmers of their land and polluted the environment.

Also eight Philippine civilians and a militiaman attending a funeral wake were killed when guerrillas sprayed them with automatic gunfire Sunday in the central Philippine province of Antique, the military reported.

AMRITSAR, INDIA (APRIL 3) UPI - Two bombs planted by Sikh separatists exploded Tuesday in adjacent districts of the Punjab state, killing at least 38 people and injuring more than 75 others as Hindus across India celebrated a major religious festival, police said.

The second blast was by far the bloodiest of the two and ignited clashes between Sikhs and Hindus in Batala, 30 miles northeast of Amritsar, during which at least seven people were hurt, witnesses and police said.

Police were forced to fire tear gas and bullets to end the confrontations and imposed an indefinite curfew on the industrial city to prevent new outbreaks of unrest, witnesses and police said.

The bomb was wrapped in a package stowed on the rear rack of a bicycle that was abandoned outside a tea shop near Batala's congested main vegetable market, police said.

The device went off at about 3 p.m. as scores of Hindus marched by in a procession marking the birthday of Lord Rama, a major diety of the Hindu pantheon, police said.

At least 25 people were killed instantly and seven others died after being rushed for treatment to an Amritsar hospital, police and hospital officials said. Sixty other people were hospitalized with wounds, 41 in the Amritsar facility.

Angry relatives and friends of dead victims attacked medical officials of Batala's Civil Hospital, alleging that they failed to give proper treatment to the victims, police said.

They said the crowd first killed two police officials, who tried to disperse the crowd, and later attacked medical officials, killing two nurses.

''There was a huge blast and I fell down, feeling that something had hit me on my legs,'' recounted Ashok Kumar, a vegetable peddler who was taken to Amritsar with shrapnel wounds. ''When I looked around, I saw bodies lying here and there.''

''Afterward, there was a group clash and police opened fire after tear gas failed to control the mobs,'' he said.

Purnam Singh, a Sikh who was in the market buying cloth at the time of the blast, said he was attacked by Hindus and badly beaten.

In the earlier incident, a crude landmine planted by separatists exploded beneath a state-owned bus, killing the driver and a passenger and wounding at least 16 other people, police said.

Police said that attack occurred at 8:45 a.m. in the village of Tara Garh, about halfway between Amritsar and Batala.

The landmine consisted of explosives packed inside a box-like mousetrap that was buried in the middle of the road. Police said the device was set off by a battery as the bus passed over it, demolishing the front of the vehicle.

Police said the explosives were planted by the Babar Khalsa, a leading Sikh extremist group fighting since 1983 to create in Punjab the independent theocratic nation of ''Khalistan,'' or ''Land of the Pure.''

The group is known to specialize in bombings.

More than 7,000 people have died in extremist-related violence since 1983. The militants claim India's 16 million Sikhs need independence because of discrimination against by the Hindu-dominated central government.

The Press Trust of India said two police officers foiled an attempt Monday night by Sikh extremists to massacre passengers aboard a bus near the city of Meerut in Uttar Pradesh state, 40 miles northeast of New Delhi.

Five militants with automatic weapons forced the bus to a halt and climbed aboard, apparently planning to open fire on the 45 occupants.

The police officers fired at the extremists, sparking an exchange of bullets. One of the officers and a militant were killed and four people, including the bus conductor, were wounded, the Press Trust said.

The remaining extremists fled, leaving behind a Chinese-made assault rifle bearing an inscription that said it belonged to a member of the Khalistan Commando Force, a major underground separatist organization, the news agency reported.

It gave no further details.

Sikh militants have occassionally struck outside Punjab and police officials say a number have fled the state to hideouts in the northern Tehri region of Uttar Pradesh.

BEIJING (APRIL 3) UPI - Police briefly detained an American student for taking photographs at central Tiananmen Square Tuesday and confiscated his film, the student said, of what would be the second such incident in three days.

Extra police have been on duty at the square and around Beijing since the weekend amid official concern that upcoming sensitive dates and one-year anniversaries of last spring's pro-democracy movement could spark renewed unrest.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Sheridan Bell said embassy officials had made inquiries with the Chinese Foreign Ministry and the Beijing Public Security Bureau regarding Tuesday's incident. Public security officials did not immediately respond when asked to comment.

The 26-year-old student, an American studying law in Beijing who asked his name be withheld, told United Press International he was photographing uniformed police conducting drills outside a museum on the square's east side at mid-afternoon.

A woman plainclothes officer demanded he stop taking pictures, the student said. When he refused, a male plainclothes officer joined in and ''pushed me around, trying to take my camera,'' the student said.

The pair called uniformed officers who led the student to a police substation just off the square, where they confiscated his film and released him, the student said.

It was the second such incident in three days. Sunday, police at the square confiscated film of an American correspondent for a Hong Kong newspaper.

In both cases, police cited an apparently obscure regulation that bars photographing individuals without their permission.

Photography of military, police or virtually anything remotely sensitive was barred under martial law in Beijing, declared last May 20 before the violent crackdown on the pro-democracy protesters, but the martial law decree was lifted in mid-January.

HOLLYWOOD (APRIL 3) UPI - "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles," the film manefestation of the comic book, TV cartoon and toy phenomenon, broke springtime box-office records with a whopping $25.3 million take in its first week in release.

The special effects-enhanced story of four mutated, pizza-munching, crime-fighting terrapins broke the record for greatest non-summer, non-Thanksgiving weekend ticket sales. The old record, $17.1 million, was set just last month by the debut of "The Hunt for Red October."

The youthful-oriented "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles," made possible on screen by the magic of Muppet creator Jim Henson, registered a $12,661 per-screen average.

Dropping to second place after only a single week at the top of the rankings was "Pretty Woman," the romantic story of big shot businessman (Richard Gere) playing Henry Higgins to a Hollywood hooker (Julia Roberts).

"Pretty Woman" lost 11 percent at the turnstiles but still raked in $12.4 million on 1,538 screens for an average of $8,109. In two weeks it has grossed $28.3 million.

"The Hunt for Red October," starring Sean Connery as a defecting Russian missile sub commander and the biggest new hit of 1990 so far, sank 28 percent to third place with $6.5 million. In five weeks it has garnered $76.5 million.

Winning four Oscars did wonders for "Driving Miss Daisy," up 41 percent from the previous week with a gross of $5.1 million. The combination of Academy Awards, including best picture and best actress (Jessica Tandy), helped keep the tender drama in fourth place for the second week running. In 16 weeks dating back to 1989 it has amassed $82 million.

The Oscar for best actor voted to Daniel Day-Lewis also sparked interest in "My Left Foot." After 21 weeks in release it climbed into the top ten - at ninth place - with a gross of $1.5 million and a total of $10.6 million.

The only other new picture aside from "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" to crack the top ten was No. 5 "Opportunity Knocks," marking the debut of Dana Carvey, perhaps best known at The Church Lady on "Saturday Night Live." "Opportunity Knocks" failed to find many people opening the door. It grossed only $3.5 million on 1,275 screens.

Worth noting: "Born on the Fourth of July," which did not live up to expectations at the Oscars, dropped out of the top ten for the first time in 15 weeks.

"Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" - the film was wisely held for release until most kids were out of school for spring break - helped the collective box-office in the United States and Canada to shoot ahead of record-setting 1989's sizzling pace.

So far this year the total gross is $986.9 million versus $980.3 million for 1988. All 23,000 theaters in North America grossed $88 million as against $71.2 million for the comparable week in 1989. The top ten, last week's gross, total gross, weeks in release:

1. "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles," $25.3 million, 1 week.
2. "Pretty Woman," $12.4 million, $28.3 million, 2 weeks.
3. "The Hunt for Red October," $6.5 million, $76.5 million, 5 weeks.
4. "Driving Miss Daisy," $5.1 million, $82 million, 16 weeks.
5. "Opportunity Knocks," $3.5 million, 1 week.
6. "Joe Versus the Volcano," $3.2 million, $30.7 million, 4 weeks.
7. "Nuns on the Run," $2.14 million, $4.2 million, 3 weeks.
8. "House Party," $2.13 million, $16.3 million, 4 weeks.
9. "My Left Foot," $1.5 million, $10.6 million, 21 weeks.
10. "Lord of the Flies," $1.4 million, $10.5 million, 3 weeks.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - White House officials Tuesday confirmed that the Soviet ambassador to the United States, Yuriy Dubinin, will be replaced this summer by the Soviet Union's deputy foreign minister, Aleksander Bessmertnykh.

The officials said no date was set for the transfer but it was expected to take place following the summit meeting in late June in Washington between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Dubinin, a former ambassador to Madrid and former interpreter of French, is expected to be named ambassador to Paris.

The change, according to Soviet officials, reflects the new style in Soviet diplomacy rather than any dissatisfaction with Dubinin's performance in Washington. In his nearly four years in Washington, Dubinin has set a new friendly style in line with Gorbachev's perestroika and glasnost outreach policies.

He has held frequent press conferences, and has traveled extensively through the United States, selling the ''new thinking'' of the Soviet government under Gorbachev and mixes and mingles on the Washington social scene.

A precise date for the summit meeting was expected to be announced later this week when Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnaze meets in Washington with Secretary of State James Baker, starting Wednesday.

Shevardnadze will call on the president at the White House Friday morning.

The specific date of the summit has been mainly left to the Soviets to decide, although U.S. official have been anxious to nail it down and to get fullscale preparations under way.

There have been varying reports on the length of Gorbachev's stay in the United States. Most recently White House officials have indicated he may be in the country for about five days.

Bessmertnykh speaks some English, is a career Foreign Service diplomat, and has also specialized in the Middle East.

The change is expected to be announced officially to the State Department this week during the talks between Baker and Shevardnadze.

Under diplomatic formality the Soviets will ask Washington for ''agreement '' or approval, for their choice. Since Bessmerthnykh is well known as a member of the Soviet negotiating team in some 30 ministerial sessions with American secretaries of state, no problems are expected.

NORFOLK, VA (APRIL 3) UPI - A complicated legal battle over sunken treasure worth hundreds of millions of dollars began Tuesday to determine who owns more than a ton of gold discovered off the Atlantic Coast. The case pits an Ohio group of scientists turned treasure hunters, who brought up the booty last summer, against a slew of inusrance companies.

Lawyers for the Columbus-America Discovery Group are seeking to show the gold cannot be claimed by insurers unless they can prove they had covered what has been recovered.

The case hit some rocky legal shoals in its opening moments as a federal judge had to consider two motions to intervene, one from Columbia University and one from a private interest. An attorney for the university argued its researchers provided sonar work crucial to the treasure discovery.

Attorney Robert Trafford, representing Columbus-America, called the efforts by opposing attorneys "a reverse oceanographic discovery." He charged the opposing parties with trying to find treasure in court documents and not at sea.

Engineer Thomas Thompson, a part of the Columbus-America Discovery Group, estimates that the find to be worth $100 million to $400 million. Lawyers counter it could be worth as much as $1 billion because a new chemical cleaning process brought many of the gold coins up in mint condition, which wildly inflates the estimated worth.

Trafford argued not only must insurance companies prove they covered the 1857 wreck, he says they must also prove they did not abandon any future claim to the side-wheel steamship, which sank in a hurricane some 160 miles off the North Carolina coast. The steamship was carrying prospectors and a major gold shipment from California to New York.

The Columbus-America group discovered the wreck in 8,000 feet of water last summer and brought up more than a ton of gleaming gold. The group, which has spent more than $10 million, believes two more tons of gold may still be down with the Central America.

U.S. District Judge Richard Kellam is sitting in what is called admiralty or maritime court to hear the case. Two years ago, Kellam granted the Columbus-America Discovery Group exclusive rights to the shipwreck after its members brought coal and wood from the ship into federal court, showing they had located the vessel. That order was later challenged by the insurance companies.

If Columbus-America wins ownership of the gold, it will be divided between Thompson, members of his group and 161 limited partners - most of them from the Columbus, Ohio area - who put up the $12 million for the search.

The gold was brought into Norfolk last fall, and after briefly being displayed for the public, was taken by armored car to an undisclosed location.

(APRIL 3) UPI - The government reports that its index of leading economic indicators dipped one percent in February. The Commerce Department report says the index was led downward by a plunge in the number of building permits. The downturn follows revised increases of two-tenths of one percent in January and four-tenths in December. But analysts anticipated the drop after an earlier government report showed a decline in February building permits.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Communications lawyer Thomas Root, a private pilot who survived a gunshot wound and bizarre six-hour flight down the East Coast that ended with a crash into the Atlantic, pleaded innocent Tuesday to fraud charges involving his business.

Root, 37, of Alexandria, Va., is charged with defrauding five prospective radio stations while representing them with the Federal Communications Commission from June 1987 through September 1989.

In a 33-count indictment handed down last month, Root also is charged with trying to obstruct a federal probe of his Washington law firm, Thomas L. Root, P.C. Root pleaded innocent to all charges and was released on a $200,000 unsecured bond.

U.S. District Judge John Penn scheduled an April 23 hearing to set a trial date after Root's attorney, Eugene Propper, said there may be a conflict of interest in his representing Root.

Prosecutor David Eisenberg asked that Root be held on bond, telling Penn of weapons found in the hangar where Root kept his plane and claiming Root allegedly bragged that he could fly under radar and not be detected.

Eisenberg called those factors "highly indicative of someone who may take things into his hands he can't quite muster." Penn refused the request but told Root to turn over his passport within 24 hours.

Prosecutors contend Root defrauded five prospective FM radio stations - some of which planned to broadcast Christian messages - after they hired him to help them legitimately obtain government licensing to begin broadcasting. None of the five ever received their broadcast licenses.

Root pleaded innocent to 20 counts of wire and mail fraud; seven counts of filing false documents with the FCC; four counts of using altered or counterfeit federal documents; and one count each of forgery and obstruction of a grand jury investigation. If convicted of all counts, Root could face a sentence of 200 years in prison and more than $8 million in fines.

The indictment against Root does not specifically mention his bizarre flight last summer, which gained him international fame. But the 1,000-mile trek from the nation's capital to waters off the Bahamas took place just two days after Root allegedly delivered a bad check for $50,000 to one of the five prospective radio stations.

On July 13, 1989, Root - a husband with three children - left Washington National Airport alone aboard his Cessna 210 on a flight scheduled for Rocky Mount, N.C. But shortly after takeoff, Root told a radio control tower he was experiencing chest pains and put his plane on automatic pilot.

Military planes intercepted the small plane near the Virginia-North Carolina border and saw Root slumped over the controls. Five hours later, the plane ran out of gas and spiraled into the Atlantic at about 105 mph, sinking in 6,000 feet of water 14 miles east of Eleuthera Island.

Root climbed from the sinking plane and swam to rescuers. He was later found to have suffered a gunshot wound to the stomach, which he attributes to a handgun he kept on board firing on the plane's impact. Gun experts have said that scenario is highly unlikely.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - First lady Barbara Bush, who has undergone radiation treatment for Graves' disease, said Tuesday her condition is better and she no longer suffers from double vision.

''Last week was the first week I was seeing without double vision,'' she told reporters at the White House.

Graves' disease is a thyroid condition that makes a person's eyes bulge and affects the vision. In February the first lady underwent 10 days of treatment at Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

''I think the radiation worked,'' Mrs. Bush said at a ceremony where she accepted the 12th edition of ''The Presidents of the United States of America'' and the sixth edition of ''The First Ladies.''

Robert Breeden, president of the White House Historical Association, presented the books to the first lady. The association published the books.

The first lady, who was wearing a white and black patterned two-piece silk dress and red shoes, complained that much had been written about ''my health stories made up.'' She said she wondered where the information came from.

White House physician Dr. Burton Lee said that the first lady is ''getting better every day.''

''She is getting better all the time ... slow but steady,'' Burton said.

Mrs. Bush has been suffering from her thyroid condition since Inauguration Day. She has had teary, bloodshot eyes and double vision, which persisted even after her hyperactive thyroid was eliminated with radiation medication.

She has been on a regular dosage of prednisone, a form of cortisone, but she indicated that the improvement in her vision possibly eliminates the need for surgery. Surgery had been contemplated as one of the remaining options to clear up her ailment.

During her brief chat with reporters, Mrs. Bush also scoffed at a Newsweek magazine report that President Bush can be found in the upstairs family quarters watching the evening news and evaluating the news anchors.

''That's baloney,'' she said emphatically. ''I've never heard him evaluate the newscasts.''

A crowd of excited tourists gathered to watch the ceremony, and later Mrs. Bush autographed several copies of the book with ''best wishes,'' which were handed out to a few lucky visitors.

The Bushes' English spaniel, Millie, came down the stairway, took one look at the crowd then darted back upstairs, watching through the bars of the balcony before retreating to the family quarters.

''Sorry, she doesn't like tourists, but I do,'' Mrs. Bush said.

GENEVA, Switzerland (APRIL 3) UPI - The United States told the GATT Council Tuesday that it had settled a dispute with Seoul on South Korean restrictions on imports of American beef.

Australia and New Zealand at once complained that they had so far been unable to reach similar arrangements with South Korea.

Korean delegates said Seoul would hold new talks later this month with those two countries.

South Korea lost a dispute one year ago with the United States, Australia and New Zealand who complained that restrictions on beef imnports violated free trade provisions of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Citing domestic difficulties, however, South Korea failed to implement the dispute panel's ruling despite talks with the three countries.

GATT spokesman David Woods said Washington informed the GATT Council Tuesday that it has now been able to reach agreement with South Korea.

Woods said the United States, without going into detail, said Seoul agreed to annual increases in imports of American beef as well as direct contacts between U.S. producers and Korean customers.

Australia and New Zealand protested that South Korea did not accept similar arrangements with them at talks held in February and March.

South Korea replied that it would hold new talks with them in the week starting April 23, Woods told reporters.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - ABC broke NBC's 23-week winning streak in the ratings race last week, with best performance in a supporting role going to the Academy Awards broadcast, it was reported Tuesday.

The Oscar show was the most watched program of the week, earning a 27.9 rating and a 48 share, with ABC estimating it attracted 70 million viewers for all or part of the broadcast.

Last year the Oscars also were the No. 1 show with more impressive numbers - a 29.8 rating and a 50 share - but they were not enough to put the network in first place for the week.

The lowest-rated Oscars ever were on ABC in 1986, when the show had a 27.3 rating and a 43 share. ABC has has been carrying the Academy Awards since 1961. The highest-rated Academy Awards were on NBC in 1956, when the show had a 46.7 rating and an 82 share.

ABC also had extra help last week from "The Barbara Walters Special," in sixth place, and the ABC Sunday movie, "Down And Out In Beverly Hills," tied for 16th, as well as "America's Funniest Home Videos" in third place and "The Wonder Years" in tenth.

This is the second time this season that ABC has knocked NBC out of first place - the first time was last October when ABC broke NBC's phenomenal 68-week winning streak with the help of two World Series games.

The average three-network share for the week, which usually hovers around 62, soared to 67, the best showing for the networks since last October and the World Series.

Both NBC and ABC had new shows that look like winners. Carol Burnett's "Carol & Company" came in ninth in a special preview on Saturday, a night that NBC owns, and "Bagdad Cafe" with Jean Stapleton and Whoopi Goldberg ranked 18th, giving CBS its highest rating in the time period this season and helping the network win Friday night.

"Sugar & Spice," which followed "Bagdad Cafe," tied for 41st place. ABC's "Equal Justice" aired as a two-hour movie and tied for 38th, then premiered in its regular time period and came in 45th. Robert Mitchum's "A Family For Joe" premiered on NBC in its regular time period and came in 44th and "FM" returned to NBC and tied for 52nd.

In the Sunday movie race, which went to ABC's "Down and Out In Beverly Hills," NBC's "The Girl Who Came Between Them" tied for 33rd and the CBS repeat of "Too Young The Hero" was 55th.

On a day-by-day basis, NBC was No. 1 on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday nights, while ABC took Monday, Tuesday and Sunday, usually the CBS night. CBS took Friday, usually an ABC night.

ABC won the ratings race for the week ending April 1 with a 14.8 rating and a 25 share, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co. NBC slipped to second with a 13.3 rating and a 22 share, while CBS was third with an 11.7 rating and a 20 share.

The 28-week-old season-to-date ratings show NBC with a 14.7 rating and a 24 share, ABC with a 13.0 rating and a 21 share, and CBS with a 12.2 rating and a 20 share.

In the evening news ratings, ABC's "World News Tonight" with Peter Jennings continued in first place with a 10.6 rating and a 20 share. "CBS Evening News" with Dan Rather seesawed back into second place with a 9.4 rating and an 18 share, while "NBC Nightly News" with Tom Brokaw was close behind with a 9.3 rating and an 18 share.

Each ratings point represents about 921,000 households and a share is the percentage of TV sets tuned to a particular show. The top 10 programs for the week ending Sunday, April 1, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co., were:

1. Academy Awards (ABC)
2. Cheers (NBC)
3. America's Funniest Home Videos (ABC)
4. The Cosby Show (NBC)
5. Golden Girls (NBC)
6. Barbara Walters Special (ABC)
7. A Different World (NBC)
8. Unsolved Mysteries (NBC)
9. Carol & Company (NBC)
10. Wonder Years (ABC)

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - An international Jewish group sent a sharp protest to church leaders Tuesday, criticizing a forthcoming meeting between Pope John Paul II and Yasser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The letter from the International Jewish Committee on Interreligious Consultations, which officially relates to the Vatican, said the meeting this week would be ''harmful'' to the process of rebuilding Catholic-Jewish relations after controversy over the convent at Auschwitz and John Paul's meeting with Austrian President Kurt Waldheim.

''Yasser Arafat is the chairman of the PLO - a terrorist organization that has not yet rescinded its covenant calling for the destruction of Israel - that has tried to block Soviet Jews from coming to Israel and has threatened those countries whose airlines are cooperating in the airlift of Soviet Jews to Israel,'' said Seymour Reich, chairman of the IJCIC.

In the letter addressed to Archbishop Edward Cassidy, head of the Vatican's Commission on Religious Relations with the Jews, Reich said the meeting would be ''a serious setback to the cause of mutual understanding and respect which we have both sought to achieve through our common dialogue.''

''Beyond our substantive objection to this meeting - which we view as compromising the moral stature of the pope - it raises the most serious procedual questions,'' Reich said.

Catholic-Jewish relations, always prickly and fragile, have suffered a number of setbacks in recent years.

During the protracted 1987 controversy over John Paul's meeting with Waldheim, under fire for his role in Nazi atrocities during World War II, official contact between the Vatican and Jewish organizations ground to a halt and Jewish leaders in the United States threatened to boycott a meeting with the pontiff during his 1987 trip to America.

As a result of that controversy, the Vatican and the IJCIC signed a joint agreement in September 1987 aimed at avoiding such crises. Rather than the specifics of this week's meeting - John Paul has met with Arafat before - it was the Vatican's apparent failure to use the 1987 agreement's procedures that promoted the protest Tuesday.

In the joint communique, the Vatican promised to be sensitive to ''Jewish concerns'' and pledged to put in place a ''special mechanism'' so that ''neither side would be taken by surprise in areas of obvious concern.''

Instead, however, Reich told Cassidy that Jewish leaders learned of the forthcoming Arafat-John Paul meeting through news reports.

''We must, therefore, candidly state that we view this development as not only substantively harmful to the cause of dialogue, but wholly inconsistent with the agreed upon procedural mechanism designed to avoid such tension,'' Reich's letter stated.

LONDON (APRIL 3) UPI - Norman Tebbit, a former chairman of the Conservative Party, has warned Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to expect a rebellion in her party if she gives 225,000 Hong Kong people the right to live in Britain, a newspaper said Tuesday.

The government is scheduled to release on Wednesday full details of the British Nationality Hong Kong Bill, which is aimed at encouraging people in key professions to stay in Hong Kong when Beijing takes over in 1997.

It has been said the legislation would enable about 225,000 Hong Kong residents to live in Britain, mostly because they have served the colonial government and could face retribution from Chinese communist authorities.

Officials maintain most would use the right as an insurance policy if things change drastically under Chinese rule, but would otherwise stay. Hong Kong has suffered the departure of many skilled personnel, and observers say its economy will be in jeopardy if the immigration flow is not stemmed.

The Financial Times said Tebbit and two other Conservative members had written a letter calling on their party colleagues to vote against the legislation, which will be debated April 19.

It quoted the letter, sent to about 300 legislators, as saying the plane to ''anchor'' essential workers in the colony will fail because Chinese authorities would treat those with British passports as aliens and deal with them harshly.

The letter argues most passport holders will emigrate to Britain. Tebbit has said he does not believe Hong Kong people will be able to integrate into British society.

''To suggest or to reinforce fears that Hong Kong will not be successful either side of the 1997 divide by giving some of the most able and skilled a passport to leave undermines the determination to make new Hong Kong work and the confidence in its new institutions,'' the letter said.

Tebbit told Thatcher the bill will spark a backbench rebellion because at least 80 members will oppose it.

The letter said granting passports to a select few will affirm Britain's lack of confidence in the 1984 treaty it signed with China that pledges to maintain Hong Kong's capitalist lifestyle for 50 years after in 1997.

Confidence in Chinese assurances of ''one country, two systems'' has waned since Beijing last June brutally crushed a pro-democracy movement.

Tebbit is a fervent supporter of Thatcher but on Friday caused a furor by saying he would be willing to stand for prime minister if she ever resigned.

He became party chairman in 1985 but resigned in 1987 because he wanted to spend more time with his wife, who was severely injured in the bombing by the Irish republican Army of a hotel in Brighton, 60 miles south of London.

KARACHI, PAKISTAN (APRIL 3) UPI - A strike to protest a hike in gasoline prices brought Karachi to a standstill Tuesday in the first such successful demonstration against the government of Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto in her southern stronghold.

Shops, businesses and educational institutions closed and virtually all private and public vehicles stayed off the roads in the one-day protest called by organizations representing taxi and truck owners.

Government offices in the southern port, Pakistan's largest city, were unable to function as employees failed to turn up for work.

There were no reports of violence or attempts to enforce the strike, unlike in most previous such protests in the city.

The action was called to protest a hike of almost 16 percent in the price of gasoline announced by the government last week, a move strongly criticized by business and opposition leaders.

The government has said the increase was necessary because of a rise in crude oil prices, but the increase is believed to be a condition set by the International Monetary Fund for approval of further loans to Pakistan.

Karachi and surrounding Sind Province has been wracked by ethnic violence during the past few years that has left hundreds dead and many more wounded. The unrest has continued unabated since Bhutto came to power in December 1988.

LONDON (APRIL 3) UPI - Stock prices rebounded Tuesday on the London International stock exchange in moderate trading boosted by the sharp 2.7 percent recovery in Tokyo and a stronger British pound.

The key Financial Times 100-stock index, which tumbled 26.3 points Monday, closed up 19.1 points at 2,240.7. The narrower top 30 industrial average gained 13.2 points to 1,761.3.

Volume amounted to 542 million shares, compared with 527 million traded

Monday.

Analysts said the improved performance in Tokyo helped soothe nerves and send stocks into the plus column.

In Tokyo, the key Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which suffered its second-worst drop in history Monday, recovered 757.65 points, or 2.7 percent of its value, to close at 28,759.72.

On the London Foreign Exchange, the British pound reached $1.6335, up from $1.6305 Monday when the British currency was depressed by weekend riots over the new poll tax.

Analysts noted that remarks by British Chancellor of the Exchequer John Majors that there will be a ''bumpy ride'' before the government can get inflation securely on a downward trend, was not enough to dampen investor enthusiasm for bargain stocks.

Among the most widely traded stocks, in the pharmaceutical sector Reckitt & Coleman surged 46 cents to $18.70 and Wellcome PLC gained 6 cents to $11.20.

Cadbury Schweppes gained 21 cents to $5.38 after announcing a distribution deal with Perrier.

Mecca Leisure Group tumbled 50 cents to $1.26 a share as analysts downgraded their forecasts of the group.

Arms manufacturer, Astra Holdings eased 5 cents to 27 cents a share following the announcement of a Ministry of Defence investigation into the company.

In a weak banking sector, Lloyds Bank eased 6 cents to $4.72.

Among international issues, Glaxo Holdings gained 25 cents to $12.63 and Imperial Chemical Industries climbed 32 cents to $17.55.

Elsewhere in Europe, prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange were sharply higher in active trading.

The blue-chip German Stock Index, which plummeted 37.25 points Monday, closed up 37.03 points, or 1.9 percent, at 1,968.33, just below the record high of 1,968.55 set Friday.

MADRID (APRIL 3) UPI - Spanish police captured a French citizen who was driving a car loaded with nearly 700 pounds of explosives near the 1992 World's Fair site, police said Tuesday.

Authorities said two police officers were wounded by shots the man fired after he leaped out of the car, which was stopped Monday at a road block outside Seville near the fair site.

Police said the man, believed to be a member of a Basque separatist group, identified himself as Jean-Dominique Feron, but authorities surmised that the name was an alias.

The car carrying the explosives was a Renault 14 with false Madrid license plates that had been stolen in San Sebastian in December, police said.

Police later found two other cars with false plates that apparently were to be used as getaway cars after the explosion. One of the cars also carried explosives, as well as small arms and hand grenades, police said.

Officials in Madrid said they had had information for several weeks that Basques seeking independence from Spain planned some sort of terrorist act at one of the three sites in Spain at which international events are scheduled for 1992 - the summer Olympics in Barcelona, the 500th anniversary of Spain's discovery of the New World in Madrid and the fair in Seville.

LAHORE, PAKISTAN (APRIL 3) UPI - A powerful explosion in a crowded market Tuesday killed four people and injured 22 others, police said.

They said the device was hidden in a cardboard box left by a customer at a fruit store in the old walled section of the northeastern city of Lahore.

It exploded at about 4 p.m., destroying the store, damaging surrounding shops and blowing a huge crater in the ground, police said. They said the owner of the fruit store, his brother and two passersbys were killed instantly and 22 other people were injured, nine of them seriously,

Police said they suspected sabotage but would not speculate on who may have been responsible.

Lahore has so far been largely unaffected by violence linked to ethnic tensions and the civil war in neighboring Afghanistan that has hit other Pakistani cities in the past several years.

MATERA, Italy (APRIL 3) UPI - Police raided a mountain farmhouse in southern Italy early Tuesday and discovered a sophisticated underground Mafia hideout containing weapons and guarded by an electronic alarm system and dogs.

In the early morning raid by 40 paramilitary national police, officers arrested Riccardo Modeo, 33 and his brother Gianfranco, 30, described by police as suspected zone bosses of the Ndrangheta, the local equivalent of the Sicilian Mafia.

The brothers had been on the run since last summer and on Dec. 22 were sentenced in their absence to 22 years jail each for a gangland murder, investigators said.

They said police became suspicious by the presence armored limousines in the barren region around the village of Montescaglioso in extreme southern Italy.

Police raiding the farm first found farmer Pasquale Balza, 29, three women and five children. Under the house police found two underground rooms containing items made of gold, radio receiver-transmitters, bulletproof vests and other equipment.

Some 100 yards away, police found a trapdoor hidden by bushes that led to another underground hideout where the Modeo brothers were sleeping. They shouted ''We surrender'' as the armed police entered.

Inside, police seized weapons and explosives including four sub-machine guns, four pistols, a large quantity of ammunition, 66 pounds of TNT explosive and detonators and fuses. They also seized fake identity cards, driving licenses and around $8,000 in cash.

Investigators said the compound was protected by an electronic alarm system and guarded by trained dogs.

The raid was the latest success against fugitive Mafia suspects in southern Italy and Sicily. Saturday police arrested four men wanted for Mafia crimes in a similar hideout in the Aspromonte mountain area of Calabria. Sunday they arrested Giuseppe Lucchese, 29, an alleged Mafia hit-man accused of 33 gangland murders, in a luxury apartment in Palermo, Sicily.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (APRIL 3) UPI - At least 200,000 Moslems chanting anti-Indian slogans gathered at a prayer ground Tuesday to mourn the death of a militant leader killed last week during an encounter with security forces, witnesses said.

The mourners remained peaceful, however, throughout an hour-long service for Ashfaq Majid Wani, who died Friday when a grenade he was preparing to throw at security forces exploded in his hand after he was shot.

Meanwhile, another of the five people shot late Monday by security forces died Tuesday in a Srinagar hospital, bringing to three the death toll in the latest flare-up of violence.

Police and hospital sources said the five people were hit by gunfire from a Central Reserve Police Force patrol at about 11 p.m. Monday outside a mosque in Baramulla, 30 miles northwest of Srinagar.

Two people died at the scene and the other three were taken to a hospital in Srinagar.

Police did not say what provoked the incident and provided no further details.

In Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state, 400 miles north of New Delhi, curfew was relaxed Tuesday from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Most businesses remained closed, however, to mourn the death of Wani, a local commander of the separatist Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front, police and witnesses said.

Witnesses said tens of thousands of people visited the Eid Gah prayer ground on the outskirts of Srinagar throughout the morning and that by 1 p.m. at least 200,000 people had gathered for Wani's memorial services.

With thousands of security forces stationed nearby, the crowd recited verses from the Koran and chanted ''We want freedom'' and ''Down with India.''

The memorial services lasted about one hour and the crowd dispersed peacefully.

A militant-led pro-independence movement has been underway for the past two years, but the drive erupted into an insurrection in mid-January when security forces opened fire on demonstrators.

More than 180 people have died since then, most of them protesters shot by security forces.

Militants pressing for an independent Kashmir say a separate nation is necessary because the interests of the area's 3 million Moslems have been consistently neglected by the Hindu-dominated New Delhi government.

New Delhi has deployed tens of thousands of troops and paramilitary forces throughout Kashmir, but has failed to crush the independence drive.

PARIS (APRIL 3) UPI - The French aluminium and packaging group Pechiney SA, which benefited from high aluminum prices and strong demand, Tuesday reported a 1989 net profit of $579 million, a 67 percent increase compared with the previous year.

Pechiney, which acquired American Can Co. for $3.3 billion in 1988, posted $15.46 billion in revenues last year, a 72 percent advance from the $8.97 billion recorded in 1988.

But Pechiney President Jean Gandois cautioned that a drop in aluminum prices during the past few months is likely to result in a reduction of operating margins this year from 1989's $1.59 billion. Franc-dollar exchange rates would also have an impact on results, he said.

Despite what he claimed was the successful financial integration of American Can and a $1.85 billion reduction in Pechiney's debt, Gandois said the French government-owned company did not envisage any major acquisitions in the immediate future.

''Our debt is still somewhat excessive and it would be prudent to further reduce it,'' he told a press conference. Gandois added that any major expansion would necessarily depend on the attitude of the French government.

The American Can acquisition, which was accompanied by a major financial and political scandal that included as-yet unproven charges that some of President Francois Mitterrand's friends had been involved in insider trading, increased the group's debt to $6.25 billion from $2.5 billion.

Pechiney, whose debt was reduced to $4.84 billion last year through the use of cash reserves and a $646 million capital increase last April, said it expects to cut debt to $4.37 billion this year.

Group Pechiney International, the affiliate created at the time of the American Can acquisition, reported $220 million in net consolidated profit last year on revenues of $8.38 billion.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - A House panel voted Tuesday to guarantee farmers a higher loan rate for grain crops in the new farm policy law and to raise subsidy rates whenever large amounts of land must be idled.

Sponsors said each idea would give farmers a boost by contributing to higher farm income. The proposals were adopted by the House Agriculture grains subcommittee, which hopes to complete work on its portions of the farm bill Thursday.

The farm bill would succeed the 1985 farm policy law, which expires this fall. Under it, loan rates and the so-called target prices - a key factor in determining subsidy payments - were reduced with the goal of making U.S. commodities competitive on the world market.

Subcommittee members tentatively agreed last week that target prices should be indexed in coming years to reflect production expenses and that any increase in government supports be directed to family size farms. That change was estimated to cost $5.7 billion over five years.

Rep. Jill Long, D-Ind., persuaded subcommittee members to adopt her amendment to set loan rates at 85 percent of the average price the preceding five years. It would mean loan rates that would be 30 cents a bushel higher for wheat and about 20 cents higher for corn than the current formula.

''Without additional (federal) cost, it allows the farmer to borrow at a higher percentage ... which gives the farmer the option of better marketing,'' Long said. ''If farmers get a better price, deficiency payments (subsidies) could go down.''

The language under consideration by the subcommittee still would give the Agriculture Department the authority to reduce loan rates by 5 percent if stockpiles were becoming too large.

Agriculture Department officials said Long's amendment would add $132 million to government spending over the next five years. Congressional analysts said it would save $291 million. A proposal to set loan rates at the market price was narrowly defeated.

Subcommittee members adopted an amendment by Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont., to require the Agriculture Department to increase target prices whenever farmers are required to idle a sizable portion of their land in order to get farm program benefits.

Marlenee said his amendment would assure farmers of a basic level of income and prevent the government from trying to save money by demanding unfairly large setasides.

Deputy Agriculture Undersecretary John Campbell said the Marlenee amendment could cost $2.26 billion by 1995 because grain production was likely to increase in coming years, which would depress prices.

The amendment was modified to reduce the cost - or even make it budget-neutral - by changing the trigger level for feed grains to a 15 percent setaside. The trigger for wheat would be a 7.5 percent setaside.

In addition, the subcommittee adopted language that would peg the barley target price as at least 87.5 percent of the corn target, but would use different payment rates for malting barley and feed barley.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - The judge presiding over the Iran-Contra trial of John Poindexter Tuesday ordered the jury sequestered after two members of the panel were contacted by the press, nearly causing a mistrial.

At a hastily called hearing, U.S. District Judge Harold Greene angrily announced that two jurors had been contacted Monday night by women identifying themselves as reporters.

He said that the attempts to contact jurors, who began deliberating Monday might be considered an obstruction of justice.

''I'll think about that,'' Greene said. ''This almost created a mistrial.''

''I have decided I will sequester the jury. I have tried to avoid that,'' Greene said. ''I'm very sorry to have to do this, but the irresponsible behavior of the press leaves me no choice.''

Greene said, ''I certainly don't want to have a mistrial.''

The reporter, identified in court as Nora Boustany, is a prize-winning foreign correspondent for The Washington Post. In the courtroom, the juror who was contacted said when Boustany called he hung up on her only to be called by her a second time.

Bob Kaiser, the newspaper's assistant managing editor for national news, said Boustany has reported from Lebanon for many years and she never lived or worked in the United States until recently. She was assigned to find out how to contact the Poindexter juror after the trial, Kaiser said, and made the mistake of contacting him directly.

''She told us what happened and we called the judge's chambers and apologized,'' Kaiser said. ''No substantive questions were asked or answered.''

Kaiser said ''we're virtually certain'' the second juror was not contacted by anyone from his newspaper.

Poindexter, 53, the last of the original Iran-Contra defendants, is the highest Reagan administration official to stand trial in the Iran-Contra scandal.

The retired Navy rear admiral is accused of five felonies involving obstruction of Congress, conspiracy and the destruction of official government documents.

Defense lawyers and prosecutors both said they had ''no objection'' to keeping the jurors on the panel.

The identity of the woman who called the second juror and said she was a reporter is not known. The juror hung up before getting the caller's name.

Greene said Boustany's excuse of not knowing ''the ground rules'' was ''a lame excuse'' and one that would be ridiculed by the press if made by a government official.

Greene stressed that during the trial he had been highly sensitive to First Amendment issues involving freedom of the press.

The judge told jurors they did not have to speak to the press even after a verdict is reached, although they could if they decided to.

The jury of eight women and four men will move into a hotel, Greene said. Tuesday was the panel's first full day of deliberations after receiving instructions from Greene on Monday.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Air Force Secretary Donald Rice told a Senate panel Tuesday that slower production of the B-2 stealth bomber is being considered as an austerity measure and that option would increase costs only slightly.

The B-2 program, now projected to cost $70 billion for 132 radar-evading strategic bombers, is among the aviation systems being reviewed by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney. Rice, without suggesting what Cheney might decide, said it appears the plane's cost would not rise substantially if production were slowed.

Rice told the Senate defense appropriations subcommittee that the program, at its most ambitious, called for spending about $10 billion in one year to build 29 of the bat-wing bombers designed to elude Soviet air defenses and strike heavily defended targets.

In the fiscal 1991 budget, President Bush has asked for $5.5 billion to build five more B-2s and continue research.

Rice said he believes ''the aircraft can be produced efficiently at numbers below'' the peak rate, somewhere between two-thirds to three-quarters of that high rate.

''I believe that can be done with a modest effect on the cost of the program,'' Rice said.

Killing the project outright, he said, would mean that as much as $34 billion for research, development and production would have to be divided among 15 planes, boosting the individual cost from about $532 million for 132 planes to about $2.25 billion each.

The B-2, the most modern version of stealth technology that began with the once-secret F-117A jet fighter in the early 1980s, is built with radar absorbing composite materials. Its sleek lines also help it avoid radar detection.

Both Rice and Gen. Larry Welch, the Air Force chief of staff, told the subcommittee the plane does not need special hangars to operate, but building some special shelters - at a cost of $540 million each - would cut maintenance costs significantly. Temperature must be at least 40 degrees for work to be done on the composite materials.

As for the need for the new weapon, Welch said the ability of the B-1B bomber to penetrate the toughest Soviet defenses will drop off in mid-decade, but it will still be able to reach lesser-defended targets for years to come.

Senior members of the subcommittee, including its chairman, Sen. Daniel Inoyue, D-Hawaii, had words of caution for the Air Force officials.

Inouye ticked off the new major systems in the Air Force budget - the B-2, a rail-based 10-warhead MX missile, the one-warhead Midgetman missile, the C-17 cargo jet and the advanced tactical fighter - and said, ''It is not clear that major new systems are needed.''

The senior Republican on the panel, Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, said the sheer number of new programs puts all of them at risk.

MOSCOW (APRIL 3) UPI - Labor strikes, environmental protests and disintegrating central economic control have caused Soviet industrial production to fall this year in the first such drop in recent decades, the Pravda newspaper said Tuesday.

The Soviet industrial output fell by 1 percent in January and February, compared to the same period last year, with especially heavy losses in strife-torn Transcaucasia, Pravda said.

''For the first time in recent decades, the State Statistical Committee's figures for our production growth are accompanied by a minus sign,'' Pravda said. ''Three months of 1990 have passed, and enterprises have already failed to fulfill supply contracts worth tens of billions of rubles.''

The bad economic news came four days after the Soviet government announced new plans to move the country toward a market economy - an initiative Moscow has admitted will likely cause inflation and unemployment.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has pledged to use the strengthened executive post he assumed last month to radicalize his ''perestroika'' reform drive.

Pravda said production has fallen by ''tens of percentage points'' in Azerbaijan, by 15.9 percent in Armenia and by 8.8 percent in Georgia.

''Mass strikes in the Transcaucasian republics, particularly in Azerbaijan struck a heavy blow at the entire productive system,'' it said.

Using the official exchange rate of rubles to dollars, the region's total production in January and February was $534 million below centrally planned levels, Pravda said.

Gorbachev ordered army troops to storm the Azerbaijani capital of Baku on Jan. 20 after a resurgence of ethnic clashes between Armenians and Azerbaijanis, who have been fighting for more than two years over the Nagorno-Karabakh region of Azerbaijan.

Neighboring Georgia has also been wracked by ethnic strife in the past year, and intermittent strikes and cargo blockades have continued to cripple large parts of Transcaucasia.

Pravda, the official newspaper of the Soviet Communist Party, said production has also been hampered by the country's growing environmental movement.

''Ecological problems in this country have been accumulating for decades '' Pravda said. ''The public is making tough demands: Shut down dirty factories, and no two ways about it.''

The Soviet government has only recently acknowledged the disastrous environmental effects caused by dictator Josef Stalin's forced industrialization and subsequent policies of ecological neglect.

Pravda said production is also being hamstrung by the refusal of newly enpowered factory managers to fulfill orders from central ministries during the difficult transition to a more market-oriented economy.

''Many managers now say, 'If I am willing to, I will conclude a contract to supply parts. If I am unwilling, I will not conclude it','' the newspaper said.

''Neither the State Planning Committee, the State Supply Committee, nor any ministry are in a position to call the suppliers to account,'' it said.

A lack of trained personnel and sophisticated technology have added to the economic crisis, Pravda said.

A factory built two years ago in the Uzbek capital of Tashkent to produce prefabricated houses is operating at just 9 percent of capacity, the newspaper said.

Plans to increase production of consumer goods by $106 million this year to $1.1 billion is unrealistic and will likely not be realized, it said.

Soviet industrial output rose by a mere 1.7 percent last year, according to official figures, to a total of $1.34 trillion.

(APRIL 3) UPI - Water plants along the Allegheny River near Pittsburgh are opening up again now that a 200-thousand-gallon fuel spill is dissipating and moving into the Ohio River. Eight of 10 plants were re-opened by this morning. The fuel leaked Friday night from a ruptured pipeline about 30 miles northeast of Pittsburgh.

The goverment is blaming February's one percent drop in the index of leading economic indicators on a plunge in the number of building permits. The Commerce Department says a total of seven of the 11 indicators that track the pulse of the economy fell in February, while just three edged up.

John Poindexter's Iran-Contra trial narrowly averted a mistrial today after it was revealed that two members of the jury were contacted by the media. An angry U-S District Judge Harold Greene ordered the jury sequestered and said the attempts to contact jurors might be considered an

PARIS (APRIL 3) UPI - Chairman Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization and former President Jimmy Carter will meet Wednesday in Paris in an effort to break the stalemate in the Middle East peace process diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

Informal talks between the two men, originally set for March 20 in Tunis, Tunisia, were postponed because Arafat had to go to Windhoek for Namibian independence ceremonies.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman confirmed Carter would be in Paris Wednesday on a a private visit. Diplomatic sources said the architect of the 1978 Camp David peace accords and of the 1979 Egypt-Israel peace treaty unofficially will act as an emissary of Secretary of State James Baker, who is impatient to crank up talks between the Palestinians and the Israelis.

The former president will address a World Bank meeting on food security in sub-Saharan Africa, the official said, and will stay at the U.S. ambassador's residence Wednesday night.

The U.S. spokesman said he could neither confirm nor deny that Carter would meet Arafat. But the PLO representative to London, Faisal Oweida, confirmed the Carter-Arafat talks. Their talks will focus on the peace process ''and the role the Palestinians can play,'' he told the Kuwaiti News Agency, monitored in Beirut.

''We will listen to the U.S. point of view regarding a just settlement for the Arab-Israeli conflict,'' Oweida said. Carter talked with Arafat by telephone Sunday, he said.

The meeting comes amid an Israeli government crisis in which the Labor Party is trying to form an administration that would make peace with the Palestinians.

Arafat is expected to spend only a few hours in France Wednesday, the sources said. His first official visit to France was May 2 when he met with President Francois Mitterrand over strong opposition from French Jewish groups. During that meeting Arafat declared that the Palestine Liberation Organization charter pledging the destruction of Israel was obsolete.

Arafat also said then he has asked France to adopt a mediation role between the PLO and Israel.

Last month Carter made a private fact-finding tour of Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Israel and denounced human rights violations in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank.

The United States started official talks with the PLO Dec. 16, 1988, after the organization recognized Israel and agreed to renounce terrorism.

The Palestine National Council, the PLO parliament-in-exile, voted in November 1988 for a two-state solution to the Palestinian question that would give the Palestinians a tiny state in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and claim Jerusalem as its capital.

Carter criticized Israel March 19 for its methods of suppressing the 2-year-old Palestinian uprising, known as the intifada, and called for an international peace conference.

''What we are talking about is an authoritative government that is in charge that is depriving the people under its control of their basic human rights,'' Carter said at the time.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - The Food and Drug Administration should establish maximum limits for trace metals in over-the-counter antacids and calcium supplements, a researcher said Tuesday.

Dr. Bada Boulos of the University of Illinois-Chicago said he found people who take high doses of antacids and calcium supplements to prevent ''brittle-bone'' disease or osteoporosis run the risk of developing toxic poisoning from the trace metal maganese.

''Healthy individuals who take only one or two of these tablets a day will normally excrete the trace metals from their bodies and suffer no harm,'' Boulos said. ''But those individuals, particularly the elderly, who take many tablets a day, or who have any kind of kidney dysfunction, will accumulate these trace metals in their systems and run the risk of toxic contamination.''

Manganese levels are so high in some supplements that a person who regularily takes 10 to 15 tablets a day may show potentially toxic levels of the metal in their bloodsteam, said Boulos, an associate professor of environmental health sciences. At high levels, the metal can produce symptoms of neurological damage similar to Parkinson's disease, he said.

In a speech to be delivered Wednesday at a meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, Boulos called on the FDA to limit the maximum allowable level of manganese and other trace metals in antacids and nutritional supplements. Currently, the FDA does not regulate the level of trace metals in supplements.

Most calcium supplements and antacids are made from minerals that contain trace metals, Boulos noted. Although some manufacturers label their bottles for trace metal content, those labels often are inaccurate, he added.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - Confessed insider trader Ivan Boesky was scheduled to be released Wednesday from a Brooklyn halfway house, federal officials said Tuesday.

Boesky, once a leading Wall Street speculator who came to symbolize greed in the 1980s, could be released anytime after midnight Tuesday, said Merle Reams, case manager for the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

''He will be on mandatory release supervision and will be reporting to a parole officer until Sept. 22,'' Reams said.

Boesky was sent to the Brooklyn Community Corrections Center in Bedford-Stuyvesant in December 1989 when he was released from the minimum security Lompoc Federal Prison Camp in California.

Boesky had been photographed during his incarceration wearing a flowing beard but, since entering the halfway house, has been seen with trimmed hair and wearing natty business suits.

Because of overcrowding at the halfway house, Boesky has reportedly been living at home and has had to check in at the halfway house regularly.

Boesky was one of Wall Street's richest stock speculators before he paid the government $100 million, pleaded guilty to violating securities law and agreed to cooperate with a continuing federal investigation as part of a settlement of insider trading charges.

He was sentenced Dec. 18, 1987, to a three-year prison term. He applied successfully for a sentence reduction Apr. 15, 1988.

Reams said Boesky would be released from the halfway house and would have to report to a probation officer at least once a month.

Boesky has reportedly spent some of his prison term trying to raise money for a new investment venture to start upon his release.

Business Week magazine reported in February that Boesky was planning to base his investment group in a country with lenient tax laws for foreign investors, such as the Netherlands Antilles in the Caribbean.

LONDON (APRIL 3) UPI - The government ordered local councils mostly controlled by the opposition Labor Party to cut poll taxes Tuesday in an effort to defuse anger over the levy that has sparked riots and undermined support for the ruling Conservative Party.

Environment Minister Chris Patten, whose office oversees domestic taxes, said the move was necessary because the local governments were overspending and putting too much burden on taxpayers.

But a Labor leader in Parliament, Bryan Gould, described the order to cap taxes in some opposition-controlled areas as the government's ''final admission of the poll tax's failure'' and an effort to ''shift the blame.''

The poll tax or community charge, under which every adult is charged the same amount, was mandated by the central government to replace taxes based on the value of a taxpayers property. Local councils set the fee.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has been a long-time opponent of property taxes, which fall most heavily on Conservative Party voters.

She advocated the poll tax as a way of equally spreading the costs of local services among the 34 million people who elect local councils, and of curbing high spending by Labor authorities by making them more accountable to their constituencies.

The plan, however, has backfired, with latest polls showing the Conservatives lagging behind Labor by between 19 and 28 percent of those questioned.

Patten, the minister in charge of taxation, was jeered by opposition members of Parliament as he read the list of 20 areas in which he was ordering the poll tax to be capped. Eighteen of the local councils are controlled by the Labor Party and in two, no party has overall control.

There are hundreds of local councils, but the 20 areas singled out Tuesday had among the highest rates of the poll tax which vary from $241 annually to $934. Rates are set according to local government budgets and the caps Patten ordered will also vary.

''It is little wonder that strong feelings have been expressed up and down the country about the level of many charges,'' Patten said. ''Charge payers are being asked to pay some 30 percent more than domestic rate payers in 1989-90 and that is a position that is deplorable and an unacceptable burden on local people.''

Labor leader Neil Kinnock accused Thatcher Tuesday of being pleased by the riots and looting after a poll tax protest Saturday because the disorder diverted attention from the actual issue of the tax.

''She could barely conceal her delight at the diversion,'' Kinnock said.

Thatcher called Kinnock's charge ''nonsense'' and said she was ''deeply concerned'' about the riots in which scores of police and civilians were injured and hundreds of stores and cars were damaged.

The new community poll tax went into effect Sunday in England and Wales, one year after it was imposed in Scotland. The tax requires local city councils to set a flat sum that must be paid by every resident at least 18 years old, with some exceptions. There have been other riots in previous weeks as local councils set tax rates.

Unlike income tax, or the property tax it replaces, the poll tax does not discriminate according to wealth, which has caused bitter complaints.

Labor's Gould said the Conservatives were admitting the plan's failure by setting the tax rate caps.

''If accountablility is the key, why couldn't (the government) wait for the voters to pass judgement,'' he said. ''They've given up trying to make the poll tax work, they've given up trying to help the poll tax payers, their sole objective now is trying to shift the blame.''

MONTREAL (APRIL 3) UPI - Attempts to implement economic and political reforms in Latin America and the Caribbean may be doomed unless commercial banks and multilateral institutions show more flexibility in renegotiating debt packages, a senior Mexican government official warned Tuesday.

Pedro Aspe, the nation's minister of housing and credit, told the annual meeting of the Inter-American Development Bank in Montreal there is little agreement among creditors on the need for debt or interest rate reduction.

This has hampered flexibility in negotiations and hurt expectations for the future of the region's economy, he said.

Aspe said there was a need for debtor countries to make reforms as a prerequisite for renegotiating their debt.

''But at times the excessive debt burden is not taken into account. That is one reason why adjustment programs fail,'' he said.

Mexico's debt restructuring package, negotiated under the so-called Brady Plan, has given the country a number of indirect benefits, among them renewed confidence in the country and a return of private capital and foreign investment, Aspe said.

Aspe also warned the IDB's 44-member countries against shifting the focus of investment and international trade to Eastern Europe at the expense of Latin America and the Caribbean.

He said an economic crisis sparked the arrival of democracy in Eastern Europe. In Latin America, ''democracy is being reaffirmed despite the significant economic crisis affecting the region,'' Aspe added.

Aspe said major imbalances in the current accounts of some industrialized countries had a ''dramatic and negative'' impact on Latin America and the Caribbean.

He urged industrialized nations to continue their efforts to avoid protectionist trade policies, adding that expanded international trade would support economic adjustment policies being implemented in the region.

Argentina's Economic Minister, Antonio Gonzalez, said the IDB must double its efforts to ensure that economic reforms do not worsen social conditions.

He said IDB funding should attempt to offset deteriorating health care, education and social assistance. ''We must be able to overcome this juncture in peace,'' Gonzalez said.

Creditor members of the IDB appeared more concerned, however, that the region stay its course of economic and political reforms, with greater emphasis on environmentally sound programs and attempts to control population growth.

John Niehuss, senior deputy assistant secretary of the U.S. Treasury, said banks and debtor nations should avoid the ''temptation to fund financing gaps through arrears.''

He said failure to meet debt payments would undermine reforms, erode market and investor confidence and ''replace cooperation with potential confrontation.''

Niehuss said debt refinancing packages negotiated under the Brady Plan - named for Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady - have helped countries restore confidence in their economies and encourage the return of private and foreign investment.

IDB representatives from Britain and Finland said any economic turnaround in the region would require acceptance of the ''small-family ideal.''

''Even positive economic development will be eroded unless the problem of population growth is solved,'' said Kai Helenius, Finland's under-secretary of state.

Several industrialized countries, among them the United States, Canada and Britain, said the IDB should play a greater role in the region in overseeing environmentally sensitive projects and stressing the need for conservation.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Actress Angie Dickinson, whose sister has Alzheimer's disease, called at a congressional hearing Tuesday for Americans to write the White House seeking more funding for research into the crippling disease.

Dickinson testified at a hearing of the House Select Aging Committee and the Senate aging subcommittee along with fellow actress Shelley Fabares and others whose relatives are among the 4 million victims of the degenerative disease.

Alzheimer's, which attacks the brain and leads to impaired memory, thinking and behavior, kills 100,000 people a year and is the nation's fourth-leading cause of death behind heart disease, cancer and stroke.

Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif., chairman of the House panel, said sponsors of different Alzheimer's bills in Congress have reached agreement to combine their legislation to boost research aid from the $153 million requested by President Bush to $300 million this year and eventually to $500 million.

Dickinson, her voice often choked with emotion, told the committee that her sister, Mary Lou Belmont, came down with the disease five years ago at age 55, and now needs constant care at home costing $80 a day.

But she said, ''Most families cannot afford help.''

Dickinson called for increased support for victims of Alzheimer's and said Americans should write Bush asking for more money for research. She said she selected Bush rather than members of Congress because people forget the names of their representatives.

''Perhaps, if we just write to the White House, and I mean millions of people, and then President Bush can just pass them (the letters) on,''

Dickinson said as the hearing room filled with applause and laughter.

Roybal, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, chairman of the Senate subcommittee, and other Democrats applauded Dickinson's suggestion as a chance to create a ''ground swell'' of support for Alzheimer's funding.

Rep. Claudine Schneider, R-R.I., said she agreed it was time for greater action but suggested Dickinson make public service commercials and that letters be sent instead to Congress because it has the ''responsiblity to act.''

Funding for Alzheimer's research is several times less than that for diseases such as AIDS and cancer. Witnesses at the hearing said they did not want increases in Alzheimer's research to cause cuts in aid for other research.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board said Tuesday it approved the application of Wells Fargo & Co. to establish a joint venture with Nikko Securities Ltd., of Tokyo to engage in trust company activities.

Wells Fargo, headquartered in San Francisco, is the eighth largest banking organization in the United States and engages in a wide range of non-bank businesses. Nikko is a major Japanese investment house.

''The investment advisory activities and the trust company services that the joint venturers propose to conduct in this case are ... permissible activities for both bank holding companies and banks,'' the Fed said.

The activities will be conducted primarily through Wells Fargo Institutional Trust Co., along with Wells Fargo-Nikko Investment Advisors, and Wells Fargo Foreign Funds Advisors, all in San Francisco, the board said.

The trust company will not accept deposits, will not make commercial loans and will not be an insured bank, the Fed said.

''Wells Fargo and Nikko have made commitments that are similar to commitments the board has found in other cases to be adequate in addressing the board's concerns with respect to the potential mingling of banking and securities activities,'' the board said.

''For example, there are restrictions on arrangements between Wells Fargo and Nikko concerning the recommendation or purchase by Wells Fargo or the trust company of securities underwritten by Nikko,'' the Fed said.

In addition, three of the six directors of the trust company would be selected by Wells Fargo, while Nikko would ''have the power'' to select two others, the board said. Another director would be selected jointly by Wells Fargo and Nikko.

''Nikko would control, in the aggregate, less than 50 percent of the capital stock of the trust company, and Nikko would not control the election of a majority of the board of directors of the trust company,'' the Fed said.

ST. PETERSBURG, FL (APRIL 3) UPI - Siamese twins connected at the chest and stomach were operated on Tuesday in an attempt to separate the month-old boys.

Doctors at All Children's Hospital began the ten-hour operation on Jakob and James Watkins at 8:20 a.m., hospital spokeswoman Catherine Coleman said. The first incision was made at 10:40 a.m..

The boys' parents, Raquel and Scott Watkins, could not be reached for comment, and Coleman said they would not talk to reporters until a news conference scheduled for noon Wednesday. The couple waited for word on their babies in the hospital's surgery waiting area, she said.

Jakob and James were born Feb. 28, a month premature, at Bayfront Medical Center in St. Petersburg. They were immediately transferred to All Children's Hospital.

Richard Harmel, chief of pediatrics at All Children's, is heading up the surgery. He said last month he was optimistic about the separation procedure's success because their liver appeared to be the only vital organ they shared.

The success rate for Siamese twins who are joined at the abdomen and chest and don't share a heart is between 60 and 70 percent, Harmel said. Doctors are certain both boys have independent hearts and lungs, but Harmel said their gastrointestinal tract could be partially connected.

Roberto Sosa, a neonatal physician specialist at the hospital, said the boys had been gaining strength since their birth, despite suffering from problems early on associated with premature birth, such as underdeveloped lungs.

Siamese twins, which form from a single cell that does not divide completely, account for roughly one in every 100,000 live births, Harmel said. A pediatric surgeon, Harmel said he performed his first and only separation operation two years ago in Columbus, Ohio.

Those babies died, but Harmel said they shared chambers of a heart, a much more delicate and difficult situation than the one facing the Watkins twins. "There is nothing that we see that says either of the babies should be limited on a long-term basis," he said. The surgery requires two teams of surgeons and an extra operating room to move one baby once the separation is complete, Coleman said.

Scott Watkins, 20, an installer for Gulf Aluminum, said his insurance is covering all medical costs. Coleman said those costs have not been determined. "We don't have any estimates as to how much it will cost," she said. "It'll be after surgery before we know anything."

SAN FRANCISCO (APRIL 3) UPI - Engineering and construction giant Bechtel Group Inc. enjoyed its best year in 1989 since the early 1980s, reflecting an upturn in major international building projects, the company said Tuesday.

The privately held firm, which lost ground in the mid-1980s as construction slowed worldwide, booked more new business in 1989 than it has in six years and boosted its revenue for the first time in five years, according to its annual report to employees.

Chairman Stephen Bechtel Jr. credited strong international business and an unprecedented growth in new clients for the company's improving performance.

'Bechtel signed up $5.4 billion in new projects in 1989, a 21 percent increase over $4.5 billion in 1988. Revenue from ongoing projects rose 14 percent to $5.1 billion from $4.5 billion in 1988.

Bechtel's revenue slid an average of 24 percent a year from 1984 through 1987 before leveling off in 1988.

Highlights of 1989 included major new airport contracts at JFK airport in New York, O'Hare in Chicago, Dallas/Fort Worth in Texas, and Haneda in Tokyo, Bechtel said.

Bechtel attracted more first-time clients in 1989 than at any time in its 92-year history, the company said. Bechtel's workers and engineers are currently working on 1,600 projects or studies for 950 clients worldwide.

International business grew to 48 percent of new work, compared with 43 percent in 1988. Bechtel's long history of overseas work includes construction of a major new city, Jubail, in the Saudi Arabian desert and a role in the digging of the channel tunnel, or Chunnel, underneath the English Channel.

Stephen Bechtel said the outlook remains bright going into the 1990s. The company forecasts growth in both orders and revenue in 1990, he said.

EAST BERLIN (APRIL 3) UPI - The Social Democratic Party reversed itself in announcing Tuesday it will enter talks with other parties to form a broad coalition government that is expected to steer the country toward reunification with West Germany.

''You have to be in the government in order to influence policy,'' acting Social Democratic Party Chairman Markus Meckel told a news conference.

Shortly after the announcement, the three-party, conservative Alliance for Germany, the Social-Democratic Party and a liberal group began a closed-door session of coalition talks.

After a marathon meeting that lasted most of the night, Meckel announced the Social Democrats dropped their objections to the inclusion of the small, arch-conservative German-Social Union, one of the Alliance for Germany parties.

But Meckel also made it clear his party would seek assurances that no major posts in the new government would be given to the German-Social Union.

''The manner in which the DSU should be involved in government decision-making must be thoroughly discussed,'' he said.

The announcement by Social Democrats was made a day after Ibrahim Boeheme, the embattled head of the party, resigned saying he needed time to clear himself of allegations that he once was a secret police informer.

Meckel also said the Social Democrats will seek to strengthen East Germany's first freely elected government and that the power of the new administration would determine whether ''the new government will be in a position to make policies for its citizens or (if) there simply will be a 'diktat' from Bonn or Munich.''

He also said the Social Democrats intended to play a key role in supervising the dismantling of the State Security department, or Stasi.

''This society has to be changed in all its dimensions,'' he added.

The Social Democratic Party disappeared from the East German political scene after merging with the Communists in 1946 but was reorganized in October as East Germany's Communist leadership was crumbling. It won the second largest number of parliamentary seats in the March 18 elections.

The Alliance for Germany won the most seats at the polls. Lothar de Maiziere, leader of one of the three Alliance parties, the Christian Democratic Union, is expected to become East Germany's next prime minister.

The Social Democrats are not expected to challenge de Maiziere's claim to leadership but party officials said they were particularly interested in the foreign affairs, labor and social affairs portfolios.

''We shall not enter a coalition without getting anything in return,'' said Meckel.

Meckel also said other conditions for his party's participation in a coalition government include ''the social foundation of the economic and monetary union and a 1-to-1 exchange rate.''

The West German Bundeskbank proposed Saturday that East Germans be required to exchange their money at a 2-to-1 rate with the deutsche mark, when East Germany adopts the West German currency as part of a monetary union to be established this summer. The proposal drew sharp criticism from leading East and West German politicians.

De Maiziere, supporting the demand for a 1-to-1 rate, said: ''We stand by our viewpoint, expressed during the election campaign to voters.''

''We do not think it is possible for wages and pensions to be dealt with in a 2-to-1 exchange,'' he said.

Meckel was appointed acting Social Democratic Party chairman after Boehme's surprise resignation from the party leadership Monday. Boehme quit the job three days after he went to the headquarters of the former State Security department, or Stasi, with his lawyer, to examine the agency's files.

Boehme, 45, blamed his decision to step down as party chairman on the difficulty of clearing his name following charges he once was a secret police informer, and on poor health.

BAKKER IN ARTS AND CRAFTS: Jim Bakker is learning a craft behind bars. He's been sending out pictures of himself holding a ceramic mug of ceramic hot chocolate topped with a ceramic dollop of whipped cream.

Bakker, who is serving a 45-year term for defrauding his PTL ministry, made the mug to give to his wife, Tammy Faye, who visited him at the Federal Medical Center in Rochester, Minn., on Sunday, the couple's 28th wedding anniversary. Tammy Faye has a large collection of ceramic food items that adorn her kitchen, including artificial pies, cakes, and bread.

DRINKING AND ACTING: Actor Christian Slater will have to do ten days in jail after pleading guilty to drunken driving. Slater, 20, one of the stars of the movie "Heathers," also was fined $1,386.50 and lost his driver's license for 18 months.

In return for the guilty plea, the judge dropped a charge of battery on a peace officer. Slater was arrested Dec. 29 after his car hit two telephone poles in an alley in West Hollywood. Police say he fled and kicked an officer who tried to pull him down from a fence.

GAY FRIENDS: A homosexual anti-defamation group praised Phil Donahue and Bob Hope but condemned Andy Rooney of "60 Minutes" for furthering homophobia. The Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation - known as GLAAD - announced the nominees for its first annual media awards and cited Donahue for continued good coverage and support of homosexual concerns while Hope was singled out for his public service announcement condeming homophobia.

GLAAD nominated the television shows "As The World Turns," "Doctor, Doctor " "Heartbeat," "Thirtysomething," "The Women of Brewster Place," "L.A. Law " and "The Tracey Ullman Show" for their positive treatment of homosexuality. Named for defamatory entertainment were the rock bands Skid Row and Guns 'n' Roses and comedians Andrew Dice Clay, Sam Kinison and Damon Wayans.

ESTEFAN GETTING OUT: Gloria Estefan, who suffered a broken back in a bus accident two weeks ago, is scheduled to be released from a New York hospital Wednesday and will get a special ride home.

A hospital spokeswoman says Julio Iglesias will fly the pop singer home to Miami in his private plane. Estefan, who was up and walking two days after the March 22 operation, has been signing autographs for staff and patients alike.

"She's a very social person," says spokeswoman Mary Costello. Elton John, Diana Ross, and Brooke Shields have phoned her hospital room almost every day during her recuperation. After being discharged, Estefan has a three- to six-month rehabilitation program ahead of her.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - The Senate, cracking a 13-year legislative deadlock, neared passage Tuesday of a historic clean air bill designed to reduce urban smog, acid rain and cancer-causing industrial pollution.

With only a few minor amendments awaiting consideration, senators were expected to approve the measure by early evening and send it to the House, ending more than two months of floor debate and backroom negotiations with the Bush administration on a bipartisan compromise.

The Senate vote would be the first major step by Congress since 1977 to strengthen the Clean Air Act, which was a major source of conflict during the Reagan administration.

But just hours before the vote, Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine said he would seek to strengthen the bill in negotiations with the House.

Efforts to toughen the bill - particulary automobile exhaust provisions - could provoke a showdown with President Bush, who says he will veto any bill that he feels costs industry too much.

Bush, on a stop in Indianpolis during a political trip, reitierated his demand for a bill that balances environmental concerns with the needs of industry.

"I reject the extremists in the environmental movement who would burden our economy by mindless regulation," he said. "And I reject those in industry who do not recognize their obligation to clean up the environment. Common sense tells us to find a needed balance."

Senate sponsors estimate the bill's stricter emission limits on cars, factories and coal-burning power plants will cost the economy $21 billion a year, on top of $32 billion now being spent by industry on pollution control. Industry groups have complained that their estimates put the costs much higher.

In the House, action continued on parallel legislation as members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee reached an important compromise on curbing toxic industrial emissions. The House is expected to act on its bill by early summer, leading to a House-Senate conference to set the shape of final legislation.

Whatever its final form, the legislation will touch every American's pocketbook through higher utility bills, increased auto and gasoline costs and other economic effects rippling out from tighter pollution controls affecting industries ranging from coal mining to petrochemicals to the neighborhood dry cleaner.

Industry officials warn the changes could cost hundreds of thousands of jobs, but agree with environmentalists that the nation must address its gargantuan - and growing - air pollution problems, including:

- An estimated 23 million tons of acid rain emissions belched from coal-burning power plants each year, damaging lakes, streams and forests in the Northeast and Canada. Midwestern and Southern lawmakers have fought control measures, likely to cause big electric rate increases in their regions.

- About 2.7 billion pounds of nerve-damaging and cancer-causing pollution released by factories each year. Due to legal wrangling, the Environmental Protection Agency has regulated only seven of the hundreds of toxic chemicals routinely spewed into the environment.

- Smog-causing emissions from cars and industry that have put 101 cities in violation of federal health standards. Scientists say smog will get worse unless automakers are forced to make cleaner cars, including some that use low-polluting alcohol fuels.

Congress was stymied for years by regional disputes over acid rain control and the unyielding opposition of President Ronald Reagan, but the gridlock was broken last summer when Bush, keeping a 1988 campaign pledge, proposed comprehensive clean air legislation.

Since then, congressional Democrats have sought to toughen Bush's proposal. But the president has resisted changes and reiterated his demand for "balanced" clean air legislation in remarks Tuesday in Indiana.

The Senate bill is the product of lengthy private negotiations in which Mitchell agreed to weaken some emission controls to win White House support. Keeping his part of the bargain, Mitchell opposed strengthening amendments during the Senate debate. But he served notice Tuesday that in crafting the final version with the House, he will back some proposals he helped shoot down.

The Senate bill incorporates Bush's plan to achieve a ten million ton reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions from coal-burning power plants by 2000. Sulfur dioxide is a primary cause of acid rain.

Bush backs a system of pollution permits that utilities could buy and sell allowing total emissions to be cut by changes at plants where solutions are cheapest.

LOS ANGELES (APRIL 3) UPI - Northrop Corp. disclosed Tuesday in its annual report that the U.S. Department of Justice is investigating an electronic flight control system on the B-2 stealth bomber.

The system, called the Actuator Remote Terminal (ART), serves to keep the B-2 stable while it is in flight by taking commands from the aircraft's flight control computer, relaying them to flight control services and then providing the computer with information.

The bat-shaped B-2, which first flew last summer, is undergoing a planned five-month grounding as part of its flight-test program, Northrop spokesman Tony Cantafio said. The plane, which is the most expensive aircraft ever built, is due to begin flying again later this month, Cantafio said.

Northrop also said in the annual report that there are two other ''ongoing but undisclosed'' government investigations of Northrop, but did not give further details.

Northrop disclosed the investigations in the annual report as part of its discussion about its guilty plea in an unrelated criminal fraud case in late February. The company pleaded guilty to 34 counts of making false statements to the government in connection with the testing of parts for the Navy's Harrier jet and the Air Force's air-launched cruise missile.

As part of the settlement, the Justice Department agreed to drop 141 additional counts, including those related to the durability of the missile guidance units supplied by Northrop. Northrop's chief executive officer, Kent Kresa, disclosed shortly thereafter that federal authorities had closed their investigations of the alleged improprieties related to the making of the B-2 and of MX Missile parts.

In a separate development, Northrop said Tuesday that it has appointed U.S. Trust Company of California to serve as an independent investment manager for Northrop's retirement plans, which had assets of more than $2.8 billion as of Dec. 31, and to purchase Northrop stock.

Northrop said the retirement plans can use up to 10 percent of their assets to purchase up to 25 percent of Northrop stock.

Northrop stock was unchanged at $14.75 a share in early afternoon trading Tuesday on the New York Stock Exchange.

INDIANAPOLIS (APRIL 3) UPI - President Bush, winding up a highly political two-day trip, planted a tree for mankind Tuesday, plugged a compromise clean air measure in Congress and raised money for the Republican Party.

"We need trees economically and environmentally," Bush said at a "Trees for Tomorrow" celebration. Wielding a shovel, Bush helped Mayor William Hudnut plant an elm at the corner of Washington and Alabama streets in the Indiana capital.

Bush, who has set a national goal of planting ten billion trees by the turn of the century, called trees "the sanctuaries of mankind, renewing and refreshing."

The president also used the event, held under gray skies, to plug the clean air bill that his administration helped to shape. "I'm proud of this proposal to cut smog, acid rain and toxic pollution - to make America cleaner and stronger," Bush declared just hours before the Senate was set to vote on the legislation.

Bush maintained the environmental theme at a fund-raiser later for Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., who replaced Dan Quayle in the Senate when Quayle was elected vice president. Bush called for passage of the measure to toughen the Clean Air Act of 1970, and shrugged off his critics.

"I reject the extremists in the environmental movement who would burden our economy with mindless regulation. And I reject those in industry who do not recognize their obligation to clean up the environment," Bush said.

"Common sense tells us to find a needed balance," Bush said. "We will find that balance." Clearly, though, the main purpose of the trip was to find money for the Republican Party and generate publicity for Republican candidates.

During the two days, Bush was credited with helping raise about $2 million at fund-raisers in Cincinnati, Indianapolis and one later Tuesday in Detroit.

With a third of the Senate, all of the House and 36 governors' seats up for election this year, Bush is trying to use his popularity to help make 1990 a winning political season for the GOP.

Bush attended a number of nonpolitical events on his two-day trek, which allowed the GOP to defray a portion of his travel expense to the federal government.

In Cincinnati, for example, Bush toured a General Electric plant Monday, and Tuesday he made a hospital visit to a high school honor student who was shot and paralyzed when he was caught in a street fight.

In Indianapolis, Bush had initially planned just to highlight his environmental concerns at the tree-planting ceremony. But Tuesday, he decided to use the occasion to pay an emotional tribute to pioneering AIDS victim Ryan White, 18, who was clinging to life at an Indianapolis hospital.

Bush called White, a young hemophiliac who helped educate the nation about acquired immune deficency snydrome and opened schools to himself and other AIDS victims, "a special young man who created a special legacy of his own."

"So today, as we together plant this beautiful American Elm, this symbol of new life ... let it be Ryan's tree." Said Bush, "God bless, Ryan White."

ST. PAUL, MN (APRIL 3) UPI - A Minnesota Senate committee Tuesday rejected a restrictive abortion bill, dealing the measure its third major defeat in the Legislature and prompting the author to say time is running out.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, on a 12-5 vote, defeated the bill that would have outlawed abortion as a means of birth control. The bill was similar to one passed by the Idaho Legislature but vetoed by the Idaho governor.

"Well, I think, we're a week away from ending the session. There's no action in the House. I don't anticipate any," said the bill's sponsor, Sen. Gene Waldorf, DFL-St. Paul. But he wouldn't rule out another attempt to get the bill brought up for a vote on the floor.

The bill would prohibit all abortions except those to terminate a pregnancy involving rape or incest and to protect the life and health of a woman. It would ban 90 percent of abortions.

Abortion rights advocates hailed the vote as a victory. "This was a very big vote for the pro-choice side," said Connie Perpich of Planned Parenthood. "I don't think we've had such a wide margin."

The bill failed on two previous tie votes earlier this session in the Health and Human Services Committee. Waldorf got the bill to the Judiciary Committee on a parliamentary move. In the House, the bill has failed to get a vote in committee. Efforts to bring it to a vote on the House floor have been ruled out of order.

MOSCOW (APRIL 3) UPI - Politburo member Alexander Yakovlev met Tuesday with Lithuanian Deputy Prime Minister Romualdas Ozales in an apparent breakthrough in the crisis over the Baltic republic, Lithuanian lawmakers said. "These are consultations and conversations," deputy Egidius Bichkauskas told reporters. "Don't call them negotiations."

Yakovlev, a confidant of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, began the meeting with Ozales and two Lithuanian legislators at 5 p.m. and their talks had not ended by 8 p.m., Bichkauskas said. He declined to say whether the meeting was taking place in the Kremlin or at another location.

The breakthrough came after Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis in a speech to his Parliament Monday said the embattled Baltic republic may be willing to delay establishment of full independence.

Landsbergis' statement was a retreat in Lithuania's three-week showdown with Moscow following the March 11 declaration of independence by its new nationalist-controlled Parliament.

Landsbergis told deputies, "The legal act of independence proclaimed by the Supreme Soviet does not mean the immediate establishment of independence on the territory of the republic," the official Tass news agency said.

In an earlier telegram to Gorbachev, Landsbergis said Lithuania "has no intention of harming the policy of perestroika," the Soviet president's drive for economic and political renewal.

In Washington, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told reporters Tuesday "our main weapon in resolving issues is dialogue - an honest dialogue. This is what we are looking forward to."

Shevardnadze arrived in Washington Tuesday for three days of pre-summit talks with Secretary of State James Baker that were expected to include discussions on Lithuania.

The Soviet official said at a plane-side news conference that he understood American concern over Lithuania but said it was an internal Soviet problem.

Also Tuesday, the Soviet Union restricted the one border crossing between Lithuania and neighboring Poland, which has vocally supported the republic's strive for independence, Polish border guards said.

The guards said Soviet authorities were only allowing transport trucks and a few Poles with visas to cross through the checkpoint at Ogrodniki, Poland. Normally, 3,000 Poles a day cross the so-called "bridge of friendship" checkpoint without visas to visit family and friends in Lithuania, which is comprised of territory that had been Poland's before World War II.

The crisis in Lithuania has steadily grown since the Sajudis nationalist movement headed by Landsbergis gained control of Parliament in Feb. 24 elections, chose him as the republic's president at its first session March 10 and declared independence the next day.

In twin appeals to the Parliament and to the Lithuanian people Saturday, Gorbachev urged lawmakers to rescind the independence declaration as a condition for talks with Moscow and said failure to do so could bring "grave consequences."

Landsbergis refused to consider a total reversal of the March 11 declaration, saying any such suggestion "has no grounds," Tass reported from Vilnius.

But Landsbergis's remarks indicated the Sajudis nationalists now running Lithuania may be moving toward the less confrontational approach adopted in neighboring Estonia, where a new Parliament Friday approved a gradual transition to independence.

Gorbachev's weekend appeals contained the first outline of a basis for dialogue with the Lithuanians about their desire to secede from the Soviet Union, which annexed all three Baltic states in 1940.

In his telegram, Landsbergis said the Lithuanian Parliament's presidium had noted Moscow's "readiness to start discussing the legality of Lithuania's acts and resolutions concerning the Soviet Constitution."

Though Gorbachev has heeded international appeals not to use direct force in Lithuania, he had refused to negotiate with Vilnius, saying Moscow holds talks only with foreign states.

University of Texas officials said they probably will not investigate allegations that Longhorn players used steroids. James Vick, vice president for student affairs, said an Austin American-Statesman story that quoted unnamed players as saying as many as 25 Texas players used steroids since 1986 ''had very little to go on, very little concrete.'' ... They also signed wide receiver Ray Roundtree of Penn State; defensive end Marlin Williams of Western Illinois; and linebacker Rich Romer of Union College.

OGRODNIKI, POLAND (APRIL 3) UPI - The Soviet Union virtually closed its border checkpoint between Poland and rebellious Lithuania Tuesday, curtailing travel of thousands of Poles across what was known as the ''bridge of friendship,'' Polish border guards said.

Soviet authorities suspended most border crossings in Ogrodniki, the single crossing point from Poland into Lithuania, at 9 a.m., border guard spokesman Col. Vaclaw Kwiatkowski said.

Polish guards said Soviet authorities were only allowing people with visas Soviets and Poles returning to their homes and some transport trucks to pass through the checkpoint. They said usually about 3,000 Poles a day crossed into the republic through the Ogrodniki checkpoint without visas.

''It looks like the Iron Curtain is being built again in this area,'' said a Lithuanian, who asked not to be identified, before he crossed back into the Soviet republic. His Soviet Samara car was loaded down with goods from Polish relatives he had been visiting.

Poland has been one of the most vocal supporters of Lithuania's drive for independence from the Soviet Union, with Polish leaders chastising other countries for their cautious stance toward the Soviet republic and hinting Poland may be the first to officially recognize an independent Lithuania.

In Warsaw, the Polish government immediately deplored the act and asked its ambassador in Moscow to seek an explanation for the restrictions.

''The Foreign Ministry reminds that free movement across the border is regulated by international agreements, which should be observed,'' an official statement said.

Soviet authorities at the border were allowing Poles and Soviets to return to their homelands, but made it clear that in the future they would need visas to travel. Poles and Soviets previously did not need visas to cross the Lithuanian border, although they were required to show guards ''invitations'' from residents of the country they were visiting.

The Soviet order apparently only affects the approximately 45 mile long border between Lithuania and Poland. Other checkpoints between the Soviet Union and Poland remained open, Kwiatkowski said.

The new restrictions suspended regular bus service between Bialystok in Poland and the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius, as well as service from Suwalki and other smaller Polish cities. Small ''friendship vans'' carrying 10 or 12 people shuttled regularly from the Polish frontier into the Soviet republic.

The Polish tourist agency Orbis was also told it could not use the Ogrodniki checkpoint for its tour buses into the Soviet Union until further notice, spokesmen said.

An Orbis bus from the northwestern Polish port of Szczecin that arrived at the border at noon was forced to leave behind several Polish passengers in order to continue its journey, one border guard said.

Lithuania, with 3.8 million people, has a Polish population of more than 400,000.

About one-third of the Republic is comprised of former Polish territory which was ceded to the Soviet Union under a post World War II agreement in which Poland took over parts of Germany. As a result, many ethnic Poles in Lithuania have family in their former homeland.

Polish border guards said it appeared the Soviet Union would allow Poles to cross into Lithuania to transport goods or conduct business. They said Poles could obtain Soviet visas in Gdansk and Warsaw.

By sunset, the news had spread and the checkpoint was nearly deserted.

Eugeniusz Chylinski, head of the Polish checkpoint, said he was informed by his Soviet counterpart half an hour before the change took effect that ''traffic will be limited, because such a decision came from Moscow.''

The Polish guards were told by Soviet authorities that when a bus with Soviet tourists approaches the border, the Soviets will not be allowed to enter Poland and Poles will have to leave the bus and cross the border on foot.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - U.S. and Japanese negotiators in far-reaching trade talks reported progress Tuesday but also some continuing disagreements on the second day of intense negotiations.

Japanese sources reported that two high-level emissaries sent by Japan's Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu had brought some concessions when they arrived Monday for a meeting with Secretary of State James Baker. The envoys, Nobuo Matsunaga, former ambassador to Washington, and Deputy Foreign Minister Hisashi Owada, held what the State Department described as ''a productive, worthwhile'' talk with Baker.

According to the sources, the principal concession they brought was a pledge by Kaifu to restructure Japanese retailing law to prevent discrimination against American companies setting up stores in Japan.

But in order to prevent hardship to small businesses - the ''mom-and-pop'' store owners who are often supporters of Kaifu's Liberal Democratic Party - Kaifu proposed that the retailing law be reformed within five years, and there would be an immediate ban on any new restrictive retailing legislation.

The sources said that the American side welcomed the Japanese intentions but U.S. negotiators at the so-called Structural Impediment talks at the State Department thought the five-year transitional period was unnecessarily long and asked for a more accelerated program and a detailed explanation of how the reform would work.

Two teams of diplomats and economists were working at the State Department to put together an interim report on how to remove built-in parts of Japanese and American societies that have the effect of excluding foreign competitors.

On the American list were such things as the Japanese retailing law, the prohibitive price of land in metropolitan Japanese areas that make it impossible for foreign dealers to set up factories or showrooms, the ''old boy network'' method of doing business in Japan's corporate life and an antiquated and inefficient retail distribution system.

The Japanese were putting together a similar list of things which add up to bars against some imports. At the head of the Japanese list is the U.S. federal budget deficit, which raises interest rates, discouraging capital investment, the sources said.

The Structural Impediment talks were scheduled to conclude Tuesday, but State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said that there was a possibility they could run over and finish on Wednesday.

Tutwiler praised the Japanese for resolving two out of three issues in which the Japanese were cited for unfair restraint of trade under a provision of the 1988 Trade Act. Under that act, if the Japanese do not respond satisfactorily to the complaint, Congress will impose retaliatory tariffs, setting off what some U.S. officials fear will be a destructive trade war.

Tutwiler said the Japanese had resolved the American complaints on restricting sales of American super-computers and weather satellites, but the U.S. complaint on Japanese restictions against American wood products is still unanswered, she said.

DENVER (APRIL 3) UPI - College basketball teams will be limited to three timeouts in televised games next season in an effort to speed up the final minutes, the NCAA rules committee announced Tuesday.

The NCAA allowed four timeouts per team this season.

The committee also decided that with the 10th foul of each half, players will shoot two shots instead of one-and-one. The changes came after Ed Steitz, the secretary-editor of the rules committee, called the final three minutes of a game ''an eternity.''

''These are attempts to minimize the time it takes to play the ballgame,'' Steitz said Tuesday.

The nine-man committee, chaired by Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps, said that taunting, baiting or undesireable language on the part of a player would result in a technical foul.

''This includes gesturing, taunting, shaking a finger at, or questioning his birthright,'' Steitz said. ''All that kind of thing does is lead to fighting.''

Steitz said the rule stemmed from the ''totally undesireable'' language used on the court.

The committee refused a move to change the 3-point shooting line from it's current 19 feet-9 inches to the 20-6 used in international competition. Teams, however, will be allowed to experiment at the longer distance.

''Shooting accuracy (from 3-point range) has fallen from 38.6 percent to 36.6 percent over the last three years,'' Steitz said. ''The committee feels that the college game has never been more exciting, as evidenced by the 30 games in the 1990 Division I Men's Basketball Championship that have been decided by five points or less.

''We think that at this time there is no reason to alter the distance.''

Teams will also be given the option to experiment with a ''no foul-out'' concept. Under that plan when a player is called for any foul after his fifth, the fouled player will have three foul shots to make two. This experiment replaces the six-foul trial used last season by the Big East and Southeastern conferences.

Steitz said the committee felt changes were needed to protect the image of the collegiate game. As a result, coaches or players assessed two techincal fouls for unsportsmanlike conduct will be ejected from the game.

The rule in which a coach is ejected after his team receives three bench technical fouls remains.

Other changes for next season include: A player fouled on an unsuccessful 3-point field goal attempt will receive three free throws; the 45-second clock will not be reset when a blocked shot goes out of bounds; a player may grasp or hang on the rim only if fouled or to avoid injury to himself or another player; only four players from each tam may line up on the lane during a foul shot; the channels on the ball may be deepened and widened (such as the ball used in the NBA) to accommodate better ballhanding and better shooting.

Steitz said five items were listed as ''points of emphasis'' for officials next season. They are coach and play decorum; rough low-post play; principle of verticality; palming the basketball; and the charge-block call.

(APRIL 3) UPI - President Bush is Indianapolis today to plant a tree in a ceremony to promote clean air legislation that's to be voted on in the Senate tonight. In remarks prepared for the ceremony, Bush called trees the ''sanctuaries of mankind.'' He also said he's proud of the clean-air bill that's aimed at making ''America cleaner and safer.'' Later, Bush is to address a fund-raiser for Indiana Senator Dan Coats.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell says he's pleased with some aspects of the clean air bill that's expected to be approved tonight. But he says there are some weaknesses, particularly in the area of reducing automobile tailpipe emissions. Mitchell says he will try to strengthen the bill in conferences with the House later this year... when congressional leaders try to hammer out differences between the two clean-air bills.

East Germany's Social Democratic Party reversed itself today and said it will begin talks with other parties to form a coalition government. Acting party chief Markus Meckel says his party will start negotiations with the three-party conservative Alliance for Germany and a smaller liberal group. The Alliance for Germany won the most parliamentary seats in the March 18th elections, followed by the Social Democrats.

The Soviet Union made another move today in its apparent effort to tighten control over rebellious Lithuania. Polish border guards say Moscow unexpectedly limited crossings at its border checkpoint between Poland and Lithuania. Poland has been a vocal supporter of the Baltic republic's push for independence and has hinted that it might be the first country to officially recognize an independent Lithuania.

LONDON (APRIL 3) UPI - Rebellious inmates fought a pitched battle Tuesday for control of a wing of a Victorian-era jail on the third day of their occupation of the facility in a clash that left 13 guards wounded, reports said.

The Home Ministry could not confirm numerous reports of fresh violence inside Strangeways Prison in Manchester, 200 miles northwest of London.

It said 47 inmates continued the seige that began on Sunday, when hundreds of prisoners rebelled, expelling guards and torching buildings in a protest against living conditions in the overcrowded facility.

Most have since surrendered, but the British Broadcasting Corp. reported ringleaders were apparently holding some who now wished to give up and leave the imposing red-brick complex.

It showed footage of one masked prisoner brandishing a knife and leading onto the roof a second man, who was stripped to the waist and had bound hands. Ringleaders threatened to throw their captive to the ground if police did not retreat, but the man was later led back inside, it said.

The state-funded station reported officers moved to occupy areas of the jail and extract about 20 prisoners who said they wished to leave during the handover of six inmates wounded in earlier clashes.

The BBC said rebel members bombarded the officers with a barrage of bricks and other projectiles in the two-hour-long battle in the sexual offenders wing, wounding 13 guards. No prisoners were hurt, it said.

Ivor Serle, a spokesman of the British Prisons Association, said many of the guards had broken bones, and one had a punctured lung.

At least 47 people - 35 prisoners and 12 prison workers - have been injured in other clashes.

''The prison staff have control of at least two thirds of the establishment. (The prisoners) have control of the higher areas,'' Serle said. ''No bodies have been found at all. I have a horrible gut feeling that there will be fatalities. I sincerely hope that I am wrong.''

The rebels have requested observers be allowed to enter the facility to disprove reports that about 20 inmates, mostly sex offenders, died in recriminatory violence in the absence of guards.

A delegation of prisoners earlier met Prison Governor Brendan O'Friel, who agreed that a journalist could attend the handover of the six wounded inmates.

The officials said O'Friel was trying to restore calm, but had no details of any other demands by the inmates.

The BBC said they would give up if their surrender was recorded by the media and witnessed by a member of Parliament.

''There are a lot more who want to (surrender), but unfortunately because of barricades in the establishment they are unable to get out,'' Serle said. ''Inmates who do not want to surrender, are in fact preventing them from taking (the barricades) down.''

As night fell, diehard prisoners brandishing banners huddled on the roof of a seized section of the imposing brick building, which was built in 1868 for 970 inmates, but now houses about 1,600.

They waved sheets on which had been written demands that members of Parliament and the media be allowed to enter, accounts of the ongoing battle for control of the facility, and statements that they had been threatened with death by authorities.

Officers reoccupied the kitchen and the food store, and were reported to have cut off all food, water and power to the besieged areas.

In another development, 33 prisoners occupied a wing of a second jail after guards thwarted a breakout attempt from the Long Lartin maximum security facility in the central English district of Worcestershire.

Officials said the group later surrendered.

Home Secretary David Waddington in Parliament on Monday promised a full inquiry into the Strangeways rebellion. The Prison Officers Association and opposition politicians condemned the government for not acting on warnings that rioting and disorder were inevitable unless staff was increased.

''If we treat men like animals we ought not be surprised when they behave like animals,'' said deputy Labor leader Roy Hattersley.

Waddington said the prison population nationally is now more than 2,100 below last year, while the total expediture on the system has risen by 20 percent in real terms in the past 12 months.

By 1992-93 another 10,000 places will be added to the prison system, he said.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - A bankruptcy judge said Tuesday he will reserve decision on unsealing documents used in an examiner's report that indicated Eastern's parent, Texas Air Corp., drained assets from the beleaguered subsidiary.

The Air Line Pilots Association asked that evidence in the report be made public, saying it will be essential when U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland considers the union's request for a trustee to oversee Eastern's operations.

''Common sense tells us the greater the motivation a corporation has to shield its operations, the greater is the public's need to know,'' said Howard Goldstein, an attorney for ALPA, at a hearing in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York.

The union, which has asked Lifland to appoint a trustee to assume control from Eastern's management, has claimed Texas Air is trying to liquidate, rather than rebuild, its financially ailing subsidiary.

''ALPA believes the appointment of a trustee to manage Eastern may be the only way to save the airline at this stage,'' Goldstein said.

Both Eastern and court-appointed examiner David Shapiro, who wrote a scathing report on the transfer of assets between Texas Air and Eastern, oppose making the information in the report public.

Shapiro said he was only able to gather evidence due to a guarantee of confidentiality that Lifland ordered last year. His report, released in early March, was based on a review of more than 300,000 pages of documents and testimony from some 170 witnesses.

''We never would have gotten any of the cooperation without that kind of assurance,'' Shapiro said. ''That's how we were able to get the job done. The examiner gave his word.

''Don't make me break my word,'' he said.

Shapiro's report found evidence Texas Air drained assets from Eastern before the carrier filed for bankruptcy protection in March 1989. It recommended Texas Air pay Eastern more than $280 million, saying several transactions between the two companies appeared to have left Eastern with less than fair market value.

The evidence that Shapiro used in drawing up the report also should be made public as the bankruptcy judge considers the proposed settlement between the two companies, the attorney for the pilots' union said.

Lawyers for several news media organizations, including The New York Times The Washington Post, the Miami Herald and Dow Jones & Co., publisher of The Wall Street Journal, joined in asking that the evidence be unsealed. The attorney for Eastern's machinists' union also supported the motion.

Eastern's attorney Robert Sisk, who opposed making the information public, argued the unions want the information ''to manipulate the media to get more bad press against Eastern.''

''We had nothing to hide then and we have nothing to hide now,'' Sisk said. ''What we don't want is to turn this into a media circus.''

Lifland did not indicate when he would issue a ruling on the request.

Eastern's creditors also have reportedly threatened to seek a trustee to assume control of the airline and sell off its assets.

The creditors had reached a tentative agreement with Eastern calling for the carrier to pay 50 cents on the dollar, but the deal collapsed last week. Eastern said it could not hold up its end of the bargain due to lower-than-anticipated revenues.

Eastern filed for bankruptcy protection five days after its unions launched crippling strikes. ALPA and the flight attendants' union have since abandoned their walkouts, but the International Association of Machinists remains on strike.

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, CA (APRIL 3) UPI - A unique winged rocket made of advanced, light-weight materials was readied Tuesday for a maiden launch Wednesday from a B-52 jet in a commercial venture to develop low-cost access to space.

The Pegasus rocket, a joint venture between Orbital Sciences Corp. of Fairfax, Va., and Hercules Aerospace Co. of Wilmington, Del., was scheduled to be dropped from the right wing of a NASA B-52 jet at 12:09 p.m. PDT over the Pacific Ocean southwest of Monteray, Calif.

Equipped with a broad 22-foot-wide 600-pound delta wing made of lightweight "composite" materials, the solid-fuel rocket's first stage motor was scheduled to ignite about five seconds after release from the jet at an altitude of 40,000 feet.

With the slender rocket flying due south about 60 miles southwest of Monteray, the Pegasus flight plan called for small steering fins to guide the missile sharply upward, exposing the wing to some 100,000 pounds of aerodynamic force within 15 seconds of first stage igntion.

The wing is bolted to the first stage of the 49.2-foot rocket, which was built to boost the spacecraft to a speed of about Mach 8 - eight times the speed of sound - before falling away.

Only the space shuttle flies at such extreme velocities and Orbital Sciences engineers had to rely on extensive computer modeling to design the first stage wing and maneuvering fins. The rocket's second and third stages are more conventional, using moveable nozzles and maneuvering thrusters for flight control.

Pegasus was built as a private venture to develop a low-cost means of putting small military, scientific and commercial satellites into orbit that do not require the services of larger, more expensive boosters.

The rocket is capable of putting satellites weighing up to 900 pounds into low-Earth orbits while payloads weighing up to 1,500 pounds can be launched on brief, sub-orbital flights.

David Thompson, chairman of Orbital Sciences Corp., told Aviation Week & Space Technology magazine last year "there is absolute growth in demand for launching satellites in the half-ton size range into low orbit."

For the program's maiden flight, a 450-pound satellite built for the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency - DARPA - was scheduled to be fired into a 370-mile-high orbit around Earth's poles. In addition, a modest NASA experiment was on board.

Orbital Sciences Corp., responsible for overall program management, has spent close to $50 million developing the exotic rocket, according to Aviation Week.

"While Orbital Sciences ... expects to recover total program development costs within the first 20 Pegasus launches, there are currently only two firm launches scheduled, both for (DARPA)," the magazine reported. "DARPA has agreed to pay $6 million for each launch."

Pegasus No. 1 was to be dropped from the same B-52 bomber used to launch manned X-15 rocket planes in the 1950s and 1960s. The B-52's pilot is former space shuttle commander Gordon Fullerton.

With the B-52 cruising at 80 percent the speed of sound, Fullerton planned to launch the rocket by flipping a switch in the cockpit, releasing it from a pylon on the jet's right wing. The missile's first stage motor was scheduled to ignite about five seconds later, quickly boosting the rocket toward space.

The rocket's second stage was to boost Pegasus to an altitude of 104 miles and a speed of more than 12,100 mph. The third stage was designed to put the rocket's payload into a 370-mile-high orbit.

By launching in mid-air, Pegasus could be built out of lighter materials, allowing heavier payloads to be placed into orbit than would be possible for a ground-based rocket of similar power.

"In addition, the Pegasus (trajectory) generates lower accelerations, dynamic pressures and structural and thermal stresses compared to ground-launched boosters, providing a more gentle ride to orbit for its satellite payloads," Orbital Sciences said in a brochure.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (APRIL 3) UPI - Actor John Cusack, star of the movie "Say Anything," pleaded innocent Tuesday to two drunken driving charges stemming from a collision with another vehicle.

Because the charge is a misdemeanor, Cusack, 23, of Beverly Hills, was not required to be in court for his arraignment. Instead, he entered his plea through his attorney, Michael Chaney. Cusack faces a May 4 pretrial hearing.

The District Attorney's Office said that Cusack was arrested by West Hollywood sheriff's deputies after his rented Jeep collided with another vehicle on Santa Monica Boulevard in the early morning hours of Feb. 23. Neither Cusack nor the driver of the other vehicle was injured.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - The Pentagon released Tuesday the first details of its long-secret F-117A stealth fighter, disclosing that 54 of the radar-evading bat-like jets are ready for combat and that they cost $106 million each.

''The F-117A is designed to penetrate dense-threat environments and attack high-value targets with pinpoint accuracy,'' Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said. ''It's especially tailored ... for night missions.''

Williams refused, however, to comment on a report that each F-117A can carry only one 2,000-pound laser-guided conventional bomb, and declined to say whether the fighters are nuclear-capable.

''The program remains classified,'' Williams said. ''It's able to carry the full range of tactical fighter ordnance. Beyond that, I don't think there's really much we can say at this point.''

He said the Air Force bought 59 F-117As from the Lockheed Corp. under a secret $6.25 billion program that began in 1978. Three planes have crashed. The final two are to be delivered this fall, for a total force of 56.

The F-117s are assigned to the 37th Tactical Fighter Wing at Tonopah Test Range airfield, 140 miles northwest of Las Vegas, Nev. The wing is scheduled to move this summer to Hollomon Air Force Base, N.M.

The Pentagon released a fact sheet on the plane, along with an 8 1/2-minute silent video of the aircraft taking off, landing and refueling in flight, and several color photographs of the awkward-looking fighter.

The F-117A will be publicly rolled out for view on April 21 at Nellis Air Force Base, Nev.

The black planes, which in flight resemble bats, first flew in 1981 and became part of the regular U.S. arsenal in 1983. Six were sent to Panama for the Dec. 20 U.S. invasion, although only two dropped two 2,000-pound bombs.

The Air Force did not even acknowledge the F-117A's existence until November 1988 - and then released only a grainy photograph of one plane.

Williams said he was releasing more information now because the fighter ''began to fly in the daytime (and) we need to exercise this capability in more realistic (military) exercises. ... You're going to be seeing more of it.''

The spokesman refused to discuss many of the plane's capabilities, including its speed other than to say it is ''high subsonic - not supersonic.'' That means it flies at less than 600 mph.

He said the fighter has ''self-defense capability,'' but no weapons were seen mounted on the craft for air-to-air combat, and he declined to be more specific.

The twin-engine single-seat planes have a wingspan of 43.4-feet. The jets are 12-feet high and 65-feet long.

The sinister-looking fighters are the older cousins of the B-2 stealth bomber, which cost $530 million each and was rolled into public view in November 1988.

The Pentagon said it paid $6.25 billion, including research and development, for the 59-plane aircraft program. Without development expenses, the Air Force said the fighter costs $42.6 million each.

The Air Force fact sheet said the F-117A ''can employ a variety of weapons and is equipped with sophisticated navigation and attack systems.''

Developed and produced in secrecy by Lockheed's ''Skunk Works'' facility in Burbank, Calif., the F-117A fighter - like Northrop Corp.'s B-2 bomber - is made of plastics and non-metallic composites that absorb rather than reflect radar beams and enable the craft to slip through enemy defenses.

Aviation Week & Space Technology reported Monday that the planes are designed to carry only a single laser-guided 2,000-pound bomb in its internal bomb bay.

This would be in keeping with the aircraft's performance in Panama, where two F-117As each dropped a 2,000-pound conventional bomb Dec. 20 near the barracks of a Panama Defense Forces garrison at Rio Hato to ''stun'' the enemy prior to a parachute drop by Army Rangers.

Another four F-117As circled overhead, but were never called into action in Panama, U.S. officials said.

Until the late 1980s, the Air Force went to great lengths to keep the planes from view of Soviet spy satellites, hiding them during the day in hangars at the Tonapah and Nellis bases and flying them only at night.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 3) UPI - Foreign Minister Moshe Arens called Iraqi President Saddam Hussein an obstacle to peace in the Middle East Tuesday and urged nations to take ''necessary steps'' to halt the threat of chemical weapons.

On Monday, Saddam threatened to use chemical weapons and wipe out half of Israel if any targets were attacked in Iraq. Israeli analysts believed Saddam's threats were aimed at halting any pre-emptive strikes following the discovery in London of Iraq-bound components necessary to trigger nuclear explosions.

Israel destroyed Iraq's Osirak nuclear reactor in 1981, considered the most advanced element of Baghdad's nuclear program.

Commenting on Saddam's threat, former Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin warned Monday that Israel could deliver a crushing blow against Iraq if it attacked.

Arens told the 10th Jerusalem Conference of Mayors Tuesday that civilized countries needed to take steps to deal with the threat.

''Can any civilized person in the world have any doubts that the security of the world and not just the security of Israel require that the necessary steps be taken by the international community so that never again will Iraq, or for that matter any other country, use chemical weaponry,'' Arens told mayors from the United States, Europe and Argentina.

Arens said the arsenal of weapons compiled by the Arab nations were ''larger than all of NATO,'' but he feared more the stockpile of chemical weapons by Iraq, Syria and Libya.

The foreign minister later met with U.S. Ambassador William Brown and repeated his condemnation of the Iraqi leader.

In negotiations to form a ruling parliamentary coalition, meanwhile, Labor leader Shimon Peres signed an agreement with the ultra-Orthodox Agudat Israel Party Tuesday, pledging its support for a Labor-led government.

But the pact did little to break the deadlock in the 120-seat Israeli parliament, or Knesset, which is divided down the middle between supporters of Labor and the rival Likud party to form a goverment.

As part of the agreement with Agudat Israel, Peres promised the party the Cabinet portfolios of housing and social welfare, chairmanship of the Parliament's finance committee, and stricter implementation of existing laws related to religious matters, Israel Radio reported.

A last-minute clause attached to the agreement by the party's council of rabbinic sages guaranteed the security and right to exist of Jewish settlements in the Israel-occupied territories, the radio reported.

In his speech, Arens also rejected criticism that Jewish settlement in the territories had hindered the peace process.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said in an interview published Monday in the Kuwaiti daily Al-Qabas that the settlements were illegal and ''could make the quest for peace in the region more difficult.''

Arens said the criticism had misdirected attention from ''the real obstacles to making peace in the Middle East.''

''Where is the obstacle to peace in the Middle East,'' Arens asked. ''Is it in Jerusalem. Is it in the Jerusalem neighborhoods. ... Is it in the Jewish towns and villages in Samaria and in Judea (the Biblical names for the West Bank)

''Or is it in Baghdad when Saddam Hussein says he has the chemical weaponry in order to wipe half of Israel off the earth and he is ready to use that weaponry at his disposal.''

In response to U.S. State Department criticism that Israel planned to start new settlements in the occupied territories, a spokesman for Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said government policy had not changed. As part of the 1988 coalition government agreement, eight settlements were scheduled to be opened during a four-year period and no other settlements were planned, said spokesman Yossi Achimeir.

Achimeir denied reports that Shamir had announced five new settlements in addition to the eight set forth in the coalition agreement. Achimeir said the agreement was still valid even though the coalition collapsed last month.

On Monday, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said in response to reports of new settlements that it was ''disturbing that an Israeli leadership, which was unable to move forward on peace, seems ready to move forward on new settlements.''

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - Doctors operated Tuesday on Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater, drilling a hole in his skull to implant a radioactive substance they hoped would attack a brain tumor.

Atwater, 39, was prepared for surgery early in the morning and Dr. Paul Kornblith, the head of neurosurgery at Montefiore Medical Center in the Bronx, began the complex procedure sometime before 11 a.m., said GOP aide Leslie Goodman. Goodman said that "as we understand it, (Atwater's) spirits were good" while he was being prepared for the operation.

The operation, which was performed under local anesthesia with doctors using a CAT scan for guidance, involved boring a hole in Atwater's skull and then implanting a tube in his brain that would drip radioactive isotopes onto the tumor. The tube would be removed after five days.

Doctors have classified the tumor, which is in the right frontal lobe of Atwater's brain, as an astrocytoma. Republican officials have called it "non-malignant." Atwater's wife, Sally, and his mother, Alma, were at his side before the operation, Goodman said.

The tumor was discovered last month after Atwater, who helped engineer President Bush's victory in 1988, fainted at a fund-raiser. At that time, aides said he would undergo regular radiation treatments and had an excellent chance of full recovery.

But Mary Matalin, Atwater's chief of staff, said Monday that doctors had determined the tumor "has the potential to behave aggressively." "After hearing this, Lee chose the most aggressive, concentrated, state-of-the-art method of radiation treatment available," Matalin said.

Because of swelling and other factors, doctors have said it will likely be several weeks before they know how well the new radiation procedure has worked.

BALTIMORE (APRIL 3) UPI - Scattered reports suggesting the AIDS epidemic may have peaked appear to be wrong, and could create dangerous complacency at a time when the deadly virus is spreading into populations once assumed safe, national AIDS leaders said Tuesday.

AIDS experts said a few recent studies suggesting the number of new AIDS cases is declining have led some people to conclude the problem has waned, when in fact, the disease shows no sign of abating in the United States.

Dr. James Allen, director of the National AIDS Program Office, said the United States has about 40,000 new AIDS cases a year, with conservative estimates showing some one million people have been infected.

Allen and others said there have been reports of a "leveling off" in the rate of increase in AIDS cases among homosexual men, especially in cities like Los Angeles, San Francisco, and New York, where AIDS found its base in the United States.

But Allen said the virus is showing up with greater frequency in some areas that traditionally have not had many AIDS cases, such as among heterosexuals, and in rural areas and cities with fewer than one million people. "The pattern is changing in different areas of the country," he told a four-day AIDS conference sponsored by Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions.

Dr. June Osborn, who chairs the National Commission on AIDS, said reported declines in new AIDS cases probably stem from an increase in the number of AIDS-infected people using drugs that can prolong life and delay onset of AIDS symptoms.

The numbers also do not reflect that about 15 to 20 percent of the AIDS cases are never reported, in part because deaths by AIDS patients are often attributed to AIDS-related illnesses such as pneumonia, she said.

"With all this chatter about decreases or a declining ... I think we are seeing less (reporting of AIDS cases) than we should," said Osborn, adding under-reporting could engender a false sense of security in some populations.

"The fact of the matter is that it is a sexually transmitted disease and not a homosexually transmitted disease," said Osborn, who claimed bureaucrats and the public have been slow to recognize that fact.

MONTPELIER, VT (APRIL 3) UPI - Vermont Gov. Madeleine Kunin, saying ''it is time to move on to new challenges,'' announced Tuesday that she will not seek a fourth term in office.

Vermont's first woman governor, surrounded by family, cabinet members and political aides, told reporters assembled in the Statehouse that she has gained a ''new sense of purpose'' and come to the realization that holding high office is not the only way to create change.

''I have reached the conclusion that I will not seek a fourth term as governor of the state of Vermont,'' Kunin said. ''It is time to move on to new challenges.''

Had she chosen to run again, the 56-year-old Democrat would likely have faced former four-term Vermont Gov. Richard Snelling, who has announced plans to seek the governorship again.

Lt. Gov. Howard Dean, a Democrat who has been mentioned as a possible political heir of Kunin's, said he is not sure about his plans.

For her part, Kunin said she plans to seek avenues of achievement outside of the world of politics, adding that she is looking forward to sharing her experiences as governor in a book, possibly as an inspiration to other women.

Although she is not sure exactly what she will do, Kunin said she wants to continue fighting for progress on such issues as the environment, women's rights, economic justice and education.

''The precise route, at this moment, as to how I will achieve these goals outside of electoral politics is not fully defined,'' Kunin said. ''But I know I will find a way, because my understanding, as well as my passion for these issues, is profound and enduring.''

''For better or worse, I am cursed with the compulsion to lead a life which relates to the public good,'' Kunin said. ''And that will continue.''

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - The Senate Commerce Committee approved controversial legislation Tuesday that would sharply raise fuel efficiency requirements for automakers so that cars would average 40 miles per gallon by the year 2001.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., was approved on a 14-4 vote and sent to the Senate floor, where Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine has promised it will receive speedy consideration.

The legislation would require a 40 percent increase in fuel efficiency from the current federal standard of 27.5 mpg.

Environmentalists have strongly supported Bryan's bill as a way to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil and also cut tailpipe emissions of carbon dioxide, the main pollutant linked to global warming.

Car manufacturers have strenuously opposed the measure, saying it would set an unrealistically high fuel economy standard and force the production of small cars at a time when Americans are buying bigger vehicles.

They also charge that higher fuel economy standards will do very little to reduce global warming because car emissions account for only a tiny fraction of carbon dioxide pollution, which also comes from factories and power plants.

The Bush administration opposed Bryan's efforts to insert his fuel economy measure in the Senate clean air bill and, in negotiations with the White House, Mitchell agreed to take it out.

But in a deal with Bryan to avoid a potentially disruptive floor fight over the clean air bill, Mitchell promised Bryan to give the fuel economy measure prompt consideration on the Senate floor later this year if Bryan agreed not to try and put it back in the clean air legislation.

Under Bryan's bill, automakers would have to achieve a fleetwide average of 34.4 mpg by the 1995 model year and 40.2 mpg by the year 2001.

Bryan said those improvements would save 49.1 billion gallons of gasoline between 1995 and 2001 and eliminate 483 million tons of carbon dioxide during the same period.

The commerce committee added an amendment to Bryan's bill that would give automakers a credit on the fuel efficiency ratings if they installed air bag safety devices in their small cars.

The air bag amendment by Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., was intended to address concerns raised by car manunfacturers that cars will have to be built with lighter materials to achieve the higher fuel economy standards, making them more dangerous in crashes.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker will stress U.S. concerns about the trouble in Lithuania when he meets with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze for three days of pre-summit talks, the State Department said Tuesday.

Shevardnadze, who arrived Tuesday for the talks beginning Wednesday afternoon, said he understands the U.S. concern over Lithuania. But he also told reporters that the United States needs to understand the Soviet side of the dispute.

Baker and Shevardnadze will open their talks Wednesday and follow up with two days of detailed discussions. The men are setting a date and preliminary agenda for this summer's summit meeting in Washington between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Shevardnadze said that another pre-summit session would probably be required because of the number of issues to discuss. If another meeting is held, Baker would have to travel to Moscow.

''I think that there will be a need for another ministerial meeting before the summit in order to prepare well all those documents that will be signed during the summit,'' Shevardnadze said.

The Soviets are also expected to inform the U.S. side that Soviet ambassador Yuri Dubinin will be replaced this summer by Aleksander Bessmertnykh, currently the first deputy to Shevardnadze and head of the North American department of the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

''You can be sure that Lithuania will be at the top of Secretary Baker's agenda,'' said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

Shevardnadze arrived in Washington one day after Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis said his Baltic republic did not want to threaten political reforms in the Soviet Union and may be willing to put off establishing full independence.

Landsbergis made his remarks to the Lithuanian Parliament, which convened to discuss Gorbachev's demand that the republic rescind its March 11 declaration of independence.

Referring to Lithuania, Shevardnadze at first told reporters ''this is an internal Soviet matter,'' but he added ''this would not be an appropriate answer.''

''I understand the American feelings about events in Lithuania,'' Shevardnadze said.

He compared the trouble in Lithuania to the devastating earthquakes in San Francisco and the Soviet republic of Armenia and the subsequent international effort to assist the victims.

''Whatever happens is felt elsewhere. This is true not only in nature, but also in the social and political world. I do appreciate the American concern about the future of the the Lithuanian people,'' Shevardnadze said.

''But, equally, you must understand the importance of Lithuania for the Soviet people and the Soviet nation and our concern for our constitution '' he said.

Shevardnadze explained that the Soviet government is in the process of preparing a new constitution, but in the meantime ''the old one is still in effect.'' The Soviet government maintains that the existing constitution prohibits unilateral secession by the republics.

But Shevardnadze concluded on a conciliatory note.

''Our main weapon in resolving issues is dialogue, an honest dialogue. This is what we are looking forward to,'' he said.

The State Department said Baker and Shevardnadze are expected to discuss arms control, regional issues such as Afghanistan and the Middle East, bilateral topics such as trade, and other subjects such as terrorism, drugs, the environment and human rights.

JERUSALEM (APRIL 3) UPI - Israel launched its second satellite into orbit Tuesday, nearly 19 months after placing its first one in space and a day after Iraq's Saddam Hussein threatened the Jewish state with destruction.

Journalists gathered along the coast to watch the Shavit launcher rocket blast Ofek 2, Hebrew for Horizon 2, skyward. The rocket lifted off westward from central Israel toward the Mediterranean Sea at 3 p.m. and placed the octagonal, solar-powered satellite into orbit.

Ofek 2, described as a ''scientific experimental satellite,'' dipped within 126 miles at its lowest point of its elliptical orbit around the earth, Israel Aircraft Industries said in a statement.

''All went well. At this moment it must have completed its first round,'' Akiva Bar Nun, coordinator of the Israel Space Agency, told Army Radio two hours after launch.

Speculation over the imminent launch of Ofek 2 had been in the media for several weeks, and Israeli officials dismissed suggestions the timing of the launch was connected to Saddam's threats Monday to wipe out half of Israel with chemical weapons if any targets within Iraq were attacked.

Iraq also in December 1989 successfully launched a rocket capable of carrying satellites into space and test-fired two long-range missiels with a range of 1,200 miles.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, in congratulating the scientific community for Tuesday's successful launch of Ofek 2, said, ''Our strength and ability are conditioned by enterprise, scientific capabilities and performances, as executed in the launching of the second satellite.''

Israel Television reported the satellite launch had ''no direct military significance.'' Dismissing reports the Israeli satellite was related to military uses, Bar Nun said the launch was part of the space industry's attempt to ''prove its capability'' for marketing and determine that all components of the satellite systems work.

IAI said the technical goals of Ofek 2 were to ''augment space technology, to verify the ability for two-way communication with the satellite including transmission of commands from a ground station as well as the remote control of onboard systems, (and) to test the functioning of onboard systems during their exposure to space conditions, specifically those designed for future Israeli satellites.''

The satellite, 7 feet by 4 feet weighed 352 pounds, nine pounds more than its predecessor. Bar Nun said changes over Ofek 1 included improvements in cosmic radiation protection, increased computer memory and the possibility of two-way communication.

''All these changes needed 18 months of work,'' Bar Nun said. ''This is a slow process. ... Additionally we are planning a scientific satellite for 1992 for astronomic observation work. They have no military purpose.''

At the time Ofek 1 was launched, Israeli officials denied the satellite launching represented a new stage in the Middle East arms race.

But Israeli analysts said the launching constituted the start of the spread of the regional arms race into space, revealed Israel's rocket-missile long-range capabilities and noted further development could be used as an important deterrent factor.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Memory skills needed for everday tasks may be worse in the morning than later in the day, scientists reported Tuesday.

Studies of laboratory monkeys indicate the animals seem to have less ''working'' memory shortly after their morning wake-up call than in the afternoon, researchers said. Working memory is a type of short-term memory used for many common tasks, such as looking up a telephone number and dialing it, they explained.

In findings presented to the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, Susan Drastal of the Veterans Administration Medical Center in East Orange, N.J., and her colleagues said they were surprised to find monkeys' memories were most vulnerable in the morning, rather than late afternoon as they had expected.

Drastal's evaluated the memory capacity of three rhesus monkeys, who were trained to ''work'' 12-hour shifts pressing levers to earn food. Normally, the monkeys only made one to three mistakes a day.

When the animals were given a memory-challenging drug intended to mimic stresses humans might encounter on the job, researchers said the animal's error rate rose dramatically in the morning. When the drug was given in the afternoon, fewer mistakes were made than in the morning - leading scientists to conclude short-term memory capacity is better later in the day.

Drastal said her team believes the monkeys are good models for studying what might happen with human memory, saying the animals follow human sleep patterns and perform their tasks ''just like factory workers.''

Although no similar studies have been conducted in humans, the biomedical researcher said her findings suggest employers might want to be prepared ''for a time in the morning where workers are vulnerable to a decrease in performance.'' Possible ways of gettng around the potential problem may be to move less difficult tasks to the start of the workday or schedule earlier breaks, she said.

Researchers said they do not know what might make memory more susceptible to stress early in the day. But Drastal speculated that perhaps the brain's chemical system is better adapted to cope with stress later in the workday, when fatigue usually sets in, than in the morning.

The study did not look at the monkeys' long-term memory or at how well the animal's body processed the memory-stressing drug at different times of day, Drastal said. The New Jersey team is now studying whether memory-enhancing drugs can offset the memory deficit caused by morning stress.

KATMANDU, NEPAL (APRIL 3) UPI - Some 35,000 protesters demanding the legalization of political parties held control of a suburb Tuesday and trapped more than 300 police officers who were sent in to quell demonstrations against the Himalayan kingdom's government.

A rainstorm ended the demonstration in the barricaded suburb of Patan, a mile outside the capital, where protesters dug pits to block government vehicles and set fire to a bulldozer carrying police who were trying to enter.

The demonstrators, who listened to local communist leader Siddhi Lal Singh before they broke up, planned to take to the streets again on Wednesday.

Medical sources reported at least seven people were killed and 15 injured in battles between protesters and authorities on Monday.

Meanwhile, talks between Nepal and India failed to end a 13-month Indian trade boycott that is strangling Nepal's impoverished economy. The negotiations broke down after India demanded its troops be allowed to patrol Nepal's border with China, a source said.

At least 23 people have been killed by police and thousands have been arrested since Feb. 18 when the banned Nepal Congress party and seven leftist parties launched the democracy movement. It has turned into the biggest wave of political unrest since 1979 and rocked King Birendra's near-absolute rule over the mountainous South Asian nation of 19 million.

Some 3,000 people besieged Teaching Hospital, a hotbed of opposition activity, and refused to allow police to remove the bodies of three people shot Monday. Doctors lay down in front of police vans at the hospital entrance and said the bodies would be handed over only to relatives.

In the end, an agreement was reached with relatives and the medical staff, allowing police to take the bodies, presumably to be created.

Katmandu, studded with pagoda-style Hindu and Buddhist temples, looked like a battle-scarred city as police moved out again to quell demonstrations. The streets were littered with stones and still in place were the roadblocks erected by residents to prevent police vehicles from entering the town.

On Monday night, demonstrators, many of them armed with sickles, hoes and homemade weapons, rampaged through the streets, which were plunged into darkness by a lights-out protest organized by the opposition.

Foreign tourists and residents were stopped by the crowds as they drove in the area and told to turn out their car lights. The foreigners were not mistreated. Himalayan hiking, which lured many of the country's 266,000 tourists last year, continued untroubled in rural areas, it was reported.

In 1979, when the king was confronted by similar student-led demonstrations, he called a referendum which narrowly endorsed a system of panchayat, or elected councils, which outlaws political parties.

The king reportedly again was trying to introduce reforms to the panchayat system to quell the crisis but the opposition has stood firm in its demand for a multi-party system.

The unrest has forced the government to close nearly all Katmandu Valley schools and campuses which have been centers of the protest movement.

Residents of the capital reported police fled from many parts of the city Monday night after running out of tear gas shells.

Demonstrators shouting, ''We want democracy'' and ''Down with the panchayat system'' went on a rampage throughout the city Monday night, stoning houses of prominent pro-government politicians and the office of the Katmandu mayor.

They also smashed police booths and burned panchayat effigies during the nighttime violence while torchlight processions moved throught the streets.

The Indo-Nepali talks over a 13-month trade boycott India has imposed on its landlocked neighbor, meanwhile, broke down after Nepal rejected demanded proposals on a joint patrol of the 500-mile border with China.

Such a patrol would soothe Indian fears of Chinese surprise attack through Tibet and its concern that Chinese road and other aid projects in Nepal could threaten Indian security and influence.

Both countries issued a statement saying the two days of talks were in preparation for the visit of Indian External Affairs Minister I.K. Gujral ''to establish a framework of enduring relationship.''

DETROIT (APRIL 3) UPI - Chrysler Corp. announced Tuesday it has appointed a distributorship to sell Jeep vehicles in Saudi Arabia after an absence of nearly 25 years.

Sources said the decision to re-enter that Middle Eastern market came after Jeep vehicles were reportedly dropped last year from a boycott list circulated by the Arab League of Nations, a group of Arab countries that coordinate various policies in the region.

The Arab League's list contains mostly U.S. goods because of America's support for Israel. Jeep was added to the list when it was still part of American Motors Corp., which Chrysler bought in August 1987.

Starting late this year, Chrysler will sell the Jeep Cherokee and Wrangler sport utility vehicles, as well as its Dodge Dynasty and Spirit sedans, through sole distributor United Arab Motors Corp., said Michael Hammes, Chrysler's vice president of international operations.

Chrysler has been selling only a few hundred of its other vehicles each year in the Middle East, company spokeswoman Karen Stewart said. The company's Saudi Arabian sales are expected to increase to between 1,200 and 1,500 vehicles a year, she said.

Both General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. currently market U.S.-made vehicles in various Middle Eastern nations. Ford returned to the market in late 1986 after its name was dropped from the boycott list.

The Chrysler vehicles will be sold through three facilities now under construction in the cities of Riyadh, Dammam, and Jeddah. They will employ a total of 225 people to service and sell Chrysler products.

UAnited Arab Motors was founded in 1975 by Omar Aggad, chairman of Aggad Investment Co. Through partnerships with other Saudi Arabian and forign investors, Aggad operates 18 manufacturing plants involved in construction insurance, confectioneries and bottled water.

NEW YORK (APRIL 3) UPI - Morale is sinking fast at Exxon Corp. and some employees openly discuss voting their shares of stock against Chairman Lawrence Rawl at the oil giant's Apr. 25 annual meeting in Houston, Fortune reported Tuesday.

The magazine also said ''about a third of Exxon's 300 top managers and staff'' have given notice they will not move when corporate headquarters is transferred from New York to Dallas this summer.

Fortune said they are leaving Exxon ''even though most of them are at the pinnacle of their careers in a company many join for life.''

One high-level Exxon executive independently told United Press International that he would vote his shares to oust Rawl and that he knew of other company managers planning to do the same because of disenchantment with the chairman's leadership.

Exxon spokeswoman Mary Duffy said the company had confirmed last week that 100 of the 300 members of the headquarters staff would not be moving with the company to Dallas.

She said all the top management - four senior vice presidents and seven vice presidents - as well as other managers are moving to Dallas. ''All the senior people are going,'' Duffy said. ''We're not breaking it down any further than that.''

Noting that some of the corporate staff are not managers, the spokeswoman added, ''It's erroneous to say 100 top managers are not going.''

Most of those staying want to remain in the New York area and ''it's erroneous to link their decision to morale,'' Duffy said.

In a surprise announcement last October, Exxon said it would move to Dallas in August. Rawl, who has a ranch near Dallas, told then New York mayoral candidate Rudolph Giuliani in a letter that it had become too difficult to persuade top managerial talent to come to New York City.

Fortune said employee dissatisfaction is not the result of last year's Exxon Valdez spill of 11 million gallons of crude oil into Alaska's Prince William Sound, the largest oil spill in U.S. history, nor the handling of the cleanup.

''It's what they perceive to be a lack of leadership,'' said the article, written by Fortune staff writer Peter Nulty.

One angry high-level manager was quoted as saying, ''The company is going down the poop chute.''

The article said, ''Where Exxon looks chiefly vulnerable is leadership. Rawl and his team appear to lack the ability to understand people and to inspire them.''

Rawl's inept response to the March 24, 1989, Alaska spill ''is fast becoming the stuff of PR (public relations) legend,'' the article said.

Although Exxon still shows impressive financial figures, Fortune said, ''The company is suffering from a loss of heart. If its leaders don't do something about it, Exxon risks a long, slow decline into mediocrity.''

In January, a Fortune poll found that Exxon has seriously slipped in the esteem of its corporate peers since the Alaska spill.

Exxon had dropped from sixth in 1988 among the 305 most admired U.S. corporations to 110 in Fortune's annual poll of high corporate executives, directors and financial analysts.

(APRIL 3) UPI - Kentucky state police report that a Trailways bus was hit by sniper fire this morning in continuing violence apparently related to the month-old Greyhound strike. The Pentagon says it bought 59 of the radar-evading fighters- the older cousins of the B-2 stealth bomber. Officials say the total cost for the 59 radar-evading fighter planes is six-BILLION 200-Million dollars. The first FA flew nine years ago, and two were used in the U-S invasion of Panama last December.

(APRIL 3) UPI - Israel's foreign minister responded today to threats from Iraq's President Saddam Hussein, saying Saddam is an obstacle to peace in the Middle East. The Iraqi president yesterday threatened to use chemical weapons and wipe out half of Israel, if the Jewish state attacks any targets in Iraq. Israeli analysts think the threats are prompted by fears following the discovery in London last week of nuclear weapons parts that were bound for Iraq.

Arab diplomatic sources say P-L-O chief Yasser Arafat will hold an unprecedented meeting with former President Jimmy Carter tomorrow in Paris. NO details of the talks are available. But the sources say the two will discuss the Mideast peace process. Carter and Arafat were originally scheduled to meet for the first time in Tunisia last month, but Arafat canceled.

Opening statements are taking place today in the New York fraud trial of former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos and Saudi Arabian arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi. Federal prosecutor Debra Livingston described the defendants as ''partners in crime'' who conspired to hide Millions of dollars. The money allegedly was taken from the Philippines treasury during the reign of Ferdinand Marcos.

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (APRIL 3) UPI - Members of President-elect Violeta Chamorro's National Opposition Union Tuesday opposed giving any military post to Defense Minister Humberto Ortega - President Daniel Ortega's brother - when the new government takes power later this month.

''It is unacceptable that leading members of the Sandinista Front continue in high level army posts,'' said a communique from the UNO political council.

The commuique followed comments by Ortega that he would accept a post in the army when Chamorro takes office April 25 and highlighted differences within the 14-party coalition that is negotiating a transition with the outgoing Sandinista government.

UNO spokesman Luis Sanchez said last week that Ortega ''would have the option of being chief of staff or any other post in the military structure'' if he resigns his Sandinista Party position.

Adolfo Jarquin, a deputy elected under the UNO banner, said the commitment to the Nicaraguan people was to change ''all power structures, including the military and the police.''

The Nicaraguan Catholic Church's Radio Catolica broadcast comments made by Ortega Monday during a two-day Central American summit in the Pacific resort town of Montelimar.

''If I want to be in the military, I will not be a member of the Sandinista leadership,'' Ortega said. ''If I want to be a politician ... then I'll leave the army and become a politician.

''I live the military life,'' he said. ''As long as there is no problem, why should I leave the military if I haven't had any major problems?'' Ortega asked the reporter from Radio Catolica at the summit, attended by five Central American presidents.

The Sandinista Front, which will hand over power April 25 to Chamorro's U.S.-backed National Opposition Alliance, signed agreements last week that separate the military from political parties and bans members of the armed forces from playing major political roles.

Ortega, the brother of President Daniel Ortega, accepted the agreements, saying, ''The army has to be apolitical and constitutional.''

Ortega also said he did not mind that the Sandinista Popular Army would have to change its name under Chamorro.

''It would be beautiful ... if the new army were called 'Defender of National Sovereignty','' Ortega said, referring to the name given to the forces under Gen. Augusto Sandino, who fought U.S. Marines in Nicaragua between 1927 and 1934.

The Sandinista National Liberation Front, which ousted dictator Anastasio Somoza in 1979, is named for the former guerrilla leader.

MONTELIMAR, NICARAGUA (APRIL 3) UPI - Five Central American presidents entered the second day of a beachside summit Tuesday, planning to call for the disbanding of Nicaragua's Contra rebels by April 20, participants in the meeting said.

''April 20 must be the maximum deadline,'' Costa Rican President Oscar Arias said Tuesday before the presidents met for the second and last day of the regional summit. ''We must support the Toncontin accords.''

The Toncontin Declaration was signed March 23 between negotiators of the U.S.-funded Contras and representatives of Nicaraguan President-elect Violeta Chamorro, in which the rebels agreed to disband as a result of Chamorro's Feb. 25 election victory. Chamorro is to take office April 25.

Diplomats said such a joint call by the presidents of Nicaragua, El Salvador, Costa Rica, Honduras and Guatemala would be an important symbolic gesture, but would probably not induce the rebels to lay down their weapons so soon.

''It will increase the pressure on them by setting a specific date for the demobilization, even if that date is not meetable,'' said a diplomat involved in international efforts to disband an estimated 10,000 rebels.

Ortega, Arias and presidents Alfredo Cristiani of El Salvador, Rafael Callejas of Honduras and Vinicio Cerezo of Guatemala were expected to issue a joint statement at the end of the summit Tuesday afternoon.

The leaders invited Chamorro to attend the closing ceremony.

Diplomats involved in the talks said the joint statement would probably also endorse Cristiani's plans to resume peace talks with the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, the leftist guerrilla group that has waged a 10-year-old civil war in El Salvador.

The rebel FMLN, as the front is known from its Spanish initials, sent a letter to the five presidents Monday with proposals for the peace talks. Rebel and government delegations wil begin U.N.-mediated preliminary talks Wednesday in Geneva.

Cristiani confirmed receiving the letter and said agreement was possible on some of the points.

Rebel demands include a reduction in the Salvadoran armed forces and a plebiscite to change Salvadoran electoral laws before 1991 elections.

Sources close to the summit said the final declaration will also endorse the role of the United Nations and the Organization of American States in efforts to bring about the demobilization of the Contras.

Arias said the declaration would include a call for economic aid for Central America and added that future summits between Central American leaders would focus more on economic than political issues.

The summit at Montelimar, a newly constructed beach resort on Nicaragua's Pacific coast, about 35 miles southeast of the capital, was the seventh time the leaders of Central America have met since May 1986.

In August 1987, the five regional leaders signed the Central American peace plan drafted by Arias, calling for each government to adopt democratic reforms as a way of defusing armed opposition movements active in Nicaragua, El Salvador and Guatemala.

The plan won Arias the 1987 Nobel Peace prize and worldwide recognitin for his efforts to put it into effect. Many experts on Central American affairs say it was Arias' plan which induced Ortega's Sandinista government to hold free and fair elections in February.

Analysis By: Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (APRIL 3) UPI - As a TV soap actress, Julia Campbell was a bottom-dweller in filmdom's caste system.

Riding at the top of the hierarchy is the movie star: Kevin Costner, Meryl Streep. Next comes the movie character actor: Jason Robards, Olympia Dukakis. Then come TV's sitcom stars - Bill Cosby, Roseanne Barr - followed by TV drama stars, Ed Asner, Angela Lansbury.

A fathom or two below them come made-for-TV-movie stars: Richard Chamberlain, Lindsay Wagner. Nearing the bottom, there are TV's second bananas: Richard Moll, Rue McClanahan. Then comes the bottom - the soap "star."

Prestige, of course, has little to do with earnings or even popularity. Cosby and Barr earn more every year than do Costner or Streep. And TV performers are seen by millions of people at a sitting. Movie performers play to the hundreds, or thousands if you count wide release.

All the same, it is the goal of most TV performers to become movie stars. Film stars don't have to work as hard or as often. They are well paid, more respected and, by and large, play more interesting and challenging roles.

Some performers move up in the hierarchy from TV to films. Bruce Willis is a prime example. Some move up and bomb - Roseanne Barr, for instance. A handful have done both - Michael J. Fox, Shelly Long.

Much more rare is the quantum leap from the sub-basement, soaps. But Campbell did it, leap-frogging from soap operas to a co-starring role with comedian Dana Carvey in the current top-ten film "Opportunity Knocks."

Campbell spent a year each in two soaps, "Ryan's Hope" and "Santa Barbara " as have scores of other anonymous young actresses who doubtless dreamed of broader horizons. Not only has she made an impressive debut in a mainstream movie, she stars in the new TV series "The Witches of Eastwick."

"There comes a time when you're working in soaps that you decide whether you want to limit your career to daytime series acting," said the former Army brat who grew up on bases scattered around the world.

Abandoning daytime TV was relatively easy. She was fired, twice. "It wasn't that they were displeased with my work," she said, laughing. "The turnover on both shows is amazing. The writers can't figure out what to do with characters, so they write them out.

"They fire you when they don't know where a character is going. 'Ryan's Hope' gave me a fabulous story line, but everyone involved left. So I remained as a kind of oddball character with two years left on my contract. My agents said, 'If you're not going to use her, let her go.'

"Then I went on 'Santa Barbara.' They teamed me up with a guy the viewers didn't approve of. So they fired him and others I played opposite until they found a guy they wanted to build up. They made a murderess out of my character and that finished me off. I got canned again.

"Leaving the soaps was the best thing that happened to me. My characters were great, acting wise. I got a lot of experience and fan mail. I was lucky, too, because I didn't stay around long enough to get locked into either role, which is what happened to Susan Lucci with her role of Erica Kane. No one associates me with Katie Ryan or Courtney Capwell.

"Immediately after I left 'Santa Barbara,' ABC-TV offered me a three-year contract for yet another soap, 'All My Children.' By that time I had made the important decision not to spend more time in soaps. I kept saying no when they badgered me to accept the part.

"My agent advised me to take the ABC job because he didn't want me to be hurting financially. He promised to get me a lot of money. I fired my agent and got a new one. "Almost immediately I was cast in a prime-time comedy series, 'Women in Prison,' playing the lead for 13 weeks.

"It was a good way to break the soap opera pattern. The sitcom brought me to the attention of Ron Howard's Imagine company, which cast me in the series 'Knight and Daye' with Jack Warden, and after that the movie, 'Opportunity Knocks.' "It's been a wonderful transition from soaps to films and primetime. It's exciting to think about what might happen next."

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - The House sided with President Bush and rejected attempts Tuesday to cut a $720 million aid package for the newly democratic nations of Nicaragua and Panama from a $2.4 billion emergency spending bill.

The House was expected to approve the measure later in the day, setting up a battle with the Senate. Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine has vowed to lead attempts to slash the aid request unless Bush sends Congress an overall plan for spending money overseas.

Lawmakers voted overwhelmingly against plans that would have reduced or eliminated $300 million in aid for Nicaragua, where opposition leader Violetta Chamorro recently upset Sandinista leader Daniel Ortega in a presidential election, and $420 million for Panama, where a democratic government took over after a U.S. invasion last December that ousted military leader Manuel Noriega.

Bush had requested $500 million for Panama but the House Appropriations Committee cut it to $420 million, putting the other $80 million into other aid and refugee programs Bush accepted.

Flying to Detroit for a political appearance, Bush told reporters ''it was absolutely essential'' that Congress not cut the package further.

''It is in the best interest of the United States,'' Bush said. ''It is in the best interest of democracy in our own hemisphere.''

The aid package is part of a ''dire emergency'' supplemental spending bill for the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30. The $2.4 billion bill is generally supported by Bush, who asked Congress to complete action by April 5 before leaving for its Easter recess.

Rep. Nick Joe Rahall, D-W.Va., said in support of his amendment eliminating the aid package altogether that ''I do not believe we have the resources to continue assisting foreign countries while we have significant unmet needs at home.''

''Communism is no longer our enemy around the world, competition is,'' he said during debate that grew loud and angry at times. ''Let's retool. Let's rebuild America first. These other counties use our foreign aid to put their number one interests first. Let America put our interest first.''

Supporters of the aid package said the United States has a moral obligation to help Panama and Nicaragua after years of calling for democracy in those totalitarian nations.

''There is no free world,'' said Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee. ''It costs money to promote peace and democracy. This amdendment that you offer hear today snatches defeat from the jaws of victory.''

House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., told reporters Tuesday Mitchell ''was making his own statement'' on the bill but said he did not think ''all of the funding has to provided immediately,'' as Bush wants.

''I don't particularly feel that exact dates or targets have to be met,'' Foley said. ''In reality, we will provide most of this aid, not all of it.''

The bill, which includes $870 million in total foreign and refugee aid, also includes $1.5 billion in other domestic spending for agencies and programs in need of cash.

To partially offset the cost of the bill, it cuts Pentagon spending by $1.79 billion - a figure accepted by Bush.

The only part of the bill Bush disliked was $443 million to reimburse states and federal agencies for the cost of fighting Western fires two years ago.

Programs funded by the huge spending bill include:

-$70 million in refugee assistance in the United States, $25 million for refugee assistance outside the United States and $5 million to help Soviet Jews resettle in Israel.

-$30 million to restore African aid cut earlier.

-$20 million to aid to Eastern Caribbean nations, including $5 million to help them clean up from Hurricane Hugo.

-$111 million in additional disaster assistance, mostly to help Southeastern states recover from floods this spring.

-$510 million for food stamps.

-$390 million for the Department of Veterans Affairs.

-$50 million for to assist poor people pay high December heating bills.

-$6 million to help fund a registry to assist those in need of bone marrow transplants.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, HAITI (APRIL 3) UPI - Haitian authorities attempted Tuesday to talk an armed security guard into leaving an American Airlines airbus he seized 24 hours earlier in an apparent attempt to hijack it to the United States, U.S. Embassy and airline spokesmen said.

No passengers or crew were on the plane, which was parked at Port-au-Prince airport, officials said. "The Haitians seem to have everything under control," U.S. Embassy spokesman Bruce Brown said Tuesday afternoon.

The unidentified man, who is in the military and works at the airport, apparently commandeered a catering truck and drove up to the plane about 6:30 p.m. Monday as it was being prepared for a regularly scheduled daily flight to John F. Kennedy airport in New York, American Airlines spokeswoman Mary O'Neill said from the company's headquarters in Fort Worth, Texas.

"He worked in security so he had all of the proper identification and passes to approach the plane," she said. There were no passengers on the Airbus and a handful of caterers and flight attendants quickly evacuated the wide bodied aircraft when the man came on board, she said.

"We understand he is armed but we don't know with what," O'Neill said. The man apparently is demanding passage to New York. She said a team of neogtiators from the Federal Bureau of Investigation were scheduled to fly from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Port-au-Prince to help Haitian authorities in the ongoing negotiations.

A State Department official in Washington said the United States has allowed hijackers, and others who have seized property, into the United States, but said the country's general policy was to refuse such demands.

"They have been allowed in on occasion but we try to discourage it," said the official, who asked not to be identified. "Our basic policy is to not reward terrorists or hijackers or help them attain their goals in any way."

Brown said the situation at the airport appeared calm and that some U.S. officials were on the scene to offer the Haitians assistance. American Airlines cancelled its daily service from New York to Port-au-Prince pending the outcome of the situation.

Haiti's troubled political climate flared again last month when former military dictator Prosper Avril was forced from office in a popular revolt and replaced with a transitional civilian government. Following the ouster members of the military and civilians clashed in a number of protests.

WASHINGTON (APRIL 3) UPI - Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said Tuesday the Justice Department would review charges that personnel may have leaked damaging and false information about Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., the third-ranking Democrat in the House.

Although an FBI investigation completed in December found no criminal wrongdoing in the case, Thornburgh said he would order an independent office at the department to review the FBI report.

Thornburgh made his comments at a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing, where Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., said the department's quasi-independent Office of Professional Responsibility should review the FBI investigation before the case is closed. The office oversees the ethical conduct of department officials.

''The criminal investigation said there wasn't any reason to bring (criminal or disciplinary) charges,'' Thornburgh said. ''I have asked the Office of Professional Responsibility to review the report and to provide me with their (recommendation.) At that point I will begin to assess whether any disciplinary action is warranted.''

Gray's office would not comment on Thornburgh's decision.

One House official familiar with the charges called the decision an ''interim step'' that keeps the case open.

The initial FBI investigation was spurred by embarrassing disclosures in the press last year that the Justice Department had interviewed Gray and was conducting an investigation of Gray, who succeeded Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., as assistant House Democratic leader.

Gray denied the charges and accused the department of trying to soil his reputation at a time he was seeking the No. 3 Democratic leadership position in the House.

The Justice Department responded to the charges by saying it was not investigating Gray but a former staff member who worked in Gray's office.

Biden and other Democratic lawmakers were incensed over the department's treatment of Gray and insisted that Thornburgh appoint an independent prosecutor to reveal and prosecute the source of the leak.

Thornburgh refused to appoint a special prosecutor, and said he would direct the FBI to investigate the matter.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (APRIL 3) UPI - Heavily armed soldiers and police patrolled strife-torn areas of Natal province Tuesday, and reinforcements began mobilizing in an effort to halt a week of fighting that has left 55 dead, scores wounded and thousands homeless.

Witnesses said there were many army troops in the ravaged area of the Edendale Valley on the outskirts of Natal's capital of Pietermaritzburg. Some left their armored personnel carriers to chat with residents and buy snacks at food stalls.

The troops were first deployed when the fighting between rival black factions erupted a week ago and reinforcements promised by President Frederik de Klerk were not expected to begin arriving before Wednesday, police spokesman Maj. Piet Kitching said.

''Logistical aspects must be finalized. This cannot take place immediately '' Kitching said. ''Within the next few days, however, a greater security force presence should be possible.''

African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela gave a measured reaction to de Klerk's order Monday that army troops help police curb the wave of violence that has erupted since February when de Klerk released Mandela from prison and lifted a ban on the ANC.

Although Mandela said it was ''encouraging'' to see de Klerk concerned about the violence, he lashed out at the Minister of Law and Order Adriaan Vlok as the worst police minister in South African history and said allegations of police talking sides in the Natal conflict were ''very grave.''

''There is no doubt that the perception now has taken firm hold that one of our problems is the attitude of the police. It is quite clear that the police have lost all credibility,'' Mandela said.

He also criticized de Klerk for taking ''unilateral'' actions without consulting with local black leaders and said any measures implemented without discussions at the local level were ''bound to be ineffective.''

Police in the Natal area have been accused by the ANC and other anti-apartheid groups of supporting the rival Zulu movement Inkatha of Mangosuthu Buthelezi in the conflict, which has left some 3,000 dead since 1987.

At least 55 people have been killed in the past week and 13,000 left temporarily homeless.

Mandela was shown the burned body of one person killed in the figthing during a tour of ravaged areas Tuesday. He said, ''It was an experience I hope never to see again.''

Mandela is scheduled to meet de Klerk Thursday to discuss the ANC's decision to suspend April 11 talks that had been scheduled to discuss obstacles standing in the way of formal power-sharing negotiations.

He denied reports of a split in the leadership of the ANC as ''incorrect'' and insisted the talks were suspended in retaliation for the deaths of 11 anti-government demonstrators who were killed when police fired on a crowd eight days ago in the black township of Sebokeng.

''It is a typical attitude of the average white man both inside and outside the country of looking at the problems of the country from the point of view of the white minority of the country,'' Mandela said. ''The lives of blacks are (regarded as) not so important as to warrant the taking of retaliatory measures. We don't accept that.''

Mandela declined to say whether he would raise the issue of Vlok during the talks with de Klerk but indicated the incident at Sebokeng and the Natal situation would be central to their meeting. ''We won't allow the government to negotiate on the one hand and conduct war with the other,'' he said.

De Klerk stuck to his reform agenda Monday and unveiled proposed legislation to grant indemnity from prosecution to exiled ANC leaders to allow them to return to South Africa for talks.

In an unusual announcement, the End Conscription Campaign, a white organization which has opposed compulsory consription of whites into the South African Defense Forces and deployment in black areas, indicated it would not oppose the deployments ordered by de Klerk.

The organization said in a statement that given ''the grotesquely distorted political cicrumstances which exist in some areas of the South Africa, it may well be that the lesser of two evils involves using the military to control a state of violent upheaval.''

MARACAIBO, VENEZUELA (APRIL 3) UPI - A 20-year-old Maracaibo woman gave birth Wednesday to Venezuela's first recorded sextuplets - two girls and four boys, all in good health, a hospital spokesman said.

The babies were born early Wednesday to Elaine Paez de Medina in a Caesarean section at the Paraiso Medical Center, where doctors had monitored the woman's unusual pregnancy since her sixth month of gestation the hospital spokesman said.

Doctors Nerio Inciarte and Henry Fuenmayor headed a team of nurses and assistants that performed the operation. The young mother and father, Danilo Medina, 22, an unemployed laborer, have no other children. The couple received congratulations and pledges of support from the Venezuelan government.

President Carlos Andres Perez telephoned the babies' maternal grandmother, Edilia de Paez, and told her to "receive congratulations in my name and in the name of the Venezuelan people, and wishes of all happiness for the children." Perez assured the grandmother that both parents and newborns "could count on the support of the Venezuelan state."

The family also received encouragement Wednesday from the fellow citizens of Maracaibo, a major port city located 200 miles west of Caracas near the Colombian border.

A number of prominent Maracaibo citizens formed a foundation to provide for the children's needs until they reach age 18. Foundation members include Bishop Roberto Lucker Leon, Olga de Chumaceiro, the wife of Maracaibo's mayor, and the director of the Paraiso Medical Center, Sergio Duarte, among others.

The group named the the foundation by the name of the sextuplets' mother, "Elain Paez de Medina." A foundation member said the group will attend to the sextuplets' basic needs in health, education, and clothing, as well as providing counseling and guidance in the children's personal, psychological, spiritual, moral, and physical development.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (APRIL 3) UPI - Armed men kidnapped a senator from Colombia's ruling Liberal Party in the hometown of the Medellin cocaine cartel Tuesday in an apparent resurgence of the drug cartel's violent anti-government campaign.

Medellin Police spokesman Col. Carlos Otalora Ayendano blamed the kidnapping of Sen. Estrada Velez on drug traffickers "because of his statements Sunday against having a dialogue with the narcotics dealers."

The spokesman said Velez's vehicle was intercepted by armed men while he was en route to his office and they drove off with the senator inside. There were no claims of responsibility for the kidnapping.

The incident comes three days after Colombia's notorious drug gang leaders issued a statement saying they would step up violence against the government because officials had turned down a request for a dialogue. The Medellin drug cartel has threatened to set off a five-ton dynamite bomb for each Colombian that is extradited to the United States.

In a sign of the widespread fear caused by the drug cartel violence, the newspaper El Espectador, a leader in the fight against narcotics trafficking, suspended its editorial Tuesday after receiving threats by drug dealers that they will kill members of the Cano family who own the publication. The editorial space was left in blank.

A front-page story said the editorials will resume once President Virgilio Barco returns from a European tour on Apirl 11 and "steps are taken to guarantee human life and freedom of expression." Despite threats of violence, government sources said they were continuing to process requests for extradition of suspected drug traffickers.

One official said the Justice Department has delivered notification to a federal deputy, Jacobo Mendez, of the Social Conservative Party, that he has 28 days to appeal his extradition to Puerto Rico, where he is wanted on a charge of trafficking in marijuana. The official said Mendez Campo had 28 days to appeal the extradition.

Authorities said that they have delivered a similar notification to Luis Cabarcas Acosta, whose extradition has been requested by a U.S. federal court in North Carolina.

In related violence, authorities said six police officers have been killed in the Department of Antioquia, an administrative district that includes Medellin, in the past two days in clashes with armed bands believed linked to drug gangs. Their deaths bring to 48 the number of uniformed police that have been killed this year in Antioquia.

In the latest incident, unidentified gunmen attacked a patrolling police squad with submachine guns in Medellin Tuesday, wounding three policemen, officials said. Police Chief Col. Carlos Otalora attributed the latest attacks to drug traffickers, who he said are offering assasins bounties of more than $4,000 for each policeman killed.

On Monday, two guards were slain at the private home of the police chief of Bello, a municipality near Medellin, authorities said. Two assailants were killed in a clash with a police patrol.

Bello police chief Maj. Silvio Ballesteros, who has been leading an offensive against armed bands hired by drug lords, was not at home during the attack.

PITTSBURGH (APRIL 3) UPI - National Intergroup Inc. launched Tuesday a new attack against dissident stockholders attempting to seize control of the company's board, as the company's second largest shareholder joined Centaur Partners in court to overturn National Intergroup's ''poison pill'' takeover defenses.

In a letter to shareholders, National Intergroup said the principals of Centaur, the largest shareholder, ''have been accused of swindling their friends and associates and have been the subject of several investigations.''

The company urged stockholders to support National Intergroup's current restructuring program and reject Centaur's takeover attempt. The investor group has said it will liquidate the company and distribute proceeds to shareholders if it wins control.

The firm, whose interests include the FoxMeyer drug distribution chain and 50 percent of National Steel Corp., has lost money from continuing operations for six consecutive years.

Centaur's principals ''have no proven track record in running a large, diversified public company,'' National Integroup said, urging stockholders to ''take a closer look at the people behind Centaur's efforts.''

''The activities of the principals of Centaur have resulted in proceedings relating to violations of securities laws and (National Association of Securities Dealers) rules,'' the letter also alleged.

Meanwhile, the company's second-largest stockholder, Walker Street Associates LP, told the Securities and Exchange Commission it filed suit in Delaware Chancery Court to increase its ownership of National Intergroup beyond 10 percent, the level at which the company's recently amended poison pill would be activated.

A poison pill allows current stockholders to buy new shares at discount when outstanding stock is offered, making a takover prohibitively expensive. National Intergroup's directors in January lowered the point at which the poison pill takes effect from 20 percent to 10 percent.

National Intergroup ''has used the 1990 pill to stack the deck in favor of management for the foreseeable future,'' Walker Street said in its suit.

(APRIL 3) UPI - President Bush is winding up a two-day political trip with a visit to Indianapolis, where he's planting a tree and appearing at a G-O-P fund-raiser. In remarks prepared for the tree-planting, Bush said trees ''are the sanctuaries of mankind, renewing and refreshing.'' Later today, he is to speak at a fund-raiser for Indiana Senator Dan Coats.

Teen-age AIDS victim Ryan White is in critical condition in an Indianapolis hospital, and doctors say they are hopeful he will recover from a respiratory infection. President Bush and former President Reagan offered prayers for the 18-year-old. White gained wide attention in 1986 when he won a battle to be allowed to return to school.

The treatments that first lady Barbara Bush have undergone for Graves' disease apparently are working. She said today that her condition is better and she NO longer suffers from double vision. Mrs. Bush underwent radiation treatment in February for the disease, a thyroid condition that affects vision.

Local officials in Pennsylvania are lifting water use restrictions as a massive oil spill dilutes and moves down the Allegheney River. But officials urge conservation until the slick vanishes by next week. 200-thousand gallons of diesel fuel and gasoline leaked from a ruptured pipeline last Friday... creating the 40-mile trail.
